Commons Stormy.

By Joseph Driscoll.

London, June 30.—The century-old struggle in this country between Parliament and the Crown on issues of free speech and free press was renewed today in the House of Commons in a stirring controversy which may have far-reaching effects upon the future of British democracy and the life of the Chamberlain government.

Particular objects of attack today were three leading ministers of the Crown—Prime Minister Chamberlain, War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha, and Attorney General Sir Donald Somervell. Arrayed against these representatives of the executive branch of the government were all the Labor and Liberal M. P.'s as well as an influential group of Conservatives captained by Winston Churchill. Again and again Chamberlain and his associates were warned their overzealous application of the Official Secrets Act was undermining the traditional freedom of speech and press and paving the way for totalitarian ideology, in which personal liberty would count for little.

The important controversy revolves around an obscure young

Strike Likelihood In District Transit Appears Smaller

Likelihood of a strike vote dimmed today as between 1,500 and 1,600 employes of the Capital Transit Co. met in the Masonic Temple at Thirteenth street and New York avenue to consider means of arbitrating a wage scale agreement with the management.

John H. Cookman, business agent of the union, and other employe leaders said that while they could not predict the outcome of the meeting, which was still in session at 1 a. m., they did not expect strike action to be taken.

Cookman, who represents Division 689 of the Amalgamated Street and Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America, said he did not believe the dispute had reached the point of calling a strike.

The issue is selection of a third person to sit in on a committee of arbitration to draft a scale of wages.

McCormick's Body Found

By the Associated Press.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., June 30.—A body, believed to be that of missing Medill McCormick, Chicago publishing heir, was found tonight on a cliff, north of Sandia Peak.

McCORMICK.

A statement issued by Frank C. W. Pooler, United States regional forester, said:

"While positive identification has not been made, it has been established with practical certainty that a body found early this afternoon on a cliff north of Sandia Peak is the body of Medill McCormick.

"The discovery was made by an organized crew of Isleta and Sandia Indians, under the leadership of Marion Peace, of the United States Indian Service, while working in close proximity to a Forest Service searching party.

'Literature Is Everywhere,' He Tells McNaboe Committee.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, June 30.—Earl Browder, the Kansas-born general secretary of the Communist Party in the United States, admitted today that the party maintains units or "cells" in hospitals, colleges, schools, city and State government buildings and in home relief stations in New York. He added, "Our literature and newspapers penetrate almost everywhere."

For the second successive day Browder was the main witness before the joint legislative committee on the administration and enforcement of the law, meeting here. State Senator John J. McNaboe, chairman, drew from Browder the expressed hope that the headquarters of the Communist International might some day be in New York rather in Moscow.

Browder discussed at length the place of the Communist Party in American political and social life. He denied he ever received any direct orders from Stalin, but admitted he was guided largely by the Soviet dictator's utterances.

Senator McNaboe produced a mass of circulars and publications distributed by the party and asked Browder about them. He said the literature was "authentic" party propaganda. Browder said the institutions in which the party maintained units included Bellevue and Morrisania hospitals, Teachers College of Columbia University, the College of the City of New York, Brooklyn College, Evander Childs High School, the State office building at 80 Centre street, the Municipal Building, the Home Relief District Office No. 59 and Cornell University at Ithaca, N. Y.

Merit System Raids Feared By Babcock

Expert Says 'Fast Ball' Was Put Over on the President.

Spends Hours Comparing Executive Order to Previous Rules.

E. Claude Babcock, former secretary of the Civil Service Commission, now president of the Federal Personnel Association, said last night that President Roosevelt's recent executive orders have paved the way for a "rape of the merit system."

For three hours, Babcock sat with his association members and compared paragraph by paragraph the executive order of June 24—which blankets 130,000 Federal employes in the civil service—with the old rules. Then he said:

"Apparently somebody has thrown several fast balls past the President in the new compilation of the civil service rules. The way is open for the biggest rape of the merit system since the civil service act was passed."

At this juncture, Babcock had made his camparison down to Rule 5 and called for a meeting at 8 o'clock next Thursday to consider the remainder of the voluminous and involved document.

"Door Is Opened."

When the meeting adjourned, the association president continued: "Those Federal employes who attended the meeting tonight appeared to be unanimously of the opinion that the insertion of section 3 of file 2, a new section, opens the door through which all the horses may be stolen.

"This new section permits applicants who meet every written requirement to be excluded from the competition behind closed doors, and without any public opportunity for anybody to find out whether the exclusion was fair or not. I don't think that the intention was necessarily criminal or anything like that, but somebody apparently wanted to permit the Commission to rate fewer than all the applicants.

"It is true that rating costs, but the rating of all the applicants is one of the fundamental guarantees of the fairness of civil-service practice, he went on.

"Of course," they will say that the rule provides for a preliminary examination, but this doesn't mean any more than a riffle of the application should there be haste in making up the register—and it isn't impossible should there be a desire to eliminate some of the embarassing competition," he said.

Babcock reflected a moment. "I think I should add that I am very happy to see the extension of the merit system, although I am sorry that the extension covered such major changes in the rules as to de-

3,000 Businessmen Face Arrest Today For Privilege Tax

Three thousand Washington business and professional operators who failed to obtain a business-privilege tax license will face arrest today if they continue their business, it was disclosed last night.

A systematic checkup will be launched immediately by police to roundup all violators of the law. A. F. Brooke, administrator of the business privilege tax, said last night the operators may be fined $300 a day for each day they continue to do business without the license.

All places of business in the District must display a license for the fiscal year 1939, since yesterday marked the close of the fiscal year 1938.

1,883 Blues and Grays 'Battle' Anew at Gettysburg Today

By Marshall Andrews.
A Staff Correspondent.

Gettysburg, Pa., June 30.—Pennsylvania's capital moved temporarily to Gettysburg tonight when Gov. George H. Earle moved into town behind his glittering escort. Preparations to receive him with the thunder of 19 guns and much military fanfare were discarded two hours earlier when he notified officials he would be late.

Forerunner of a long roster of notables, including President Roosevelt, Gov. Earle tomorrow at 2 p. m. will open formally the four days of Gettysburg's celebration of the battle fought here 75 years ago.

Among his audience will be veterans of both old armies, the Gray, which vainly tried to storm the heights south of the town, and the Blue, which stood firm against the furious attacks.

Up to noon today, 1,883 veterans had arrived with their attendants and were housed in the two tent cities astride the Mummasburg road. On the Confederate side of the road were 486 ancients; on the Union side were 1,397.

Among them was a veteran from Washington. The vanguard of four expected from the District, he is Peter Smith, Confederate.

Smith was here those tragic four days in July, 1863, and remembers them well. Ninety-five now, he was

Making forbidden U turn on Seventeenth street.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Hold your hats and hang on tight—we're going out to do a bit of driving in Washington traffic.

A ride behind the motorman of a Capital Transit street car was like a ride in the Old Mill at Glen Echo compared to yesterday's traffic tour behind the steering wheel of an auto.

Although the District's accident record has shown a marked improvement in recent months, there are still those —motorists and pedestrians—with suicidal tendencies, to wit:

No. 2 in a Series

The elderly man in an expensive limousine who nearly sent his car to the junk heap and himself to the hospital—or morgue—by swerving suddenly in a "U" turn on downtown Seventeenth street.

He didn't stop for anything—not even a hand signal. The screech of brakes could be heard for blocks as long lines of heavy traffic jolted to a stop.

The sleek limousine was broadside to traffic before its heedless driver realized he couldn't complete the turn. So he backed up—right into another line of moving traffic.

All this, it developed, was for the sake of a parking space on the opposite side of the street.

Another member of Washington's "suicide brigade," in the center of Connecticut avenue, not far from the Mayflower Hotel, stepped from the curb into the rush-hour traffic jam.

Not until he reached the street car tracks did this "devil may care" pedestrian become alarmed, then, in sudden panic, he darted into the line of moving cars, dodged with the combined skill of a football player and bull fighter, escaped injury by inches and finally leaped to the opposite curb.

He turned around and grinned before continuing on his way.

An excavation at Connecticut avenue and K street appears to defeat any safety preachings.

Extending far out into the line of traffic, the District Government project forces vehicles to drive directly through a safety zone. Two autos collided here yesterday as pedestrians in the safety zone scattered to cover.

Razing Slums In D.C. Likely To Begin Soon

U. S. Authority to Consider Applications for 12 Projects at Once.

Early evacuation for a vast system of low-cost housing developments in the District appeared likely yesterday as United States Housing Authority officials pledged immediate consideration of the Alley Dwelling Authority's request that $18,146,287 be earmarked for loans to finance 12 local projects.

Plans submitted yesterday by the Alley Dwelling Authority were understood to involve accommodation for approximately 3,500 low-income families. Three projects contemplate slum clearance, according to John Ihlder, executive officer of the ADA, while outlying land, most of it now vacant, would be used for the other nine.

If the United States Housing Authority approves proposals of the ADA, the two agencies will open

'Anti-Gin' Ruling Keeps Marriages Here at Low Ebb

Washington's "anti-gin marriage" law is driving away business from the office of the District Court clerk, it was disclosed yesterday.

A tabulation of marriage licenses issued for the month of June disclosed the lowest record since 1917. Only 626 applications for licenses were received, the clerk reported, as against 991 for June last year.

Maud Rynex, marriage license clerk, explained that many romantically inclined couples from out of the city turn away without making applications when they are informed they have to wait three days for a license.

The three-day notice act became effective last fall. It was sponsored by Representative Virginia E. Jenckes (Democrat), of Indiana, who said she wanted to put a stop to "gin marriages."

Vote-Buyers Betray Party, Walsh Warns

By Robert C. Albright.

In what he called a "lecture" to office holders, Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, last night denounced any agency or officer of the Administration who uses Federal funds to influence votes as "a traitor to President Roosevelt and the Democratic Party."

"I can not conceive of anything more harmful to the success of the Democratic cause, both in the approaching and in future elections, than to have the solemn obligation imposed upon it of extending relief in this dire emergency prostituted with political favoritism and pressure politics," Walsh said in a statement.

He said his remarks were not aimed at any one official, but were prompted by Deputy Works Progress Administrator Aubrey Williams "going out and making that kind of a speech." Williams told a delegation of organized relief workers Monday they must "keep our friends in power."

Transcript Studied.

Prior to his statement, the Senate campaign investigating committee, which called the Williams incident "unfortunate," yesterday examined a transcript of the Williams speech and decided not to alter its former expression of disapproval. Walsh said they decided it did not "excuse or mitigate" the Williams case. He said he did not regard the case as "closed."

Chairman Sheppard meanwhile announced committee approval of a nine-point questionnaire that will be forwarded promptly to all candidates in senatorial elections. It seeks information on any known violations of the Federal corrupt practices act, data on "coercion" of voters or use of public funds or political patronage to aid any candidate.

Question Is Asked.

"Do you know," asked one of the questions, "of any specific instance in which any person receiving compensation from the Federal Government has been intimidated or coerced, or in which any attempt has been made to intimidate or coerce such a person in any manner designed to effect the result of any primary, convention or election in behalf of your candidacy for the United States Senate?"

Taxi Association Ban Lifted to Cut Cost of Insurance

In permitting taxicab operators again to form new associations the commission had in mind an item in the taxicab liability insurance law which permits a blanket policy, not to exceed $75,000, to cover any corporation or association.

Richmond Keech, vice chairman of the commission, explained the commission did not want to produce any hardship on the small companies and independent drivers who would have to pay a rate estimated at $300 for insurance. In an association, a driver may pay as little as $75.

'Perfect Butler,' Now Convict, Effects Only Imperfect Escape

John Morcischek, the "perfect butler" who went to Lorton Reformatory on a $300,000 gem theft charge, there to become the perfect prisoner, was back in his cell last night after an imperfect prison break.

A "trusty" at Lorton, Morcischek yesterday fled in a coupe belonging to Dr. F. R. Klune, reformatory physician to whose office he was assigned.

The dignity which once blended with the fashionable homes Morcischek served in New York and Washington was severely tested when a Fairfax County police officer stopped the prisoner on Little River pike and jerked out his shirt-tail to identify the Lorton undergarment beneath.

At the time of his seizure the convict was a passenger in the car of Bodie Knupp, Fairfax gas station attendant, who was giving him a lift from Fairfax, where Dr. Klune's machine broke down at a busy intersection.

Informed that the repairs would take an hour, Morcischek abandoned the car. Previously he had sat in the stalled coupe ten minutes while several Fairfax police strolled by, not aware of his escape. News of his escape was delayed by Morcischek's maneuver of cutting telephone wires in the Klune home, where disappearance of the "trusty" and car were noted simultaneously.

Morcischek was captured 4 miles

Stock Exchange's First Paid Head

WILLIAM McC. MARTIN.

Reform Leader Is Given Post Over 200 Prominent Candidates.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 30.—Taking Wall street completely by surprise, the New York Stock Exchange today chose 31-year-old William McChesney Martin, jr., as its first paid president, passing over a list of 200 names which included prominent men in New York banking, education, business and the law.

Climaxing a month-long drive for internal reform in the Nation's No. 1 securities market, in the course of which Martin, a member, had occupied the nonsalaried position of chairman of the exchange, and was its acting president, the young St. Louis broker was lifted into office on less than 24 hours' notice by a unanimous vote of the exchange governors.

To comply with the constitution of the exchange, Martin announced his retirement from the St. Louis brokerage firm of A. G. Edwards & Sons, and arranged to sell his "seat" on the exchange here.

Harding Chairman.

The office of chairman will revert to Charles B. Harding, of the New York firm of Smith, Barney & Co., who becomes "acting" chairman. Securities and Exchange Commissioner John W. Hanes was formerly a partner in Harding's firm. The nominating committee has the right to suggest a candidate for successor to Martin as chairman, but need not do so. No decision had been reached immediately as to the committee's course.

As president, Martin will receive $48,000 annual salary and become the first such paid head of the market since trading started under the buttonwood tree in Wall street 146 years ago.

That his selection was definitely pointed to spotlight the exchange's determination to work out methods of "living" within Federal regulation was indicated in the fact the public announcement made by the exchange was accompanied by a signed communication to Martin from William O. Douglas, chairman of the SEC.

It referred to "your courage and ability to bring about expeditious action toward the objectives which Roosevelt Speaks.

By the Associated Press

New York, June 30.—President Roosevelt condemned the burning of libraries, the exiling of scientists, writers and musicians and the censoring of news, literature and art in an address today to members of the National Education Association at the World's Fair site.

He made two speeches in New York and then returned to his Hyde Park home.

Without naming any country, he said such things turn back "the clock of civilization." But there was no doubt he referred to Nazi Germany.

"If the fires of freedom and civil liberties burn low in other lands," he said, "they must be made brighter in our own.

"If in other lands the press is censored, we must redouble our efforts to keep it free.

Sees Truth Threatened.

"If in other lands the eternal truths of the past are threatened by intolerance, we must provide a safe place here for their perpetuation."

"There may be times when men and women in the turmoil of change lose touch with the civilized gains of centuries of education," the President continued, "but the gains of education are never really lost."

He warned the Nation that, in a world where there are dictatorships, the burden of preserving human enlightenment is "placed upon the countries where the torch of free thought and free learning still burns bright."

"Books may be burned and cities sacked, but truth, like the yearning for freedom, lives in the hearts of humble men and women.

"The ultimate victory of tomorrow is with democracy, and through democracy with education, for no people can be kept eternally ignorant or eternally enslaved."

He declared for State and local control of schools and their curricula with the Federal Government supplementing only the resources of the poorer communities.

Declares Against War.

Earlier, the President made a new declaration against war and reiterated the policy of the good neighbor as a model for the rest of the world in helping lay the cornerstone of the fair's $3,000,000 Federal project.

Thirty-five motorcycle patrolmen accompanied the President's 10-car motorcade. A guard of honor of 2,000 Boy Scouts lined both sides of his route from the main gate of the fair grounds to the Federal project area where 300 Regular Army men and 400 policemen were on duty.

Before returning to Hyde Park, the President visited Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf of Sweden who is ill in Medical Center.

Mr. Roosevelt traveled in his open car over a mile of dusty road to tell thousands of teachers here for the NEA convention:

"The only real capital of a nation is its natural resources and its human beings. So long as we take care of and make the most of both of them, we shall survive as a strong nation, a successful nation and a

Ickes Wields PWA Club Over San Francisco

Funds Refused Until City Establishes Its Own Power Plant.

Harold L. Ickes, Public Works Administrator, served notice, in effect, on the city of San Francisco yesterday that $100,000,000 in local PWA construction projects would be held up indefinitely unless the city established a municipally-owned power distribution system, displacing the local private utility.

From the standpoint of Ickes, the waving of this club over the heads of the city fathers was to produce compliance with an order of the Federal District Court in San Francisco and his own ruling as to the disposal of the electricity which the city generates at its Hetch Hetchy reservoir in the Sierra Nevada mountains.

Under the Raker act of 1913 making Federal lands available to the city's use in building this reservoir Ickes and recently the Federal Court held that the city cannot sell this power to the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. for distribution in San Francisco. They construe the law as requiring a public ownership system.

Proposition Voted Down.

The issue brought back to the forefront of the Washington stage the matter of Federal encouragement to inroads upon the private utility industry. The issue is the more marked because a proposal for acquiring a public power system was turned down in a popular referendum in San Francisco a year ago. On six earlier occasions, between 1925 and 1937, the same kind of proposal was defeated.

But Ickes' friends maintain that his object is in line not only with the Raker, act, but with the recent pledge of Senate Leader Alben W. Barkley. The latter promised that new PWA funds for power purposes would be confined to letting cities purchase utility properties at a fair price and would not be for duplication purposes. There is a city proposal pending for another bond issue referendum to buy out the Pacific Gas & Electric. What Ickes apparently wants is absolute assurance from the municipal authorities that they will work for it actively and push it to enactment this time, thus making a purchase possible.

The situation was disclosed yesterday when inquiries from the West Coast city brought out that San Francisco, almost alone among the cities of the country, had received not a single PWA allotment in the last week of wholesale distribution of Federal coin. Yet the city had $100,000,000 of projected construction pending before the PWA.

Ickes revealed that on Wednesday he had sent this telegram to Mayor Angelo J. Rossi, of San Francisco:

"In considering all applications for funds the PWA must determine the financial feasibility of each project and the legal and financial ability of the applicant to provide the non-Federal funds necessary for the project. Such determination cannot be made without full knowledge of all projects and expenditures contemplated by any applicant or which an applicant is obligated to undertake."

Information Lacking.

"Such determinations as to San Francisco's applications are obstructed by lack of definite information as to what course the city proposes to follow in complying with the decree of the United States Court in the Hetch Hetchy litigation and in fulfilling its legal obligations under the Raker Act. May I be fully advised on that matter?"

Orally Ickes declared yesterday that all PWA allotments to the city would be held up until the city complied with the Federal Court decision. Said the administrator, confessing to a Pollyanna mood, "I feel PWA owes it to the city to help it obey its obligations under the Raker Act."

Ickes' effective PWA club put him one up on the District Court. In its order May 18 last it remarked, "The United States has no plain, speedy or adequate remedy at law" for the city's failure to comply with the Raker act. Ickes' action was taken to suggest he had found the remedy.

The court held that although the city under its contract with the private utility regulates the retail price of the power, gets an accounting of all sales and takes 27 per cent of the returns made by the company, or over $2,000,000 a year, this does not comply with the 1913 Raker act. This act prohibits the city from selling to any corporation the right to sell or sublet the electric energy produced at Hetch Hetchy with the aid of Federal grant of rights of way across Federal land.

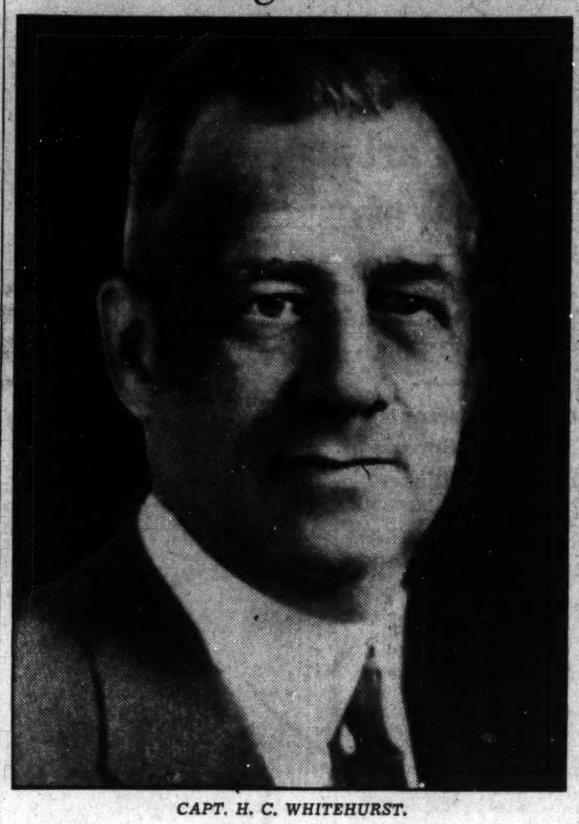
Whitehurst Says New Bridge Is the Toughest Task Ahead



CAPT. H. C. WHITEHURST.

By Christine Sadler

For all its tree-shaded and white-marbled exterior, the little District of Columbia has a frontier side to its nature. It's a side best known to such officials as Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

When Capt. Whitehurst looks at the District he sees 400 miles of highways yet to be opened up, right within the city limits, and numerous river bridges needed. Considering that the District has only 860 miles of improved highways at present, the 400 miles "on paper" denote a construction immaturity rarely realized.

The largest job before Capt. Whitehurst's department is the $2,000,000 Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, which will be started in August and finished within 2½ years.

Sharing in U. S. Aid.

Even without the bridge, the District is entering a year of increased highway building. For the first time it is sharing equally with the States in the regular Federal aid for highways and will continue to participate in the Federal-aid program.

Construction of major highways is a big part of the present activity. Examples of the work being done can be found along Nichols and Branch Avenues in the Southeast, Loroborough road in the Northwest, and along the major portion of Blair road.

In the past two or three years important work has been done by the department in elimination of railroad crossings. Plans are about ready, Capt. Whitehurst says, for elimination of the last main line crossing within the District.

Plans are being prepared for the separation of traffic at K street and Rock Creek Parkway and for the underpass at Thomas Circle. A bypass for Georgetown traffic and a grade separation at Fourteenth and Water streets still are in the study stage.

Aim to Speed Traffic.

"We have a large program initiated and are doing everything we can to facilitate the movement of traffic and to insure the maximum safety conditions. Work for safety probably highlights our present activities," Capt. Whitehurst says.

As he sees it, the question of safety on the highways is a triangular one. The highway, the human element and the vehicle are the triangle sides.

Capt. Whitehurst has been in charge of District highways for 13 years. He is a native of Richmond and in the World War served in the Army as a captain.

He is past president of the American Road Builders Association, a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, a member of the Washington Board of Trade and a director of the American Society of Military Engineers. Baseball is his chief and major hobby. The season is looking fine to him because his youngest daughter has developed into a real fan who knows all the rules.

On Monday—Judge Fay L. Bentley, of the Washington Juvenile Court, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Rise in Stocks Brings Hope of Lower Deficit

By the Associated Press.

The upward sweep of stock market prices encouraged Treasury officials to hope last night that next year's deficit might be smaller than they had expected.

The accumulation of that deficit will begin today, when the fiscal year 1939 begins. A sharp business upturn by fall, predicted by certain Governmental and private economists, would mean sharply increased tax collections to offset some of the funds to be disbursed in the Administration's lending-spending program.

But even so, the Treasury's rosiest expectations could not envision a deficit as low as that of the fiscal year which closed last night. With the transactions of the last two days still to be added in, it stood at $1,434,000,000, the smallest since 1931.

By contrast, a deficit of $3,000,000,000 to $3,500,000,000 has been estimated unofficially for the coming year. How much these figures might be reduced by better business, Treasury officials would not say until measurably better business arrives.

But, better business means an attack upon the deficit from two directions. It piles up receipts from income taxes, capital gains taxes, excise taxes and other levies; and it theoretically reduces unemployment and curtails the need for expenditures for relief.

This double attack upon an unbalanced budget furnished the basis for President Roosevelt's fiscal policy for several years. In one speech, in fact, he pictured it as two lines on a business graph, a line for expenditures starting high and descending and a line for Government receipts starting low and rising. He foresaw a point at which they would cross.

Expenditures Lower.

The new depression which began late last year, however, reversed both trends. Receipts began to fall off. The President called for a new lending-spending program and more than $5,000,000,000 was authorized.

For the year closing last night, (lacking two days), expenditures totaled $7,648,000,000, against $8,055,000,000 in the same period a year ago. Of these, $2,152,000,000 were for "recovery and relief" this year and $3,064,000,000 last year. Receipts were $6,214,000,000 this year and $5,265,000,000 last.

This year's deficit of $1,434,000,000 was scarcely more than half of the $2,790,000,000 figure of last year. The public debt increased $696,000,000 this year and $2,618,000,000 last. When business closed on June 28, it totaled $37,121,000,000.

The Gallup Poll

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, June 30.—President Roosevelt's recent fireside chat contained one piece of political strategy which is notably in line with public opinion.

George Gallup

Preparatory to his swing through the West, the President declared he would not oppose a candidate in a Democratic primary merely because of that candidate's vote "on any single issue"—meaning, according to most observers, his vote on the Supreme Court plan last year. Of more importance, said the President, is the candidate's "general attitude toward present-day problems."

A survey of opinion shows that if the President were to base his party purge on the court issue alone, it might have the effect of a boomerang. A sizable majority of voters in his own party, according to the survey, think he should not try to defeat Democratic Senators who were against him on the court bill.

The study was conducted by the Institute among voters in all States. They were asked: "Do you think the Roosevelt Administration should try to defeat in the primary elections Democratic Senators who opposed the President's plan to enlarge the Supreme Court?"

The vote of Democrats was:

YES	31%
NO	69%

The comment made most frequently by voters on the majority side was that "Senators have a right to their own opinions and should voice them." Among Democrats who on the other hand favor a purge of the court plan foes, the general tenor of comments was "the New Deal needs a united front."

Sentiment Found Uniform.

The survey found no great difference of opinion by geographical sections. Democrats in the South voted approximately two to one against a purge of the anticourt bill Senators. In the Mid-West and Far West—sections through which Roosevelt will travel on his tour—sentiment was also two to one opposed.

Past Vote Recalled.

During the court fight last year the Institute conducted many surveys of opinion on the President's enlargement plan. The attitude of Democratic voters was roughly this: while fair-sized majority approved the President's plan, they did not favor its revival after the Senate had shelved the bill and, by a vote of three to one, they opposed any reprisals against Senators who had gone against the Administration. As today's survey shows, this sentiment against reprisals has continued to the present time.

Registration Warning Given Absentee Voters

West Virginia absentee voters are being notified by the Democratic Absentee Voters Bureau, 1406 G street northwest, that registration has to be completed by July 6 and that they may vote by mail in the primary July 5 and 23.

It was stated by the bureau those failing to register before the primary may do so between October 17 and 18.

Fungicide Vaporizer Described by Merrill

The Department of Agriculture has developed a vaporizer for applying fungicides and insecticides to various crops which is adapted from high pressure equipment used commercially in cleaning brick and stone buildings.

R. M. Merrill, of the Bureau of Agricultural Engineering, described the new method yesterday in an address before the American Society of Agricultural Engineers at Asilomar, Calif. He reported encouraging results in treatment of apple scab, peach leaf curl, cherry leaf spot and other fungus diseases.

Docket Is Cleared Of War Risk Cases

45,000 Tons Set as Warship Size in Pacific

London Parley Gives U. S. Privilege; England to Use Lower Limit.

Agreement by the United States, Great Britain and France to increase the size of battleships to 45,000 tons, effective in protocol in London yesterday, under the provisions of the 1936 Naval Treaty, gives the American Navy what it has been extremely anxious to have to meet suspected Japanese naval construction.

Since Great Britain has stated the two capital ships provided for in its current year's estimate will not exceed 40,000 tons and has promised to notify of any intention to build larger craft, yesterday's agreement means two seperate yardsticks have been adopted, one for Europe and one for the Pacific. In effect, the United States at any time, under its capital ship replacement or Navy expansion programs, may lay 45,000-ton ships, as the situation in the Pacific requires.

President Roosevelt and his leading naval advisers have decided to put acquisition of numbers ahead of acquisition of larger ships. All six of the new battleships for which Congress has provided initial funds are to be roughly of the 35,000-ton type, for which designs are completed.

Designs for the 45,000-ton dreadnaughts, which already are under way but may take six months or more to complete, will be speeded up.

A State Department release accompanying the text of the protocol said that "following the refusal of Japan to furnish information with regard to its naval construction, or its plans for future construction, the powers parties to the London Naval Treaty of 1936—that is, the United States, Great Britain and France—mutually reached the decision to depart from the limits of the treaty in the battleship category.' It goes on to announce the new size of 45,000 tons and retention of the 16-inch limit on the size of guns for battleships.

Japan Belligerent.

Tokyo (Friday), July 1 (U.P.).—The newspaper Asahi Shimbun reported today the Japanese navy considers the action of Great Britain, the United States and France in invoking the escalator clause of the 1936 London naval treaty as designed to enable the United States to build 45,000-ton warships in order to conduct transpacific operations against Japan.

"Japan already has prepared to meet the situation arising from the building by Britain and the United States," the newspaper said.

French, 35,000 Tons.

Paris, June 30 (AP).—The foreign office announced tonight France would restrict future battleships to 35,000 tons, despite signature of a three-power agreement on a new 45,000-ton upper limit. The announcement specified France would observe the 35,000-ton limit only as long as no other European power exceeded it.

Labor Spy Blame Is Placed on U. S.

London, June 30 (U.P.).—British trade union leaders, conferring with President Roosevelt's Commission on Labor Relations, today accused American industrialists of extending "labor spy" and strike-breaking systems to their subsidiary plants in Great Britain.

Labor espionage and "scabbing" activities were virtually unknown in Great Britain except in American controlled industrial plants, the trade unionists said.

Turrou Fired When He Quit, G-Men Admit

Was Dismissed for Violating Oath of Confidence, F. B. I. Affirms.

Leon G. Turrou, one of the FBI investigators of Nazi spy ring activities that brought indictments for 18 persons in New York recently, was dismissed "with prejudice" on the same day he resigned to write of his work, the Department of Justice admitted last night.

Department officials said the action had been taken on the ground that Turrou violated an oath taken in 1935 not to divulge confidential information "to persons not officially entitled thereto."

Turrou's resignation had been received here almost simultaneously with announcement in New York that he had contracted to write a series of articles based on the espionage investigations. In the absence of Attorney General Cummings, First Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan refused to accept it. The FBI said last night a letter of notification of dismissal had been mailed to the agent June 25.

Dismissal, officials said, will prevent Turrou from returning to the FBI should be desire reinstatement.

Turrou's articles will not be released until after the espionage trial of four persons now under arrest in this country under an agreement filed in the Federal District Court in New York yesterday.

"Not Aware," Says Turrou.

Philadelphia, June 30 (U.P.).—Leon G. Turrou said in a statement issued here tonight that he was not aware of the nature of a statement he signed forbidding him to write of his activities as a Federal Bureau of Investigation agent.

Spy Witness Freed.

New York, June 30 (AP).—Christian Danielson, 60, one-armed naval draftsman of Bath, Me., a material witness in the Government's spy investigation, was released today in $5,000 bail. He had been in custody since June 3.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Friday), July 1.—China's highest military commanders gathered in the headquarters of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek in Wuchang, opposite Hankow, today to discuss the desperate military situation created by Japan's impending investment of the provisional national capital and its environs.

New peace rumors were circulated in the British crown colony of Hongkong in the south where the British, Swedish, Swiss, German and Italian ambassadore were holding informal conversations pending their possible removal to Yunnan, new Chinese provisional capital to which the Chinese foreign office soon will be removed from Hankow.

Staff Divided.

A spokesman for the British Ambassador, Sir Archibald Kerr, refused to confirm reports the diplomats were considering recommendations to their home governments on the possibility of international efforts at mediation but would not deny them specifically.

A refugee train from Hankow carrying 250 Occidentals, including a number of Americans, reached Canton safely at 1 p. m. yesterday. Japanese planes stopped bombing the Hankow-Canton railway during its trip.

In the Western Lunghai Railway area Japanese were advancing rapidly and were reported closing in on strategic Loyang.

Japan's Trade Falls.

Tokyo, (Friday), July 1 (AP).—The finance ministry reported today Japan had an unfavorable foreign trade balance of $56,776,200 during the first six months of this year.

France Makes Turkish Pact on Syrian Region

By John Elliott.

Paris, June 30.—An agreement has been reached between France and Turkey on the subject of the Sanjak (district) of Alexandretta, the terms of which will be made known by French Foreign Minister Bonnett here tomorrow.

Reliable informants here said this accord will mark a complete capitulation on the part of the French government to the Turkish demands. The agreement provides for Turko-French military co-operation in Alexandretta, whereby France and Turkey will provide contingents of equal strength. The French will occupy the southern portion of the Sanjak, and the Turks the northern part, adjacent to their own country.

Turkish troops already massed on the Syrian frontier are expected to move into the Sanjak tonight, with the consent of the French government. The Turkish government has long demanded their troops should enter the Sanjak to protect the interest of the Turkish population.

The second concession made by the French government to Turkey relates to the commission sent out to the district by the League of Nations charged with the task of supervising the elections in that province. Members of that commission, at the peremptory demand of the Turks, supported by the French, have now been recalled by Geneva.

Barbara's Son Court's Ward?

Husband Will Answer in Court to Her Charge of Threats.

By the Associated Press.

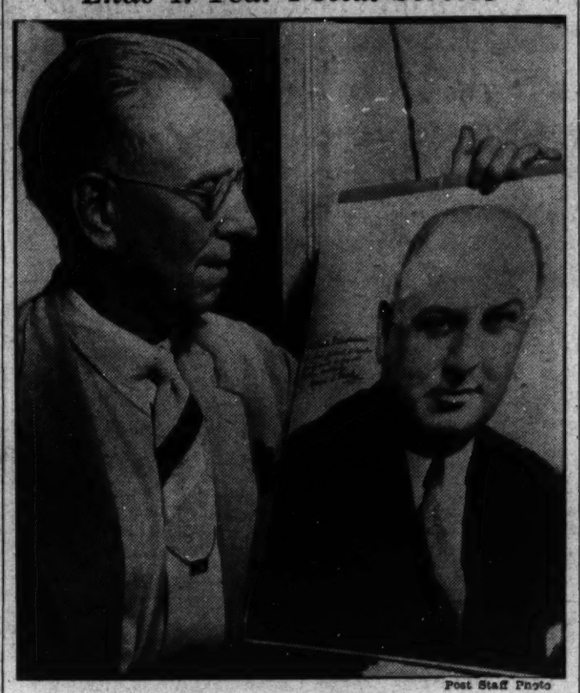
London, June 30.—The infant son and heir of the squabbling Haugwitz-Reventlows was reported tonight to have been made a ward in chancery by his mother as his father traveled to London to face a Bow street police court summons.

BARBARA HUTTON.

Two-year-old Lance Haugwitz-Reventlow, under the reported move, would be under control of the court until he reaches 21. Neither his father, Count Court Haugwitz-Reventlow, nor his mother, Countess Barbara, American-born Woolworth heiress, could make a ruling affecting him without action of the court.

The application to place the child in custody of the court was said to have been made today before a master in chambers by Countess Barbara's costly counsel, Sir Patrick Hastings.

Ends 47-Year Postal Service



Post Staff Photo

Charles F. Anderson, who retired yesterday after 47 years' service in the Postoffice Department, proudly holds a photograph bearing this inscription: "To Charles F. Anderson, a fine fellow, a real friend and a loyal public servant. James A. Farley." The Postmaster General personally presented the memento.

Postoffice's Trouble-Shooter Quits After 47 Far-Flung Years

When Charles F. Anderson turns over his commission to Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Smith W. Purdum today he will conclude a 47-year career in the Postoffice Department, during which he has "never lost a day, never, been late, never obtained anything through political influence, traveled some 2,800,000 miles in line of duty (including a trip to the Antarctic), and risen from $39 a month to $3,400 a year."

In honor of his retirement, Anderson was feted at the Postoffice Department by fellow workers yesterday soon after he had returned from a special trip to New York, where Postmaster General Farley gave him an autographed picture.

Anderson probably has seen more of the United States than any other man alive—certainly more than any other employe of the Postoffice Department. A dapper young fellow of 63, he has been a traveling mechanician for 26 years, which means that he has inspected supplies and equipment in 25,000 postoffices throughout the Nation.

Likes Washington Best.

"I've been in every State of the Union many, many times," he reminisced yesterday at his home, 1332 Montague street northwest, where he lives with his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Edgerton. "I've been to practically every first and second class postoffice in the country, and of all the cities in the United States, I think Washington is the best."

Anderson took a trip to Antarctica fours years ago—"all in the line of duty, of course." It seems that on the second Byrd Expedition, the admiral had brought 153,000 letters with him, to be canceled at his South Polar camp. There were too many other things to do, however, so a hurry call was sent out for a postoffice employe to fill the breach.

Anderson was given the assignment, and in the fall of 1934 he set sail for New Zealand, thence to the Byrd camp. "I was there about three months, canceling letters the whole time," he said. "The ink would freeze, so I had to heat the rollers by putting them in a par-boiler. Then we had to take care lest the heat melt our 'postoffice,' which was cut out of ice 20 feet below the surface."

Lived on Seal Meat.

"I had to learn to live on seal meat. And I wouldn't take that job again for all the money in the Treasury!"

On his way to and from the Antarctic, Anderson stopped off at the Fiji Islands, Samoa and other exotic regions. "And what did you do there?" he was asked.

"Visited the postoffices, of course."

And now that Anderson is retired, he says with a laugh that "the hardest thing I have to do is get used to living on $100 a month instead of $300."

Motorists Warned To Respect Laws

Judge Edward M. Curran, of Police Court, speaking yesterday at a meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club, warned District motorists to observe and respect the law.

"Otherwise," he said, "strict penalties will be inflicted by the court."

The traffic problem in Washington, said Judge Curran, is the problem of every auto driver and pedestrian.

Relief

file awaiting any further evidence which may be submitted to the committee."

Took no action on a written explanation by Williams of wage increases in Oklahoma, Kentucky, Virginia and North Carolina. Said it had no complaints of larger increases in these States, and pointed out there is no primary election contest in two of the State (Virginia and North Carolina).

Nye's Wire Pondered.

Took under consideration a second telegram from Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, asking investigation of absentee balloting and alleged double voting in the North Dakota primaries, in which he defeated Gov. William Langer.

Decided to require an oath in all charges that Federal funds have been or are being used to intimidate or coerce voters in senatorial elections.

Senator Walsh, absent when the committee mildly rebuked Williams on Tuesday, returned only yesterday to provide a quorum for yesterday's meeting. Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, was the third member present. It was Walsh who drafted the committee's original resolution admonishing Federal bureaus to "keep hands off" of politics.

At the outset of the statement, Walsh referred to the Williams speech to relief workers. He said it still is before the committee for "consideration" and he did not care to speculate on what the committee will do.

"Indefensible," He Says.

"However," he said, "as a member of the Democratic Party and interested in its success and in the prestige of the good name of the present Administration, I am constrained to say that the use of Federal funds appropriated by Congress for the relief of the destitute and for providing work for the unemployed for political partisan advantage is not only indefensible but shocking to the public conscience."

At one point, Senator Walsh referred to Works Progress Administrator Hopkins' charge yesterday of an "attempt to discredit the Federal works program by wholesale charges of political favoritism backed only by malicious partisan gossip."

"I am not unmindful," said Walsh, "of the fact that unfounded allegations will be made that Federal funds are or will be used to influence votes, but this, in my opinion, is an additional reason why office holders charged with the responsibility of administering these funds should scrupulously avoid, by speech or act, even suspicion of a political motive."

Refers to 1936 Vote.

Walsh said President Roosevelt's large majority in 1936 was largely attributable to the people's approval "of the militant and generous manner in which he extended aid and succor to the millions of unemployed and their families, and a belief upon the part of the American people that this humane task would be done without any ulterior consideration than the welfare of the needy."

To use Federal funds to influence votes, Walsh said, is "un-Christian and un-American" as well as "traitorous."

"If any there be," the Senator concluded, "who suppose that the public conscience is temporarily stunted by the worry, distress and anxiety that present economic conditions have caused, let them not be unmindful of the wrath that an aroused public conscience can exercise when relief or human misery is degraded to gutter politics."

Questioned at a press conference yesterday, Secretary of Interior Ickes said he had no plans now to make any speeches of a political nature, but "I am not saying I won't." Refusing to be drawn into the Williams controversy, he said an official would be "a queer kind of a duck" if he didn't support certain candidates.

What Kind of Duck?

"I am not going to discuss what kind of a duck any Government officer may be," Ickes said. "In my own case, you have to decide for yourselves whether I'm a lame duck, a mallard, or just an old tame duck."

In Richmond, Va., last night, David Lasser, president of the Workers Alliance (before which Williams addressed Monday's remarks), charged an attempt to "muzzle the WPA deputy administrator.

"We not only defend the right of spokesmen for the Administration to address their voices to us, but we demand that they shall," said Lasser.

"So long as the secret ballot and our democracy exists, so long as WPA workers and unemployed have the intelligence to distinguish their friends from their enemies, we will take care of the question of 'coercion and bribery.'"

Hopkins Drafts Reply.

Meanwhile, Works Progress Administrator Hopkins prepared a 15-page answer to a recent series of newspaper articles by Thomas L. Stokes, Scripps-Howard newspaper reporter, on the Kentucky Senatorial campaign. These printed affidavits charged political activities by WPA workers for Senate Majority Leader Barkley, and told of State machine efforts by Gov. A. B. Chandler in opposition to Barkley.

Hopkins' reply, filed with the Senate campaign investigating committee, said "that out of more than a score of cases in which political activity was alleged, only two instances of improper conduct could be found."

As a result of investigation, Hopkins said that two WPA straw bosses had been punished. He named Lee Carden, chief supervisor for the Edmonson County District, who, he said, distributed among WPA workers registration cards designed to procure political information. The other worker named was Cleve Keeney, foreman in the Newport District, who remarked that "the fellows on the job are going to have to support Barkley."

Hopkins said he was convinced that "people will not tolerate the prostitution of public funds appropriated to aid the unemployed. By the same token they will not tolerate attempts to smear public officials who are trying honestly to do their duty."

"We will deal swiftly and summarily with any proven charge of political coercion," the Hopkins statement said, "but we will be equally prompt in exposing any accusations trumped up to serve the political ends of those who are opposed to this Administration."

The nine-point questionnaire approved yesterday by the Senate Campaign Investigating Committee for submission to all Senatorial candidates included four direct questions on the use of Federal funds in campaigns and on coercion of voters. But omitted from the final questionnaire were direct queries as to influence by "officials" or "Government agencies," which had been included in some of the preliminary drafts.

"Have you used any public funds or political patronage in behalf of your nomination or election to the United States Senate?" one of the approved questions asked.

"Have any funds appropriated by Congress been spent with your knowledge or consent in such manner as to influence the result of any primary or convention or the general election in your behalf as a nominee or candidate of election to the United States Senate?"

Roosevelts Tour New York World Fair Site With Mayor

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Something seemed to amuse the President and his party yesterday as they toured the World's Fair site at New York after the President laid the cornerstone of the $3,000,000 Federal building. The President wears a suppression model of his famous smile, while Mrs. Roosevelt and Mayor LaGuardia each react in individual fashion.

The Campaign Questionnaire

Following is the text of a nine-point questionnaire approved yesterday by the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee for submission to all candidates in the Senatorial elections:

No. 1—Have you received from any source any contribution, gift, service or anything else of value in behalf of your nomination or election to the Senate of the United States of..... in the primary or convention or election of 1938? If your answer is Yes, specify in detail below. (Date from whom received, amount or value).

No. 2.—Has any person with your knowledge and consent received any contribution, gift, service or anything else of value in behalf of your nomination or election, etc (as above)?

No. 3—What expenditures or disbursements have you made in behalf of your nomination or election to the United States Senate?

No. 4—Have you made any promise or pledge relative to the appointment or recommendation for appointment of any person to any public or private position or employment for the purpose of providing support in your nomination or candidacy for the United States Senate? progressive nation—whether or not the bookkeepers say other kinds of budgets are from time to time out of balance."

He predicted to teachers assembled at the site of the education building on the fair grounds that history would say his "long-range budget" had been balanced.

Fair officials estimated 25,000 heard the NEA address.

Crown Prince Gustav Adolf of Sweden, arose from his bed today to receive President Roosevelt in a 40-minute visit at Harkness pavilion of the medical center, where the prince is confined with a kidney ailment.

After the call, it was announced Princess Louise would leave for Hyde Park tomorrow to visit the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

An official bulletin issued by Dr. Harald Erneberg, physician-in-ordinary to the crown prince, and Dr. J. Bentley Squier, Wilmington specialist, said:

"The crown prince has been out of bed for a few hours and has had no recurrence of attacks of pain. Otherwise his condition has remained unchanged. He has been able to receive a visit from President Roosevelt."

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, June 30.—Delegates of the National Education Association, meeting here for their seventy-sixth annual convention, concluded the business docket of their four-day session today with a movement to enlist the powerful veterans' lobbies behind their drive for Federal aid for education.

After they heard Daniel J. Doherty, national commander of the Legion, attack criticism of the Legion, they adjourned to the New York World's Fair 1939 grounds, where they were addressed by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and concluded the convention tonight at Madison Square Garden witnessing a demonstration of activities of the police and fire departments.

The drive for the support of the American Legion and "other service organizations having constructive education programs" took the form of a resolution adopted by the representative assembly calling for the appointment of a committee of not more than five members to confer with Legion officials. From another source it was learned that in return for veterans' support of the association's aims the educator groups would back Legion demands before Congress.

Doherty, who denied he had been "gagged" Wednesday night at Madison Square Garden when he was expected to speak, characterized the recent book by Dr. William Gellerman, which described the Legion as a Fascist group, as the "puny product of a small mind" and an "abortive attempt to sabotage the American Legion."

negotiations at once to settle terms of the loan. The Federal agency's advisory staff on land acquisition and architecture would then be available to the local authority, and it is expected that construction could begin within 60 to 90 days.

Meanwhile hopes for speedy realization of another vital phase of the District's $45,000,000 building program were dimmed when Administrator Harold L. Ickes said the Commissioners' application for $18,150,000 in grants and loans for municipal structures has not been filed "in proper form."

Simultaneously the PWA announced that $1,024,650 has been granted the University of Maryland to apply on construction of ten new buildings, additions to six buildings and remodeling of one, at an estimated total cost of $2,277,000.

Ickes severely criticized the District Commissioners for "rushing into print" rather than coming in with their application "as the other communities did." "They may get a lot of publicity out of it," he told his press conference, "but the other cities are getting the projects."

The Administrator's sharply worded replies indicated doubts as to the value of several projects on the Commissioners' list, as well as disapproval of the method of filing.

Referring to the request for funds to build a municipal court building, juvenile court and Gallinger Hospital medical unit, Ickes said, "I am not going to act on those until I know what their program is, as there may be a preference."

Capt. Patrick Tansey, assistant Engineer Commissioner, and Elwood Seal, corporation counsel, conferred yesterday on the steps to be taken in redrafting the District's application to the PWA. Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, refused comment on Ickes' statement, while Commissioners Hazen and Allen were out of town.

Although the full extent of delay to the District-PWA building program was not immediately apparent from yesterday's developments, Ickes warned that allotments for the Capital now "will have to take their turn."

To Benefit Colored.

The later the Commissioners submit their claims, he said, "the longer it is going to be before we can consider their applications even, because other cities are away ahead of them. I have had every disposition to do everything possible for the District of Columbia. I am frank to say that in all instances we have not had the co-operation we are entitled to."

Explaining the Alley Dwelling Authority's loan request, Ihlder pointed out that the present program emphasizes housing for colored families because construction of buildings for other governmental agencies has involved demolition of a number of homes occupied by colored people, without any proportionate increase in construction of new homes for the same race.

Two of the three slum reclamation projects are for colored persons, while seven of the housing developments in outlying sections will be for colored families. The projects range in size from 80 houses to nearly 1,200 on the largest outlying site.

The program was formally approved by all the members of the authority, Commissioner Hazen, Arno B. Cammerer and David Lynn, after discussion of the locations inspected earlier this week.

The allotment for the University of Maryland building program was $110,000 less than that originally approved by the WPA. The difference between costs of labor on relief and under contract accounted for the difference in the two estimates, according to Dr. Harry C. Byrd president of the university.

The provision requiring that 95 per cent of the employment afforded by the project be given to persons on relief rolls had been waived because of a shortage of such labor in Prince Georges County.

Announcing that the university has on hand $1,235,000 to match the PWA grant, Dr. Byrd said he expected part of the construction program to be completed during the next school term.

possible to recover it until late Friday.

"On the basis of present information, it now seems that Medill McCormick's body was found approximately on the opposite side of the cliff from where the body of Richard Whitmer was recovered last Friday."

Climbed in Rockies.

McCormick's income enabled him to indulge his tastes in travel and adventure. Mountain climbing was by no means the least of these hobbies, and he climbed all over the Rockies.

With a lunch, Alpine climbing stocks, knapsacks and sneakers, the two boys started up the mountainside at what was estimated to be around noon.

It must have been some time toward midafternoon that they reached the sheer side of the "shield," a perpendicular cliff near the summit of the peak. It was not long after this time that a mountain storm poured torrents down the peak.

Parked Car Nearby.

Before going up the mountain, the boys parked Whitmer's small car in an arroyo near Juan Tabo Canyon, the only place accessible to the peak for an automobile.

The car, with the boys' effects, was found there a few hours before the discovery of "Dicky" Whitmer's broken body at the foot of the shield.

Both Whitmer and McCormick had climbed before, often together, getting their skill at Fountain Valley School in Colorado Springs under the tutelage of Dr. Frances M. Froelicher, headmaster.

McCormick attended St. Albans School in Washington, D. C., then in 1935 the Fountain Valley School and later the Hun School in New Jersey where he graduated in 1936. A year afterward he traveled in Europe and South America. He returned to his mother's ranch on the outskirts of Albuquerque this spring.

He was interested in writing—"mostly fiction," he often said. He possessed many pictures taken on his travels and intended using them to publish a book.

He was the son of the late Senator Medill McCormick and Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms, who later married Albert Simms of Albuquerque.

Catholic Group Doubts Ideals of Youth Congress

"The hope that American Catholic youth groups will refuse to participate" in the Second World Youth Congress at Vassar College in August was expressed yesterday in a statement by the administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Congress.

The board charged that the meeting "will provide an opportunity for the fostering of irreligion and the promotion of the class hatreds of Sovietism."

"Peace and brotherhood are, indeed, worthwhile objectives, but we are convinced that this proposed 'World Youth Congress' as now directed will not promote such ideals in conformity with principles that are either Catholic or American," the board declared.

"I want to pledge to you our fullest co-operation and our unqualified support in working out the solution to the items of unfinished business which are before us."

As the be-spectacled Martin talked to reporters following his selection he made clear his position when he said of the exchange, once referred to as a "gentleman's club:"

"My endeavor will be to make it a public service institution. I fully recognize my responsibilities to the public."

As the youthful Yale graduate stepped into the shoes of Charles R. Gay, non-salaried president, who preceded him on an "anti-Old-Guard" platform willing to cooperate with Federal regulation of the market, he also fell heir to the mantle of the ill-starred Richard Whitney.

Whitney, whose firm failed in February, is now serving a term in Sing Sing as a result of events leading up to the crash.

Observers appeared generally agreed the Whitney debacle had greatly strengthened the hand of the reform group, of whom Martin was considered a spokesman. Whitney was a leader in the fight against Government regulation.

Martin was graduated from Yale in the class of 1928, is the son of the president of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, and maintains bachelor quarters at the Yale Club here.

The section to which Babcock referred reads:

"Whenever the announcement of any examination in which education, training or experience is prerequisite shall so state, and the applicants are given opportunity to file detailed sworn statements of their qualifications, a preliminary competitive rating may be given on the basis of the duties, requirements and conditions of work in the positions to be filled before any applicant shall be required to travel for further tests. Applicants rated highest on such preliminary rating, to a number not incommensurate to the number of vacancies expected during the life of the list shall be afforded opportunity to assemble or otherwise compete in such further competitive tests as the Commission may require."

It developed yesterday that approximately 75,000 Government employes will benefit as a result of the action of the President in signing H. J. 551, which provides that when per diem, per hour and piece work employes are prevented from working, or relieved from working, because of the occurence of a holiday, or because a day is declared a holiday by Federal statute or Executive order, they shall receive the same pay for such days as for other days on which an ordinary day's work is performed.

The Association of Non-Classified Federal Employees yesterday commended the President on the orders and announced that the President will be petitioned to include a representative of non-classified workers in the personnel directorate to be named when the order takes effect in February.

Bail Is Permitted For Death Suspect

Prince Frederick, Md., June 30.—State's Attorney Arthur W. Dowell announced tonight he had told relatives of the Washington street car conductor, in custody since June 22 in the mysterious killing of a Washington widow, that they could post bond of $1,000 for his release. He said he understood arrangements for bond were being made.

The widow, Mrs. Esther Lewis, was an expectant mother and results of an analysis are expected to show she died of an anesthetic administered in an attempted illegal operation.

Cornerstone Laid for Public Health Institute

1,000 Civic, Medical Leaders Attend Ceremonies on Rockville Pike.

Paying tribute to the pioneers in the Nation's war against disease, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau yesterday laid the cornerstone to the new National Institute of Public Health, on the high ground given the Government by the late Luke I. Wilson on the Rockville Pike, beyond Bethesda.

"In laying this cornerstone, we mark another important step in serving the real human needs in the land," said Mr. Morgenthau, who asserted he was glad of the part the Department of the Treasury had paid in aiding in the construction of the center.

Relics Placed in Stone.

Into the cornerstone 10-year-old Richard Parran, son of Surgeon Gen. Thomas Parran, and Lewis R. Thompson, jr., 9-year-old son of Dr. Thompson, director of the institute, placed all the stamp issues of June this year, an invitation to tea at Mrs. Wilson's mansion following the dedication, a new penny, a new nickel, a new dime and a new quarter.

Presiding at the exercises, which were attended by more than 1,000 civic and medical leaders, was Dr. Parran.

"There has been more progress toward public health under the present Administration than at any other time," said he.

Value of the institute as it was dedicated yesterday is $1,500,000, but only three buildings are under construction now, the main structure, which will house administration, some laboratories the library and the cafeteria; the building which will be the central point for industrial hygiene and the building in which public health methods will be studied.

Two More Buildings Planned.

Two more buildings are to be built on the 45 acre plot, while erection of the National Cancer Institute, on land given by Mrs. Wilson and her son after Mr. Wilson's death, will cost $750,000, and stand on an additional 16 acres.

The cornerstone bore the names of President Roosevelt, Secretary Morgenthau, Dr. Parran, Louis A. Simon, supervising architect; Christian Joy Peoples, director of Procurement; W. Englebert Reynolds, director of Public Buildings, and Neal Melick, supervising engineer. Work was begun last February.

Meanwhile plans for the Cancer Institute went ahead, with the announcement that the Bureau of Standards was making rapid progress toward construction of a 1,000,000-volt electrical research laboratory, which will be dedicated, in a large measure, to X-ray therapy problems.

Need Told Roosevelt.

Discussing the recent $500,000 appropriation by Congress to erect and equip three new buildings in the bureau grounds on Connecticut avenue, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper said the project will enable physicists and medical scientists to test for the first time their theories on high-voltage radiology.

Although bureau officials have been urging establishment of the institution for about ten years, the innovation actually had its beginning three years ago, Roper said. At three years ago, Roper said. At ning at a White House conference that time Dr. A. C. Compton and Gano Dunn, of the Business Advisory Council; representatives of the Bureau of Standards, and Secretary Roper explained the need for such a research laboratory to President Roosevelt.

At the present time electrical work at the bureau has a maximum of 200,000 volts.

Congress was asked to appropriate $508,000 for the expansion and granted $500,000. Specifications for the new buildings are now being drafted and it is expected that contracts will be awarded by autumn.

Yeggs Miss Gold Valued at $3,500

Robbers who early yesterday looted a safe in a dental supply establishment at 1215 New York avenue northwest overlooked approximately $3,500 in gold fillings stored in a "burglar-proof" compartment, police reported last night.

And on top of that, detectives said, the thieves will probably realize only about $50 from their "haul." Although they took metal valued at $805, the actual gold which can be salvaged will net them much less, investigators added.

The technique of the safe-crackers was described by police as "unusually skilled." It was the first major safe robbery in Washington since early last year.

Ex-D.C. Policeman Guilty of Aiding in Illegal Operation

Jeff Henry, 37-year-old former Metropolitan policeman, was convicted yesterday in United States District Court of aiding in a criminal operation. The jury deliberated 2 hours and 15 minutes following a brief trial.

Together with Edna Gray, 50, colored, of the 1800 block Fourteenth street northwest, who pleaded guilty under a similar indictment, Henry faces a maximum penalty of five years' imprisonment. The jury recommended mercy.

Scheid Killed To Save Lives, Officer Avers

Scheid

Also Indicted.

Knox, who was indicted for assisting Scheid in a murder, may have to repeat his testimony in his own defense should the jury find Scheid guilty. Otherwise the charge probably will be dropped. A ballistic test traced the fatal bullet to Scheid's gun.

The dark, stocky policeman described the long chase along the Leesburg Pike, through Falls Church and along the Lee Highway, during which he said their car remained within 30 feet of Daugherty even when the latter's automobile was going 70 miles an hour.

Just before overtaking Daugherty, Knox said he accidentally switched off the police car's lights for a moment in an attempt to sound the siren. Otherwise the headlights were on continuously. Earlier prosecution witnesses had described the car as being without lights.

Denies Intending to Hit.

It was after Scheid pulled their car ahead of Daugherty's and forced him to stop that he attempted to run the officers down, Knox said. As they got out and approached him, "he cut his wheels to the right and started straight toward us. I started to get out of the way and fell through a hedge. Lying on the ground, I fired one shot."

He denied intending to hit Daugherty or hurt him in any way, and said he realized the man was injured only after his car had careened off the road and came to a stop.

Douglas was unable to shake Knox's story of his search for a car thief or to obtain from him any other explanation of why he and Scheid were in the vicinity of Daugherty's father-in-law's home that night. He said he followed a car he believed to be stolen from East Falls Church to a spot near the Frazier home about an hour before the shooting.

The "thief" leaped from the car as he pulled up beside it, he explained, and he summoned Scheid by telephone to help in the search. After hunting a short time, they started back to Falls Church, were passed by Daugherty's car and followed him to arrest him for speeding.

Scheid on Stand Today.

The special night session, called to speed up the trial so as to release the jurors for the holiday week-end, ended at 9 p. m. Scheid will take the stand today, and it is expected the case will be given to the jury before night.

In line with his opening statement that Scheid was searching for a car thief and did not trail Daugherty from his father-in-law's home, Defense Counsel Frank Ball summoned William Henry Churchwell, of the Justice Department, to the stand soon after the Commonwealth rested its case at 2:55 p. m. yesterday.

Ball assured the jury in his opening statement that he would prove the "argument" merely to be Scheid's inquiring of Daugherty if he had seen a car thief in the vicinity. He said also that the car "trailing" Daugherty actually was Knox's car being driven back to Falls Church while Knox remained to search for the thief in Scheid's scout car.

Harry Nalls of Falls Church followed Churchwell to the stand. He said he accompanied Knox to the scene of the search and drove Knox's car back to the garage where he keeps it. The car, Churchwell had explained previously, had been moved from his house to the nearby driveway of the Scheid home.

Teacher on Stand.

Another witness to the search was Albert Piggott, McKinley High School instructor, who told of following Knox out to the Leesburg pike "about midnight." He had heard the policeman discussing the allegedly stolen car in an East Falls Church garage, he said, and watched the search for "about 15 minutes."

Ball summoned another group of witnesses in an effort to give the jury a characterization of Chimney Villa, the roadhouse where Daugherty spent the evening before the shooting.

Town Sergt. Alton P. Shumate of Falls Church testified he visited Bennett's place frequently and had made several arrests there but that Bennett was "glad for me to come at any time."

The first defense witness, Officer John Saunders, of the Arlington County Police, was among the first to reach Daugherty's car, which hurtled off the Lee highway into a field after the shooting.

"Did you notice an odor of liquor in the car?" Ball asked.

"Yes, sir," the officer replied.

Car Without Lights.

Before court recessed at 4:45 p. m., Ball introduced several character witnesses, all of whom praised Scheid's reputation for "truth and veracity, peace and good order." The last of these was Mayor L. P. Daniel of Falls Church, who said he had appointed Scheid to the force about a year ago and that he and Knox morning of the shooting.

were released in his custody the Several witnesses, damaging to the defense, were presented before the Commonwealth's attorney rested his case. Principal among them were Marvin Poole and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Cecil Rawlings, a Washington department store employe. They told of encountering a car without headlights on the Lee highway the morning of March 20 and being forced off the roadway.

Officer John E. Conway, of the Arlington County police, repeated the account he had given at the preliminary hearing. He was ordered to the scene with Officer Saunders, he said. As he approached Knox, the latter said to him, "We just had to shoot one."

Gettysburg

Battle 75 Years Ago.

The old Confederate, who lives at 619 G street southeast, was a private in Company B, Second Maryland Battalion, of Walker's brigade, Heth's division, Ewell's corps. Seventy-five years ago today he entered the town of Gettysburg and fought through its dusty streets. He didn't know anything about a quest for shoes which brought the armies into collision, but he admitted "the boys needed shoes mighty bad."

"I remember," he said, "the next day we charged across a creek and up a hill into the open. Then it was just plain hell. It was a sin the way those men were slaughtered here; they were mowed down like wheat."

On the extreme left of the Confederate line, where it bent round the fish hook of Culps Hill, Smith was not in either of the two charges which marked the second and third days. But did he hear Pickett's charge from behind the rocky wooded hill?

"Glad He Wasn't There."

"Oh, my goodness, yes. There was a two-hour cannonade and then you never heard such a lot of yelling and shooting as the boys did. I was glad I wasn't in that charge or I guess I'd have stayed here."

Born on a plantation in St. Marys County, Md., "about 4 miles from Point Lookout," Smith joined the rebels as a lad of 18 "because my father was a big slaveholder."

"And what an army that was," he continued. "We never had enough to eat, we lived out in the rain and marched until we were barefooted and then fought like twice our numbers. Still, if I had to do it over again I'd let some fellow shoot me before I'd join another such army and go through three more years like those were."

Blue Vet There, Too.

And there was another veteran, clad in a blue uniform with countless medals dangling from it, who painfully toiled up the eastern face of little Round Top. He looked over the mile-wide valley toward Seminary Ridge and struck a huge boulder with his cane.

"This is the one," he said. "I was behind this very rock loading and firing as fast as a man ever could. Longstreet's boys were almost on top of us before we got in there, and a close thing that was. Five minutes later and we'd have lost this place."

That meant a great deal when you stood there on little Round Top and looked to your right along Cemetery Ridge to Gettysburg and Culp's Hill. There the whole line lay before you and it was easy to see how a few guns planted among the rocks of the Round Top could have blasted Meade from his vantage point on the ridge.

It was something to make you think darkly of Longstreet and his long delay before attacking the undefended stronghold, if your sympathies lay to the South, or to wish him good luck in his warrior's valhalla if your sympathies leaned to the North.

The whole battlefield lies out before you from that place and you can see off in front of you the grain field where Longstreet drove Sickles from what was Peach Orchard and the meadow land which in that day was a wheat field where men enriched the land with their blood.

Where Bones Rotted.

In the Devil's Den you find great boulders cracked and crevassed, where dead Confederates lay for years until their bones and rotted uniforms were plucked out by explorers who came upon them by accident.

On Cemetery Ridge you find the place where Lincoln stood to make his famous address, and you see the graves of countless unknown soldiers where they were heaped without ceremony in deep trenches. The hand of tragedy lies heavy on this place and you cannot walk among its stone walls and old rail fences without feeling it upon you.

Across the valley, where the Confederates lay, you find the place from which Pickett started at Longstreet's reluctant nod. You look over to where the Union line was almost a mile away, and you cannot help it if you think what a long way that is to walk in the face of blazing guns laying down their deadly curtain against you.

History's Tragic Name.

Little wonder is it that Gettysburg is so tragic a name in this Nation's history. The battlefield, netted with motor roads now, still holds enough of its rugged defiance to make you understand why Lee's 7-mile-long battle line recoiled from this compactly placed defensive position. If engineers of the Army of the Potomac had laid it it could have been no better designed.

Today is the seventy-fifth anniversary of the skirmish on which hinged the decision of the war. The afternoon of June 30, 1863, Pettigrew's Confederate Brigade collided with points of Buford's Union cavalry on the Cashtown road and that little affair rapidly swelled into a major battle.

Recall Last Reunion.

Twenty-five years ago, in July, 1913, there was another reunion of North and South on this field. Old veterans in their tents tell you of that reunion and sigh for its robustness.

"We were a lot spryer then, than we are now," they tell you wistfully, "and there were a lot of fist fights among the boys. Now look."

And, depending on which camp you happen to be in, they show you old men in grey or blue walking among their one-time enemies. There will be no fist fights here this year, unless some young attendants of the ancient men decide to settle the battle in their own way.

Opens Today.

Opening the celebration tomorrow at 2 p. m. with State Senator John S. Rice, chairman of the Pennsylvania State commission, presiding, Gov. Earle will make an address of welcome. The crowd is expected to reach 200,000 by Sunday.

The Rev. Martin V. Stone, chaplain of the Grand Army of the Republic, will deliver the opening prayer, and Secretary of War Woodring will speak after Gov. Earle. After a salute in his honor, Dr. Overton H. Mennet, of Los Angeles, Calif., commander of the G. A. R., will speak. Gen. John M. Claypool, commander of the United Confederate Veterans, will follow after a second salute.

Saturday will be Veterans Day with a parade in which veterans of all the Nation's wars and military units here will take part. Sunday President Roosevelt will speak in dedication of the Peace Memorial, an eternal light fed by Pennsylvania natural gas. Monday the Army will have charge of things and will demonstrate Cavalry, Artillery, tanks, air craft and anti-aircraft.

Railway Gun Impressive.

The Army has an 8-inch railway gun here that impresses you as something which might have won this battle without delay for either side. It has also a regiment of fast little tanks which would certainly have gone where Pickett's 18,000 infantry could not. It has artillery which could have placed a fire so severe in the valley between the lines that Pickett would have been stopped before he started.

Most of the army units here are from points near Washington. There is a squadron of the Third Cavalry from Fort Myer, Va. The Twelfth Infantry from Fort Washington, Md., is here and also part of the Thirty-fourth Infantry and the Sixty-sixth Infantry (light tanks) from Fort Meade, Md.

The gunners who will demonstrate modern artillery are of the Sixth Field Artillery, Fort Hoyle, Md. Three companies of the Twelfth Infantry are based at Fort Howard, Md.

There is a decidedly martial air about Gettysburg now. You cannot walk from earshot of an army band and you cannot escape the sudden blast of artillery salutes when notables arrive. Now and then you fiand a band swinging into "Dixie" and you see smiles brighten the faces of Confederates who would have welcomed their marching song with the old Rebel yell a few years ago. There are not many Rebel yells left in them now.

21 From Maryland.

Gettysburg, Pa., June 30 (AP).—Twenty-one Maryland Civil War veterans, including one who fought with the Confederates, are attending the seventy-fifth anniversary observance of the Battle of Gettysburg.

England's Revenue Lower by 34 Million

London, June 30 (AP).—Treasury returns showed tonight Great Britain's revenue for the first quarter this financial year declined £6,926,000 ($34,630,000) from a total of £138,813,323 ($694,066,615) in the first quarter of 1937.

Income tax and customs yields showed slumps. A current deficit of £103,061,945 ($515,309,725) was disclosed.

Shirley Turns Tables! Takes Movie of Crowd

Williamsburg, Va., June 30 (AP).—On her first trip East, Shirley Temple arrived today at this capital of Colonial Virginia. The little screen star was very busy with her moving-picture camera. From the balcony of the Governor's Palace, where pre-Revolutionary rulers resided, she turned the lens on a crowd of about 600.

With her father and mother and party she will go on to Philadelphia by automobile.

War 'Secrets' Leak Is Laid Before House of Commons

Secrets

Conservative back-bencher, Duncan Sandys, son-in-law of Winston Churchill. Somehow Sandys came into possession of highly confidential army secrets regarding a serious shortage of modern antiaircraft guns with which to defend the country against bombing planes from the continent.

War Secretary Hore-Belisha, in response to questions from Sandys and others, had delivered reassuring but vague statements as to his defense against aerial invasion. To bring out the whole alarming truth, Sandys proposed to put a question in Commons based upon the secret information he had uncovered. As a courtesy, he submitted a draft of the question in advance to Hore-Belisha, and asked him to deny the figures if he could.

Instead of answering the question in the usual way on the floor of Commons, Hore-Belisha consulted Chamberlain and Somervell, and Sandys was warned privately he would be liable to two years in prison under the official secrets act, unless he named the army officer who had given him the secret figures. Sandys stubbornly refused to break confidence with his informant.

Brought to Commons.

He brought the issue to the attention of the Commons with the result Chamberlain today had to appont a select committee, representing all parties, to investigate "l'affaire Sandys" and report back whether the government has been abusing the official secrets act; not only in the Sandys case, but in previous prosecutions of newspapermen who published information which officials wished to suppress.

The parliamentarians won the first skirmish today against the war office. The latter opened a military inquiry this morning into the leakage of information to Sandys, but adjourned it indefinitely when Sandys, who was summoned to attend in his uniform of a second lieutenant in the territorial army, refused to attend on the ground of his immunity as a member of Parliament, a defiance in which he was backed up by the parliamentary committee on privileges.

Before the World.

The battle was then transferred to the floor of the House of Commons. Instead of a star-chamber proceeding, with a view to court-martialing the guilty parties, it became an open forum for all the world to judge. The fate of Sandys was secondary. The dominant issue was whether members of Parliament and pressmen may make full use of whatever official information comes their way, or whether they must bend the knee to bureaucrats, who will decide what may or may not be printed or spoken.

It fell to the lot of Sandys' father-in-law, the eloquent Winston Churchill, to state the best case against the ministers of the crown.

"The official secrets act," said Churchill, "was devised to protect the national defense, and ought not to be used to shield ministers who may have neglected that defense. It ought not to be used to shield ministers who have a strong personal interest in concealing the truth about that from the country.

"We must be careful that these powers are not in any way used to keep public information quiet, or prolong inaction or neglect. You may blame a member who commits the indiscretion of making our weakness public, but how much more must you blame that minister who is responsible for making that weakness."

The Labor Party leader, Maj. Richard Clement Attlee, described the issues involved in the Sandys case as "very far-reaching and of the utmost importance to this House, to the country and to Democrats throughout the world."

Prime Minister Chamberlain and War Secretary Hore-Belisha said they were content to leave the verdict in the Sandys case to the select committee, whose report should be ready in a few weeks.

In conclusion the prime minister said there was no reason for any member of Commons to feel he is "under any menace or has any need of anxiety."

Hore-Belisha recited the history of the Sandys case, and told how his general staff was "greatly concerned" over Sandys obtaining the secret information about guns. He said Sandys' figures evidently had been extracted from an emergency plan of defense against aerial attacks, as drawn up last April. The document contained "emergency directions showing the exact positions to be taken by our guns, the exact numbers and the sources from which they were to be provided."

Hull Denies U. S. Makes Reprisals Against Mexico

Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, rebuking representatives of a group of peace organizations who had made insinuations of official reprisal against Mexico for its oil stand, declared yesterday the good neighbor police was steadily in effect.

Hull denied that any official of this Government had ever proposed that a loan be sponsored to the amount of $200,000,000 to help Mexico build roads. No such loan had been proposed said the Secretary.

Another charge was that the Navy Department in reprisal had stopped a $10,000,000 order to buy Mexican oil. American law requires that the Navy buy American oil, the Secretary pointed out.

Ertel's Arraignment Put Off Until July 12

Benjamin Ertel, 23, under indictment in New York for the slaying of Policeman Michael Foley in a restaurant hold-up, was arraigned in Police Court yesterday, but action was delayed until July 12, when extradition papers will be brought to Washington.

Ertel appeared dapper and well dressed when he was brought to court. His bride of three months was in the courtroom. He was picked up by two New York detectives Wednesday.

Loyalists Ask Quick Inquiry In New Raids

By the United Press.

Barcelona, June 30.—The Spanish loyalist government appealed urgently today to Great Britain and France for an investigation of "new and unjustified aggression of Italo-German aviation" after a series of violent air raids on civilian population along the Mediterranean Coast.

The appeal was dispatched to London and Paris by Foreign Minister Julio Alvarez del Vayo as ten insurgent bombers swept upon the industrial suburbs of Badalona, 5 miles north of Barcelona, and exacted a toll of between 45 and 55 dead and more than 100 wounded.

Of 36 bodies recovered tonight 24 were women, killed by the insurgent bombs or machine guns of the raiding planes.

Planes Called Italian.

The Badalona raiders were officially described as Italian make Savoia bombers.

Denia, south of Valencia, and the town of Liria, 15 miles northwest of the former loyalist capital, suffered from insurgent air raids during the day, while the central streets of Madrid, peaceful for weeks, were heavily bombarded at 6 p. m. by insurgent siege guns in the Guadarrama hills.

Sixteen persons were killed and 80 were wounded when five trimotor bombers raided Segrobe.

The same craft then bombed the villages of Sericas, Navajas and Soneja, inflicting many more casualties.

British Delay.

Del Vayo in his appeal to London and Paris, asked that the neutral air raid inquiry commission proposed on June 24 be rushed to the seaport town of Blanes, 70 miles south of the French border, where nine persons were killed and 34 wounded late Wednesday in a raid of insurgent planes.

British officials contend the neutral commission to investigate civilian bombings cannot be dispatched to Spain until a reply has been received to an invitation asking the Netherlands to participate. Furthermore, they pointed out, Franco has not given his consent to the scheme.

Guerrillas Attack.

Hendaye, France, June 30 (U.P.).—Loyalist militiamen, taking advantage of scorching sun that dried up the broad Ebro River, today carried a fierce guerrilla attack to the Tortosa sector along the Mediterranean, 70 miles behind the insurgent drive on Valencia.

The main loyalist army defending Valencia meanwhile struck back savagely at Gen. Jose Varela's insurgents trying to force their way down the Teruel-Sagunto highway and was reported to have freed Mora de Rublelos, spearhead of an important government salient, from threat of encirclement.

The loyalist commander in chief, Gen. Jose Miaja, maneuvered 40,000 reserves up the highway to head off Varela's forces around the fortified town of Sarrion, and reported he had recaptured the "Tooth of Sarrion," mountain peak seized by Varela last week.

Gettysburg Ex-Slave Dies Near Veterans

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Gettysburg, Pa., June 30.—A colored slave at the outbreak of the Civil War, Harry Clay died of old age at his home here this afternoon within a few blocks of the Blue and Gray encampment he had hoped to visit. He would have been 93 on July 4. A resident of Gettysburg for more than 50 years, he had been employed as a messenger by the National Park Service here for 33 years, retiring more than ten years ago.

Dublin Awaits Kennedy.

Dublin, June 30 (A.P.).—John Cudahy, United States Minister to Ireland, announced today that Joseph P. Kennedy, American Ambassador to London, would arrive here July 7 to see President Douglas Hyde, Premier Eamon de Valera and other members of the government.

Nazis Declare Schuschnigg's Wedding Void

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, June 30.—George Buerckel, Chancellor Hitler's chief representative in Austrian Germany, in an extensive interview today clarified the position of the Nazi government. These were among the points he made:

Kurt Schuschnigg, deposed Austrian chancellor, is not a married man in the eyes of the Nazi regime. (Informed Vienna sources reported June 3 Schuschnigg and Countess Vera Fugger von Babenhausen had been married, with Schuschnigg's brother as proxy, Schuschnigg himself being under detention.)

All the properties of members of the Austrian branch of the ancient Hapsburg family, one-time powerful rulers of central Europe, will be confiscated by a decree to be published soon.

Baron Louis Rothschild, of the famous international banking family, is still under arrest, and efforts to reach an agreement regarding his properties are continuing. (Baron Rothschild was reported arrested shortly after Germany took over Austria March 13.)

Austria is happy under the Nazi regime, and "former communist workers now are the stanchest defenders of Nazism."

While Jewish workers should not on principle be removed from their jobs, still they cannot expect special consideration so long as Gentiles are unemployed.

Figures concerning arrests in Austria have been greatly exaggerated, Buerckel said, adding that at present there are 3,780, about one-half of them being Jews, in "protective custody" or under arrest for political offenses. Race had nothing to do with the arrests, he said.

President Has Cinders Taken Out of His Eyes

New York, June 30 (A.P.).—President Roosevelt had to have some cinders taken out of his eyes on his automobile ride from Hyde Park to New York.

While his party stopped to wait for a freight train to roll down the tracks at a grade crossing, a billow of cinder-laden smoke wafted across his car. A medical aide applied eyewash.

New Baby Keeps Woman From Federal Jury Duty

New York, June 30 (U.P.).—Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard today was about to cite Mrs. Lucy Cobb for failure to appear for jury duty when a court attendant handed him a penny postcard. It said: "Lucy Cobb will be unable to appear for jury duty as she is confined in Harlem Hospital. Reason—childbirth."

It was a boy.

Japan, Franco Defer to Pope Over Bombing

Efforts Are Promised to Limit Civilian Suffering and Victims.

By the Associated Press.

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, June 30.—The Holy See reaffirmed its abhorrence of bombings of civilian populations in pronouncements today on both Spain and China.

A papal appeal to the Japanese government to spare non-combatants as far as possible was disclosed as Pope Pius personally expressed his pleasure on receiving promises from Gen. Franco, Spanish insurgent leader, "to limit victims and suffering of war."

A Vatican news service said the Pope had appealed to Tokyo to "spare the civil population insofar as possible" in conducting aerial bombardments in China. Representations were made through the apostolic delegate in Tokyo, Msgr. Paolo Marella.

Japan Receptive.

The news service said the Japanese government had replied to the appeal by saying it would be treated with "consideration and deference."

[Japan's assurance was made by Foreign Minister Gen. Kuzushige Ugaki "in the name of the entire government," the official Vatican organ, Osservatore Romano, said, according to the United Press.

[Gen. Ugaki was said to have informed the pontiff "that all possible means would be taken in warfare to assure the safety of non-combatants and civil populations" and that "Japan will willingly accept those proposals which she believes to be useful."—Editor's Note.]

"Affection for Franco."

Franco's message to the pontiff was conveyed by Don Jose Maria de Yanguas y Messia, Viscount of Santa Clara and Avedillo, the insurgent regime's first ambassador to the Holy See.

The pontiff expressed "words of affection for Franco" upon receiving his "noble promises . . . to limit victims and suffering of war," the news service said.

It quoted the Pope also as saying he prayed for an end soon to Spain's troubles and that "the future be according to the will of God and that God give Franco the joy and glory of announcing to Spain and the world the end of these tribulations."

Arab Minister Lays Holy Land Crisis to Jews

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, June 30.—There can be no peace between Jew and Arab in Palestine until the Jews are willing to concede two points, limitation of immigration and the acceptance of their status as a minority in an Arab country rather than try to form a separate country of their own, Sheikh Rafiz Wahba, minister of King Ibn Saud, of the Arabian Saudian Kingdom, said today.

Sheikh Wahba made the statement in an interview at the Waldorf-Astoria, where he arrived late Wednesday night from Los Angeles. He was dressed in flowing robes with a gold embroidered head-cloth, decorated with two bands of gold and leather around the crown. He spoke sometimes in English, and sometimes in Arabic to Dr. George Kirellah of the Arab National League of New York, who acted as interpreter.

"There is no place in Palestine for the thousands of Jews that wish to go to it from Eastern Europe, especially Poland and Rumania," Sheikh Wahba said. "Palestine is a poor country, and all that number of Jews could not live there. Furthermore the Arabs will not give up their lands to the Jews. They will not be pushed out into the desert."

National Gallery Worker Killed by 21-Foot Fall

A 21-foot fall while at work at the National Gallery of Art was fatal yesterday morning to a workman identified as Nels Henry Anderson, 45, of 220 Second street southeast.

Police said the man apparently slipped while placing forms to hold concrete and fell to the basement. He was dead on arrival at Emergency Hospital.

200,000 Welcome Bertil of Sweden

Philadelphia, June 30 (A.P.).—Thousands who lined the shores of the Schuylkill River tonight gave an uproarious welcome to Prince Bertil, of Sweden, at a regatta that ended a day of festivities in his honor.

The crowd, estimated at more than 200,000 by city officials, was packed along both shores for more than a mile. When the prince arrived at the reviewing stand, the cheers drowned out the booming of small cannon.

The prince, who with his father, Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf, came to the United States with a delegation to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the first Swedish settlement in America, witnessed a majestic spectacle that ended with the flags of Sweden and the United States displayed in fireworks.

De Valera Again Prime Minister

Dublin, June 30 (A.P.).—New York-born Eamon de Valera, backed by a newly won majority, today was re-elected prime minister of Ireland by the Dail Eireann.

The vote was 75 to 45. It was chiefly a test of De Valera's Fianna Fail Party, victorious in the elections of June 17, and William T. Cosgrave's Fine Gael. Labor members and some independents did not vote.

Frear Extradition Hearing Postponed

Because papers had not arrived from New York, a hearing on the extradition of Phillip Frear, 44, Washington broker, was postponed until July 12 in Police Court yesterday.

It was understood at the United States attorney's office, however, that Frear, who is the son of former Representative James A. Frear, of Wisconsin, would return to New York voluntarily meanwhile to answer to an indictment in a $16,000,000 securities swindle.

Vandals Destroy Clothes Dummies

Eight clothing dummies, used in department store windows, were destroyed by vandals last night who entered the Pan-American room in the Hotel Mayflower, William L. Field, of California, reported to police yesterday. He valued them at $800.

According to Field, who is demonstrating the statues to display men convening at the hotel, one small statue, valued at $15, was stolen.

Republican Trends.

The retirement of Representative Bertrand H. Snell, House minority leader, may again bring into the open a conflict of many years' duration in Republican Party ranks.

That struggle has lacked the dimensions and certainly the virulence of the conflict now heading toward a climax between the New Dealers and what President Roosevelt has dubbed the "Copperheads" in the Democratic Party. The succession of defeats administered to Republicans since 1930 have tended to bring about a certain measure of consolidation as well as a decided shrinkage in the G. O. P.'s ranks. To a considerable degree what was the left-wing of the party in the days of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover has deserted to the enemy. But the Republicans continue to be divided by internal schisms, some personal, some relating to tactics, and some which are the product of divergences in outlook.

One element in the Republican Party believes that it must adopt a liberal point of view and be selective in its criticisms of New Deal policies and measures. Others oppose any compromise with Rooseveltism. Of this element Congressman Snell was a doughty representative. An old-time conservative, he was outspoken in his dislike of the New Deal. Despite the weakness of the minority under his leadership, he made a determined effort to hold New Deal legislation in check. For as he saw it the function of an opposition is to oppose. It is to the credit of Mr. Snell, as well as the Republican leadership in the Senate, that they joined forces with more powerful Democratic groups on several occasions when vital principles were at stake.

This coalition movement has given rise to frequent suggestions that Republicans and anti-New Deal Democrats form a united front. But, as the plight of Senator Van Nuys in Indiana reveals, such co-operation can not be easily worked out under the two-party system. Only in extreme cases does a man elected to Congress as a Democrat, for example, care to accept help from the G. O. P. And the latter party can scarcely be expected to nominate an anti-New Deal Democrat when a division in the Democratic ranks seems to offer a favorable opportunity for a candidate of its own ranks.

The fight over the successor to Mr. Snell as House minority leader will doubtless provide a clew as to the direction in which the Republican Party is moving. In the meantime, however, the November elections may result in a considerable change in the G. O. P. membership in the House. The new leadership is likely to be liberal only if the votes cast for Republican candidates in the primaries and elections show a trend in that direction.

The Duce Intercedes.

Following strong British representations at Rome, the Italian government has apparently agreed to advise Gen. Francisco Franco, the Spanish Nationalist leader, to abstain as far as possible from bombing any more British ships in Spanish government ports.

This development is not without its grimly humorous aspects. For some time it has been strongly suspected that many of the offending planes and fliers engaged in attacks on British shipping were of Italian origin. Confirmatory evidence of this has come from the Italian press itself, which has openly been boasting of the exploits of Italian aviators in the service of Franco. Because use of these weapons now threatens the British-Italian agreement, however, Mussolini seeks to restrain the destructive forces he has helped to set in motion.

Officially, Great Britain holds to the view that Gen. Franco is entirely responsible for the loss of British lives and the destruction of British shipping. Any other attitude would obviously be dangerous. It might, in fact, cut the ground from under the Anglo-Italian pact of April 16. This neither London nor Rome desires.

Indeed, Premier Chamberlain sets such great store by the agreement with Italy that he has subordinated most other considerations to it. But the repeated attacks on British shipping and the mounting anger in Great Britain over this development have enormously embarrassed him. Though not without reluctance, the London government has made clear to Mussolini that if he wants to preserve the Anglo-Italian agreement attacks on British vessels must cease.

Mussolini, for his part, has taken the hint. He, too, does not want the agreement of April 16 scrapped. Nor would it particularly serve any useful Italian purposes if the Chamberlain regime were overthrown as the result of a revolt of British public opinion. The Duce has therefore indicated his readiness to make concessions. But since, at the same time, he is unprepared to do anything which might imperil Franco's chances of victory, these concessions may prove limited in scope and, possibly, only temporary in duration.

In any event, the indications are that for some little while, at least, British shipping in Spanish government ports will enjoy a relative degree of freedom from bombing, and Mr. Chamberlain can breathe more easily.

Forgetting The Costs.

It was quite appropriate for President Roosevelt to begin his address before the National Education Association on Federal aid to the schools with a discussion of budget balancing. For even if the principle of national support for local schools should be accepted, the question of raising money for such a program cannot be lightly dismissed by an Administration which has incurred huge deficits every year it has been in office.

The President takes a casual view of the enormous debts which his Administration has been piling up for future generations to pay. So long as a nation takes care of its natural resources and its human beings, he says in effect, what difference does it make whether or not bookkeepers say financial budgets are out of balance! Thousands of reckless individual spenders have followed that same line of reasoning to the depths of bankruptcy. Looking only at what is needed or desirable, more spending can nearly always be justified. But that does not minimize the ultimate disaster resulting from outlays which constantly exceed income.

This country's valuable industrial plants, its homes, office buildings, its millions of automobiles and similar assets stand as an effective challenge to President Roosevelt's statement that "the only real capital of a Nation is its natural resources and its human beings." But a still greater fallacy lies in his apparent assumption that the welfare of citizens can be promoted by plunging them into debts that may take a generation to repay.

In making the welfare of human beings his chief concern the President is unquestionably right. All policies must ultimately be judged by their effect upon the people as a whole. It is only because history has again and again demonstrated the dangers of loose fiscal policy, as Mr. Roosevelt himself has noted, that this means to a humanitarian end has been severely criticized. The President comes very near to saying that because his general objective is sound the cost of his experiments is immaterial. The people as a whole, who must bear this expense, can scarcely be expected to take so casual a view.

Fortunately the President did not go as far as many educators have done in advocating Federal aid for the schools. He recommends that Federal funds be provided for only those communities where education is most neglected. "No one wants the Federal Government to subsidize education," he says, "any more than absolutely necessary." It is doubtful, however, whether Congress would consider it politically feasible to grant educational funds to only a limited group of under-privileged communities.

The chief difficulty is that when any such precedent is established, Federal aid tends to become general. That would mean another heavy charge against the Treasury, already in the red for the ninth consecutive year. Moreover, it would inevitably result in some measure of Federal control over the schools. President Roosevelt's remarks on this point were reassuring. He is eager to preserve the freedom of education. "If the fires of freedom and civil liberties burn low in other lands," he said, "they must be made brighter in our own." Unfortunately, however, that commendable view could not keep politics out of a school system dominated by Congress.

The present ferment within the WPA is an eloquent reply to the President's confident assumption that direct Federal aid would not extend political influences to the schools. Under that plan it requires no stretch of the imagination to visualize some future administrator for education telling student and parent-teacher groups that they must support their friends in a coming election.

Still A Taxi Problem.

The President has signed the District taxicab liability insurance bill, thus crowning a victory sought for eight years by the Public Utilities Commission. This is welcome news. At last Washington is to have what almost every other city offers as a matter of course—financially responsible public carriers. The new law is also to be hailed from standpoint of fair dealing in public regulation. No longer will street cars alone be required to assume a liability for their passengers; now this reasonable order applies to the entire public transportation system.

Even the taxi drivers themselves should welcome this development. At least it will release from an uncomfortable position any driver with a conscience who has been evading responsibilities patently his own. It is said one fleet of cabs has ignored hundreds of court orders for damages incurred in accidents in which the drivers were unquestionably at fault. Presumably this unbecoming practice will now be ended, although not without requiring certain readjustments in the local hacking picture. The contemplated insurance will cost a pretty penny and it is a question how this new expense is to be paid. Some believe an increase in fares is inevitable. That, however, is a question for the PUC to decide after full hearings.

A possible alternative exists in the proposal to reduce the number of taxis now cruising Washington's streets. Wholly aside from the traffic congestion promoted by nearly 5,000 cabs, their number is so excessive that it is extremely difficult for drivers to earn a living wage. If the total could be limited, the income for each remaining cab would naturally increase, perhaps to a point where the drivers could fairly absorb the costs of insurance. But an act of Congress is needed to equip the PUC with the necessary regulatory power. It is a pity a bill to this effect introduced last year failed to pass along with the desirable insurance legislation.

The Last Bivouac.

About 2,000 members of the Grand Army of the Republic and the United Confederate Veterans are assembled at Gettysburg this week in commemoration of the great battle that took place there seventy-five years ago.

They constitute but a tiny remnant of a mighty host once locked in fratricidal strife. But by their very presence at this encampment they attest the happy fact that the enmities and passions which once divided them and their fellows have long since subsided. A united Nation does honor to them all, the present and the absent, the living and the dead, the victors and the vanquished.

The average age of the veterans at the Gettysburg celebration is 94. That is well over half the life span of the Nation itself, from Yorktown to the present. In their day, therefore, these aged men have seen a vast pageant of history unroll before their eyes and they themselves were participants in one of the great turning points of that history.

It was at the battle of Gettysburg, in the opinion of most historians, that the fate of the Confederacy was really decided. Had Lee succeeded in defeating the Federal army under Meade, the path to Baltimore and Harrisburg and Philadelphia would have been opened to him. What is more, it is fairly certain that victory at this point would have led Great Britain, and following Britain's lead other European nations, to recognize the Richmond government.

Thus the war between the States might then have ended in quite different manner from what proved to be the case. And around this great "if" of history are crowded many other "ifs." Had Jeb Stuart kept closer in touch with Lee, had Longstreet been less opinionated and obstreperous, had the Confederate forces averted the fatal delay and attacked in force on June 30 or earlier on July 1, before Meade had been able to bring up reinforcements to Round Top and Cemetery Ridge, possibly Lee would have won the day.

But these speculations, while enchanting to the historian, do not change the essential fact that Lee's defeat at Gettysburg, honorable though it was, was perhaps the greatest turning point of the Civil War. From then on, as Lee himself anticipated when he embarked on his Pennsylvania campaign, the war became one in which the superior manpower, wealth and industrial strength of the North was bound, in the long run, to prove decisive. It did. Gettysburg was the first important step on the road to Appomattox.

The veterans bivouacked together, perhaps for the last time, on Gettysburg battlefield are the living witnesses of a past now embalmed in history and tradition, a past whose bitter memories have been healed by time. To one another those who wore the blue and those who wore the gray now extend the hand of friendship and fellowship. The spirit in which they meet is fittingly symbolized by the Eternal Light Peace Memorial which has been erected at Gettysburg "to the memory of every man, woman and child, North and South, who participated in any way in the War Between the States."

Surmounted by a perpetual flame the shaft bears the inscription: "Peace Eternal In a United Nation." That is a prayer which the American people fervently hope will become a reality; it is a promise which this and succeeding generations of Americans are called upon to fulfill.

"Good News Baits."

It had us stumped for a minute. We couldn't quite understand why the Virginia Salt Water Fishing Association should want to give a man a prize for catching bluefish. It sounded very much (if one may mix one's metaphors) like gilding the lily.

And then the significant fact was noted that at the blue fishing tournament at Old Point Comfort the awarding of prizes is to be followed by a banquet in which all will participate, winners and losers alike. Then all was made clear. We got the point, the good old point—comfort; comfort after adventure.

Troller to banqueter, silver spoon to silver fork, the bluefish runs its course of royal entertainment; a strong finish to a week-end.

All the time people are getting more dontgivadamish. We have just read of a girl who tears out pages of a book as she reads it, so she won't have any trouble finding her place when she lays it aside at intervals.

"Massachusetts joins the long list of States that outlaw heart balm." Pretty soon all a girl will get out of letting some big bad mans break her itsy-bitsy heart will be an itsy-bitsy broken heart.

Most likely you have observed that those who don't believe in hell are the ones who raise most of it.

"Curious Comparison."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Possibly the inclosed quotation from Macaulay may be of some assistance some day when you have another occasion to remark broken promises and the right to decide when they may be broken.

It came to me when reading your editorial "President And Primaries," of June 25, that there was a curious comparison between F. D. and Charles I. READER.

Washington, June 25.

[Inclosure.]

Lord Macaulay in his "History of England," Vol. I, Chapter 1, says of Charles I: "It would be unjust to deny that Charles had some of the qualities of a good and even of a great prince. He wrote and spoke . . . after the fashion of intelligent and well educated gentlemen. His taste in literature and art was excellent . . . his domestic life without blemish. Faithlessness was the chief cause of his disasters, and is the chief stain on his memory . . . But there is reason to believe that he was perfidious, not only from constitution and from habit, but also on principle. He seems to have learned from the theologians whom he most esteemed that between him and his subjects there could be nothing of the nature of mutual contract; that he could not, even if he would, divest himself of his despotic authority, and that, in every promise which he made there was an implied reservation that such promise might be broken in case of necessity, and that of the necessity he was the sole judge."

"Communist Sympathizers?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is a reply to the letter from Louis Bromfield and Frederick Thompson in your paper appealing for funds for wounded members of the International Brigade who are fighting for the so-called loyalist cause in Spain.

These men are worse than murderers—they went to Spain to kill for money. Now they want to come back and be heroes. Why not send them to Russia? They were fighting the Communist fight. In other words, they are Communist sympathizers. Why let them back in a country like ours, one that opposes Redism. They would only be mere termite agents of Stalin. We have enough of them now.

Thank God we still have Jersey City and Mayor Hague. They are not afraid to oppose the Reds. If Representatives Barnard and O'Connell think they are helping labor's cause in New Jersey, or any place, they are wrong. I belong to a union and I know they are a liability instead of an asset to us.

James Weldon Johnson.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I write to thank The Post for its fine editorial on the career of the Hon. James Weldon Johnson, poet and writer, in its issue of June 29.

Mr. Johnson's career in diplomatic service was deeply appreciated by the State Department in the words of the Hon. Wilbur Carr, head of the consular service, when he said, "He was an efficient diplomat and an honored and cultured gentleman." MANNY C. JAMES.

To "Non-Dog Lover."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "There ought to be a law" against baiting dog lovers into a frenzy by letters like the one signed "Non-Dog-Lover" in your issue of June 17. The person who wrote it evidently suffers from ennui, and as a delightful antidote has hit upon the idea of watching the discomfiture of thousands of dog owners. Too bad for the pleasure seeker in question that bear baiting and bull baiting are things of the past, and pit fighting is also outlawed. Denied the spectacle of dogs killed or mutilated in such innocent pastimes, his kindly nature must be fed by the writhing of human hearts in defense of their pets from his cataloguing of their worthlessness.

He didn't include enough counts in his indictment. Otherwise he might have convinced the reading public, if not the sentimental keepers of such nuisances. Suppose, for instance, he had stated the fact that a dog in the home reduces by one-fourth the premium that would be paid for burglary insurance on a dogless home, thus preventing struggling insurance companies from paying adequate dividends to their indigent stockholders. Then think of the poor, pitiable chicken thieves who could find fuller opportunities for their gainful occupation were there no noisy interruptions and discouraging bodily injuries. These two instances are enough to show the blighting effect of dogs on business and industry.

It is hardly necessary to mention the lamentable corruption of the genius of Byron, Kipling, Galsworthy, Maeterlinck, Sir Walter Scott, Sir Edwin Landseer and Senator Vest by their unconquerable love of dogs. Their weakness in this particular, and the piffle it produced, very greatly affects their fame, with a consequent loss to literature and art.

Next point is the moral contamination of the United States by filthy Alaskan gold brought out by dog teams. What sins those monsters will have to answer for at Judgment Day—a nation defiled and legions of souls lost.

Finally, if there were fewer dogs there would be fewer companions for children, who in turn could more easily abstain from the mirth and gayety so obnoxious to misanthropes. I feel sure such a consummation is devoutly to be wished by "Non-Dog Lover," who, as further proof of the worthlessness of the despicable creatures, may have the unpleasant assurance that, in case he were drowning, a dog would endeavor to save him. Death, of course, would be preferable to the touch of one of these "groveling parasites." But, alas! in moments of helplessness, our most cherished dislikes—in this case it might be "pet" aversions—are often ruthlessly overridden.

JAMES P. BRIGGS.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Federation of Civic Associations, in regular meeting, voted to express its sincere appreciation to those newspapers that published pictures of the June graduates of 1938 from Divisions 10 to 13 of the public schools of the District of Columbia.

It hopes the policy of indiscrimination will be adopted by those newspapers that have failed to recognize all of their loyal patrons and will hereafter offer without partiality the same courtesies to all who strive for advancement in the educational fields of the District of Columbia.

KENNETH H. CARTER.
Corresponding secretary.

Washington, June 29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We are indeed gratified with the editorial, "Versatility," which appeared in The Post of June 29.

Negroes everywhere mourn the loss of James Weldon Johnson, whose successful ventures have served to stimulate many of our youth toward being more than "just another Negro." The usually liberal policies of your paper help to give to our youth the knowledge that worthy deeds can often surpass racial barriers.

More On The Fireside Chat.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The more one ponders the President's last fireside chat the more apparent it is that his mentors are indulging in a puckish humor at the expense of their chief.

They allowed him to open his talk with the execrable joke: "Our Government, happily, is a democracy." Then he was prompted to rub salt into the cut by saying that he would not hound out of public life a statesman who differed from him "only once" if the difference in judgment was a conscientious one! A people who will tolerate, nay, applaud, that insolence, is for the time at least, lost to all sense of shame.

Arrogant, almost beyond belief, as that statement was, the facts are worse than indicated. Gillette did differ but once from the Administration and his political assassination was attempted and failed perhaps largely because the illiteracy of Iowa is but one-ninth of that of Florida, and the Iowa electorate are proportionately more intelligent.

The charge that the great employing corporations should not let their idle former servants go upon the relief rolls, but, should "take care" of them from the corporate reserves, is hardly matchable for ineptitude. Those relief rolls are supported with funds contributed in taxes by the corporations. Who has a better right to benefit from them? In pension fund administration it is a sound rule that one excluded from the fund benefits is entitled to the return of any contributions he may have made. If that equitable rule is invoked for the corporations, they could well afford to support their own "out-of-works."

Messrs. Corcoran and Cohen should never allow the President to refer to the railroad crisis. If the President had not allowed himself to be put in bondage by the acceptance of a half a million from the labor treasury, he would not have been forced to permit irresponsible demagogues to write the rail companies' pay sheets, regardless of their inability to meet excessive wage bills. Silence would be the wiser course in the matter of the rail crisis. Mr. Roosevelt's ineffectual tear shed over the inability of Congress to help the companies, an inability for which he is responsible, does not evoke the response he fondly imagines.

It was so painfully obvious that the "chat" was intended for those whose intelligence was of the lower quota brackets, that any intelligent person listening in felt like an eavesdropper.

For example, our mounting prosperity is sought to be proved by showing that the gross national income, in depreciated dollars, was greater in 1937 than in 1932. A truer yardstick will be the unemployment and relief rolls statistics.

Another point was the mounting national debt and the ever-increasing cost of Roosevelt government—a cost which will reach appalling heights as the cost of keeping the White House pets in office increases with the public consciousness of their unworthiness. The huge sum of $306,000,000 had to be spent in one State alone to secure the return to the Senate of the negligible Alben Barkley. That sum is filched from the pockets of dwellers in the remote hamlets of Maine and Oregon. It was contributed to by businessmen of New York and Chicago who would feel outraged if their corporations were called upon to pay $200 a month for the services of the Kentucky "yes man."

HOWARD PITCHER OKIE.

Washington, June 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Another fireside chat has passed into history and another attempt has been made by the "head of the Government" to convince his hearers that New Deal moonshine is an innocuous beverage cheap at any price, especially when expressed in the high billions—the peerless pap for all that aileth man and beast, or nose-ring political rubber stamp.

These fireside chats started out to be just what the name implied. Frank, open talk innocent of propaganda or ulterior motive. Get-togethers with the peasantry, the forgotten, the underprivileged, even the much castigated royalist—the whole "happy days" congregation and ensemble.

But with the reduced frequency of the chats a change became noticeable. They became a well-calculated final resort whereby to put over the dance of the winds called the New Deal. To promise economies that had no hope. To justify the reverse of pledges given. To gain from the subsidized gullible sanction for any scheme, no matter how half-baked or doomed in advance to failure, so long as it carried the White House "I want this" tag. WALTER BAHNSEN.

The Post Impressionist

Dinner From 8.

THE dial hand of the hotel elevator rested at eight.

The group lined in a semicircle about the elevator door, jostled gently about, occasionally shifted its weight from one foot to the other, joked a bit here, joked a bit there, laughed somewhat at intervals—but ever kept one eye focused on that dial hand, still resting at eight.

That resting was indicative. We could tell by the somewhat anxious expression on the faces of the guards standing about. The quiet joking, the subdued titter gradually died away. The atmosphere tingled with hopeful expectancy for, as the moments passed and number eight of the dial still held at rest the hand which told off the floors of the great house when the elevator made its runs down and up and up and down, all knew the zero hour was approaching.

Suspense under such assuring indications was pure joy. The little muscle pains vanished from the limbs of those who had stood for an hour. If the picture Milan on the lady in front seemed to obscure the vision of the dignified gentleman in the rear, she graciously doffed the thing—for what did a mere hat matter?

Akin to this portentous moment was the breathless joy when we were children years ago, at hearing the familiar trot of the family horse long before our eyes could see our parents rounding the bend on their homeward trek from their Saturday afternoon shopping in the country village. The first glimpse of the far-distant ocean liner, carrying for us the precious cargo of a loved one returning from tours abroad. On the overwhelming gladness of the intelligence that the first born had arrived, and all was well.

* * *

A whisper now—and that whisper was mentally murmured by everyone in that waiting throng, for the group now had grown to the dimensions of a throng. A whispered "It's coming."

The dial hand struck seven, then six, five, four. It's coming . . . it's coming . . . it's at one! It stood still, and so did our hearts. A flash of dense quiet. Impenetrable, immovable, blank, was the sheet of thick metal that was the elevator door, and so was the throng that stood watching.

Gorgeous suspense!

Gently the door chuggled with movement . . . it glided open . . . wide . . . and there in all its beauty was the very thing we had been waiting for. A kindly, hushed and gentle wave of delight burst over the throng. There it was. The blossom from heaven—the early dew on the blossom—the rare fragrance of the blossom—the modest blush of the unspoiled blossom—the vibrating, healthy radiant, colorful, perfect blossom, was there.

* * *

It had arrived, and it did not disappoint. It was all we had anticipated and volumes more. It was luxuriant—our blossom from heaven—luxuriant in its simple, modest wholesome perfection, with every evidence that its roots were deeply grounded in proper soil, and that the soil was plentifully cultivated.

"And a little child shall lead them."

Our blossom was a little child—and the little child was Shirley Temple.

She with her parents had come down from their apartment for dinner in the great hotel dining room. Several hundred admirers had gathered to catch a glimpse of her in person. She wore a dainty light blue frock with square white collar, white shoes and socks. Her hair was in snug curls about her head.

BERDINE NILLISOR.

"Dogs, Dogs, Dogs . . ."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been reading with interest the communications appearing in The Post on the merits and demerits of dog ownership.

I own a dog and live in a small apartment house. Although I take more than usual precautions that my dog shall not be a nuisance to the neighbors, I have received a number of complaints about him, and they are usually delivered in a most belligerent fashion. I find that the persons who are the most annoying to others are the chief complainants.

My experience has been that those who are most careful about annoying their neighbors have the least disparaging things to say about dogs, and vice versa.

ANOTHER DOG LOVER.

Washington, June 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dogs, dogs, dogs, dogs, dogs, dogs, dogs! I am a bit prejudiced because thrice recently I have been bitten by the precious pups that too often usurp the place in family life normally intended for children. Dogs, for all their usefulness, can become positive pests.

W. S. MEAD.

Washington, June 22.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a former resident of Washington and life-long reader of The Post, I wish to say that the Capital deserves credit for its splendid entries of pedigreed dogs at the country's many kennel exhibitions, particularly the recent national show at New York City.

May it ever be in the fore in this respect. As a trainer of dogs, I say: "Nothing is too good for man's best friend." A. C. SELLS.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Idea Of The Month.

A college graduate, yes, that's me,
A popular athlete with my degree;
I wish you'd help me if you could,
I know, my friend, I could make good.
B. K. Box 164, News Office.

Well, there's an idea! Why should the classified ads. remain so drab through the years. Let's jazz 'em up:

* * * *

College grad with sheepskin new
Wants some work not hard to do;
Willing when things are rather dear
To teach the boss a college cheer.

* * * *

WANTED: Position on good pay;
Will work a little every day;
Been in college since '28—
They wouldn't let me graduate!

* * * *

Princeton grad, of brain and brawn,
Will mind the baby, mow the lawn,
Wash the dishes or drive the fliv . . .
A college man has gotta live!

* * * *

Attention: I'm a Harvard man;
Will throw in splendid coat of tan
With vigor and compelling smile,
A mandolin and a lot of style.

* * * *

NOTICE: My days were short at school,
But still I am nobody's fool;
I'd like a job at the highest pay.
With beach and golf not far away.

* * * *

POSITION WANTED: Son of Yale
Needs to have a little kale;
Will open mail and mind the phone,
Yodel and play the slide trombone.

* * * *

GIRL who got degree at Smith
Wants a soft position with
Firm whose hours ain't too long;
She's willing but she isn't strong.

* * * *

STRONG youth with nothing but degrees
Must get a job, so help him, please!
Meant to stay home for a year or two
But popper flatly says "I'm through!"

WHY NOT?

Stocks have gone up so fast that some people think the PWA must have put $10,000,000 into buying up surplus common stocks, too.

We know a man who will refuse to accept any free pants from the Government unless it throws in suspenders.

COUNTRY DAWN.

First the long hush
Of the young morning air.
Then faint hummings
That quiver and bear
The birds! Dawn Chorus.
Below them the stir
Of creeping things
Under poplar and fir.
The stamping of impatient horses—
And hark!
The high crackling snap
Of a dog's fretful bark!

Unclaimed Bank Accounts.

A CALL for assistance, published simultaneously in all the newspapers of New York City, came from an unexpected source—the city's largest mutual savings bank. It drew attention to a long list of depositor-owners of that bank who had forgotten, or ignored, deposits totaling $300,000. These were men and women who had "laid up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come," but had failed to recall the sum held for them, or to tell their heirs where to find it. Silent people these, from whom no word had been received; who had disappeared so completely that the hunting down of all elues by bank authorities had finally culminated in this unusual request.

Such an appeal was not only a successful gesture; it set a precedent which savings banks generally were willing to follow in such a hurry that the repercussions extended throughout the State. Old, old record departments came awake, with clouds of names shaken out of ancient files, each one representing a real person for whom a futile search had been made.

* * * *

SOME IDEA of the number of these long-lost depositors may be gained from the fact that one of the oldest savings institutions, the Bank for Savings, chartered in 1819, required 24 columns of an evening paper to record its unfound claimants to funds left with the bank, and the Union Dime Savings Bank had 3,700 depositors who never claimed sums amounting to $250,000. The Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank, however, topped that figure with nearly $500,000; and the Seamen's Bank for Savings, long the target of the sightseeing guide who pointed it out as "holding millions of dollars belonging to sailors lost at sea," actually held $300,000 of unclaimed money.

Among the missing of the Central Savings Bank was the eighth depositor to open an account during the first day of the bank's business in 1859. He was among 2,266 lost actors, merchants, attorneys, educators, housewives, labor leaders and depositors who had become soldiers in the Civil War and had given their service units as their last address.

The accumulated compound-interest dividends had increased the initial capital deposited in one account from $754 to $7,048—and it was collected!

It would seem inevitable that the same name should be included in more than one list, as savings banks in New York are limited in the amount they may accept from a single depositor and may have but one branch bank. The private secretary of one very active lawyer, after reading his name in two lists published, found six bankbooks of different banks wrapped and tied in a 20-year-old newspaper deep in one of the recesses of his safe. He did not remember having any of them. His collection was nothing compared with that of the traveling man whose hobby had been "a bank account in every city visited." His personal effects disclosed that the possessed 500 passbooks, some containing but a single entry.

THESE MONEYS, if unclaimed, and those held by the various banking institutions in the State (totaling $5,413,790) which had not been claimed over a period of 22 years by July, 1937, were designated as abandoned accounts, and in accordance with a new State banking law were turned over to the State comptroller on December 1, 1937. Previous to this there had been no provision for the disposal of these funds.

Adventurers and veterans of wars have returned to find their former bank closed, and, without making any inquiries which would direct them to the State Banking Department, they have hastily concluded that their money was "closed out," too. Undoubtedly bank mergers have left hundreds of depositors unfamiliar with the new name of their bank. Sometimes old people die without making a will, perhaps without possessing a single relative, and feel that the bank should keep their small hoard in return for protecting it.

Again, families have been wiped out by accidents at sea and by automobile fatalities, while other families have been so busy living that the small trust funds created by young parents have become forgotten as the children have grown up and opened accounts of their own.

Even the depression failed to stir the memory of some of these men and women. A practicing physician absolutely refused a sum of money which had been accumulating compound interest for him in the bank where he left $50 when a student at college. He says he does not believe there is such a sum belonging to him.

At Gettysburg

Scholar Analyzes Reasons For Lee Defeat In Pennsylvania, Concluding Lack Of Co-ordination Basic.

Following are excerpts from Douglas Southall Freeman's prize biography, "R. E. Lee," reprinted here by special permission of the publishers, Charles Scribner's Sons.

DESPITE Lee's example and influence, criticism of the Confederate operations at Gettysburg was not silenced in 1863 and has been expressed at intervals ever since. Where confined to the actual military details of the campaign, this criticism is easily analyzed, for no other American battle has been so fully studied, and concerning none is there more general agreement on the specific reasons for the failure of the losing army.

The invasion itself was, of course, a daring move, but, in the circumstances that Lee faced, politically and in a military sense, it probably was justified. The first mistake was in connection with Stuart's operations. To recapitulate this point, Lee intended to allow his cavalry commander latitude as to where he should enter Maryland. He is not to be blamed for giving Stuart discretion, nor is Stuart justly subject to censure for exercising it. But the Beau Sabreur of the South, by pushing on after he had encountered resistance east of the Bull Run mountains, violated orders and deprived Lee of his services when most needed. Once in Pennsylvania, Lee's operations were handicapped not only because he lacked sufficient cavalry, but also because he did not have Stuart at hand. He had become dependent upon that officer for information of the enemy's position and plans and, in Stuart's absence, he had no satisfactory form of military intelligence.

It is not enough to say with Gen. Early, in exculpation of Stuart, that Lee found the enemy in spite of the absence of his cavalry. Had "Jeb" Stuart been at hand, Lee would have had early information of the advance of the Federals and either would have outfooted them to Gettysburg or would have known enough about their great strength to refrain from attacking as he did. The injudicious employment of the Confederate horse during the Gettysburg campaign was responsible for most of the other mistakes on the Southern side.

Ewell's Hesitancy Now Declared Costly.

THE SECOND REASON for the Confederate defeat manifestly was the failure of Ewell to take Cemetery Hill when Lee suggested, after the Federal defeat on the afternoon of July 1, that he attack it. Had Ewell thrown Early forward, without waiting for Johnson, he probably could have taken the hill at any time prior to 4 p. m. or perhaps to 4:30. Ewell hesitated because he was unfamiliar with Lee's methods and had been trained in a different school of command. Jackson, who had always directed Ewell's operations, had been uniformly explicit in his orders and had never allowed discretion unless compelled to do so; Lee always trusted the tactical judgment of his principal subordinates unless he had to be peremptory.

The third reason for defeat was the extent of the Confederate line and the resultant thinness. Lee's front on the second day, from Hood's right, opposite Round Top, to the left of Johnson, was slightly more than 5 miles in length. Communication between the flanks was slow and difficult. Co-ordination of attack was almost impossible with a limited staff. Lee should have held to the decision reached late on the afternoon of the 1st and considered again on the morning of the 2d. He should have abandoned all attempts against the Culps Hill position. By concentrating his attacks from Cemetery Hill to Round Top, he would have increased the offensive strength of his line by at least one-third. In doing this, he would not have subjected himself to a dangerous enfilade from Cemetery Hill, because he had sufficient artillery to put that hill under cross fire from Seminary Ridge and from Gettysburg. Lee finally discarded the plan of shortening his line on the representation of Ewell that Johnson could take Culps Hill—an instance where the advantage that would certainly have resulted from a concentrated attack was put aside for the uncertainty of a coup on the flank.

Longstreet Rebuffed In Strategy Proposal.

THE FOURTH REASON for the defeat was the state of mind of the responsible Confederate commanders. On July 2, Longstreet was disgruntled because Lee refused to take his advice for a tactical defensive. Determined, apparently, to force a situation in which his plan would have to be adopted in spite of Lee, he delayed the attack on the right until Cemetery Ridge was crowded with men, whereas if he had attacked early in the morning, as Lee intended, he probably could have stormed that position and assuredly could have taken Round Top.

But this indictment of Longstreet does not relieve Lee of all blame for the failure on the second day at Gettysburg. His greatest weakness as a soldier was displayed along with Longstreet's; for when Longstreet sulked, Lee's temperament was such that he could not bring himself either to shake Longstreet out of his bad humor by a sharp order or to take direction of the field when Longstreet delayed. No candid critic of the battle can follow the events of that fateful morning and not have a feeling that Lee virtually surrendered to Longstreet, who obeyed only when he could no longer find an excuse for delay.

The conclusion is inevitable, moreover, that Lee allowed operations to drift on the morning of the 2d, not only because he would not deal sternly with Longstreet but also because he placed such unquestioning reliance on his army that he believed the men in the ranks could redeem Longstreet's delay. If Longstreet was insubordinate, Lee was overconfident. This psychological factor of the overconfidence of the commanding general is almost of sufficient importance to be regarded as a separate reason for the Confederate defeat.

The mind of Ewell was similarly at fault on July 2. Although he had then been given his direct orders by Lee in person, Ewell either did not comprehend the importance of the task assigned him or else he was unable to co-ordinate the attacks of his three divisions, two of which were under commanders almost as unfamiliar with their duties as he was. Ewell's attacks were those of Lee at Malvern Hill, or those of McClellan at Sharpsburg, isolated, disjointed and ineffective. Had Early and Rodes engaged when Johnson made his assault, there is at least a probability that Early could have held Cemetery Hill.

Unco-ordinated Army Scattered Its Force.

FIFTH and most fundamental among the reasons for Lee's failure at Gettysburg was the general lack by the reorganized army of co-ordination in attack.

Lack of co-ordination was displayed in the artillery as well. So much has been written of the volume of the fire delivered against Cemetery Ridge that few students of the battle have stopped to count the batteries that were not utilized. Col. Jennings C. Wise has computed that 56 of Lee's field pieces were not employed at all on July 3, and that 80 of the 84 guns of the Second and Third Corps were "brought into action on a mathematically straight line, parallel to the position of the enemy and constantly increasing in range therefrom to the left or north." Nearly the whole value of converging fire was neglected.

Furthermore, the Confederates lost the greatest opportunity of the battle when they did not dispose their artillery to blast the Federals from Cemetery Hill.

Southern critics of Gettysburg, admitting all these mistakes, have been wont to say that, while each error was serious, the battle would not have been lost if any one of the blunders had been avoided. There is a probability at least as strong that few of the mistakes would have occurred if Jackson had not died and a reorganization of the army had not thereby been made necessary.

Then it was that Lee was compelled to place two-thirds of the troops under corps commanders who had never directed that many men in battle; then it was that the sentimental demand of the South led him to put at the head of the reduced Second Corps the gallant Ewell, who had never served directly under Lee and was unfamiliar with his discretionary methods; then it was that new division commanders were chosen; then it was that the staff, which was always too small, was divided among generals who were unacquainted with the staff personnel, with the troops and even with the field officers; then it was that Longstreet, by the ill-chance of war, was cast for the role of the irreplaceable Jackson and became the appointed leader of the column of attack, the duty, of all others, for which he was least suited.

Read in the light of the aftermath, the story of the reorganization of May, 1863, becomes one of the major tragedies of the Confederacy and explains why the death of Jackson was the turning point in the history of the Army of Northern Virginia.

Agnes Smedley

By Lewis Gannett

Her Life With The Chinese Reds.

THIS AGNES SMEDLEY who writes "China Fights Back" (Vanguard, $2.50) is surely one of the remarkable women of our time. And because there is more Agnes Smedley in this, her third book about the Red armies of China, than in its predecessors, it is the best book Agnes Smedley has written since that amazing autobiographical "novel," "Daughter of Earth," which, after 10 years, still seems to me the most impressive of American women's autobiographies.

For this is the story of an American woman, born in a Missouri log cabin, brought up in a Colorado mining camp embittered by life in Texas and California and New York, who, after close to 20 years of wandering, has found in life with one of China's barefoot armies a peace which almost passes understanding. Her previous books on China were written in Shanghai; though filled with a passion for the extraordinary feats of China's Red armies, they were stories told at second hand. This book is first-hand stuff, the diary of a participant and of a partisan.

Agnes Smedley is a fanatic. She makes no pretense of being an objective observer, calmly sitting on a fence and reporting with detachment. When an American military attache accused her of partiality, she retorted: "Of course I am not impartial, and make no such pretense. Yet, I do not lie, do not distort, do not misrepresent. I merely tell what I see with my own eyes and experience day by day." This is true, and she has seen things which no other American, man or woman, has seen.

* * * *

NO ONE WILL EVER make of Agnes Smedley a romantic figure such as Vincent Sheean made of Rayna Prohme, the flaming, lovely, red-haired heroine of "Personal History," who, 11 years ago, played in China a part very like that played by Agnes Smedley today. A harsher flame burns in Agnes Smedley, but the fire is as authentic. She has won the confidence of Chinese, who trust no other foreigner, both generals and coolies. Whether walking or riding horseback, or, with her back sprained, riding in a stretcher, she has traveled with those Red armies, which only two other foreign writers—James Bertram, author of "First Act in China," and Edgar Snow, author of "Red Star Over China"—have seen. And she has lived the life of those armies as even those men did not; she has been their spokesman, in print and, on occasion, over the radio. She is, perhaps, the best-hated woman in China today; native or foreign; and, as a few pages of this book testify, she is one of the best haters.

If you want the feeling of the war in China, not as it is fought on the spectacular fronts where the big guns thunder, but in the lonely mountains where small bands of men harass the Japanese lines of communication, attacking, retreating and preaching a gospel of a new China, you will find it in "China Fights Back." This is the story of that Eighth Route Army, which, until the comic kidnaping of a president, was China's Red Army, the enemy of the "republic"—of that army which in "the long march" around the fringes of China performed a modern military miracle which, skilled in the technique of guerrilla warfare, may possibly determine the fate of China—and of Japan.

You read of rains in the loess country, stopping Japanese advances. "Rains"—you think of American rain, in our grass-grown countryside. But in this book you see, through Agnes Smedley's eyes, whole roadbeds slipping away, mountainsides pouring into the valleys, rivers of mud flowing across what had been farm land. You live with her in a cave in a mountain of loess; the rain seeps through; the sleeping American woman finds herself with a mouthful of rich, yellow earth. Those bare words, "floods" and "famine," take on a terrible emotional meaning.

* * * *

HERE, TOO, YOU SEE the peasant boys of China's new armies—staring open-eyed at their first motor trucks, fingering an electric switch light with awe in their eyes, gazing seriously at their first "movie." (It is "Diamond Jim," and they take it literally as a true picture of a vague land across the sea.) You see them wounded, with an 18-year-old graduate of a sort of Boy Scout first-aid course binding their wounds—until the bandages give out. You wander with them at night across treeless hills, led by an illiterate peasant clad in China's eternal blue denim pajamas.

You meet, too, in all their pompous insanity some of China's famous old-style generals, and, in their pathetic earnestness, the new leaders. Here is Gen. Yen, for 20 years known as the "model Governor" of Shansi, still, at the eleventh hour, expecting succor from a revolt in the Japanese Army. Here is his lieutenant, Fu Tso-yi, almost as confident but fighting to the end, so that when the Japanese finally captured Taiyuan they took a city on whose walls were frozen streams of the blood of its defenders. And here are the Eighth Route commanders, Mao Tse-tung, Chu Teh, Lin Piao, and the rest, over-confident, too, but with a technique by which half-armed men did actually stop the movement of Japan's mechanized machine; and with a faith in their land which may yet write a new page of history.

Agnes Smedley says that the months with that array were the happiest days of her life. You understand why as you read. You understand how, when Chu Peh asked her, only last January, to leave his army and go to Hankow, she replied in the old Biblical words: "Entreat me not to leave thee." Hysterical? A little; but with that ragged army Agnes Smedley has found a democratic satisfaction which she had not felt in the backwoods of Missouri, the coal fields of Colorado, or in the cosmopolitan city of Shanghai. Life has been rough on this American woman; it has left her harder than the Chinese generals with whom she works—she was readier than they to condemn "traitors" to death; but she has been ready, as her narrative movingly reveals, to pay the last full price of her own convictions.

Of such stuff, in all ages, martyrs have been made. Martyrs can never have been comfortable people to have around the house. But they have made history, and literature.

LATELY WE MET Miss Bella da Costa Green and a legal light, Mr. Lumb, at a lunch with Gutzon and Mary Borglum . . . Mr. Lumb recommended that we should read "The Promises Men Live By," which was a pleasing suggestion . . . And Miss Green asked first if we minded her mentioning a book, and then, when we assured her we didn't mind at all, she said she had liked: "Brother Petroc's Return."

SO DID WE . . . And we sent our copy to Father Jerome, of the Benedictines, in Florida, and got back a literary note with a horticultural flavor . . . "The closest I ever got to botany," Father Jerome remarks, "was many years ago when I wrote to John Burroughs that our papaya (Carica papaya) had frozen to the ground and then came back from the root of a monoecious tree. He seemed interested and answered asking if our papaya improved with age; if it did, he would spend his winters in Florida instead of in Honolulu. I had to report that our Florida papayas seemed to deteriorate with age; at least, they did just that on our premises."

WE WERE a little taken aback by Burroughs' epicurean taste and his wintering in a warm climate, but probably naturalists also deteriorate with age . . . It has most certainly produced no improvement in ourself . . . Martin Spurns Compromise in Car Union Row

U. A. W. Head Rejects Plan After Parley With Lewis in D. C.

By the United Press.

Homer Martin, president of the strife-torn United Automobile Workers of America, snapped a curt "absolutely not" last night to suggestions that he compromise the fierce factional row in his union.

Emerging from a 90-minute conference with Chairman John L. Lewis and Vice Chairman Philip Murray of the Committee for Industrial Organization, Martin said that he had "absolutely no intention of revoking the suspensions" of the four U. A. M. vice presidents and secretary-treasurer whom he removed from office recently.

Trial Set for July 18.

He discounted reports that Lewis had asked that the five officers be reinstated to bring peace to the union before the factional struggle destroys it.

"Mr. Lewis made no suggestions for settling the dispute," Martin said.

Lewis emerged from the conference room while Martin still was talking and said "I have nothing to say" even before he had been questioned.

Martin said the five officers would go on trial July 18 before the 19 remaining members of the international executive board. He controls 13 of the 19 votes.

The officers are charged with "conduct unbecoming an international officer" but Martin refused to make public the specific complaint. He said that that was up to the suspended officers—Vice Presidents Richard T. Frankensteen, Walter N. Wells, Ed Hall, Wyndham Mortimer and Secretary-Treasurer George Addes.

Claims Communists Active.

In Detroit, they issued a joint statement refusing to make the charges public but asserting they "are an insult to the intelligence of the entire membership of the union."

"The mountain has labored for weeks and the most ludicrous little mouse has crawled forth," the ousted officials said.

Martin declared that the communist Party has been active in the factional fight and when a reporter asked on which side, he replied: "There's one thing about it—they are not active for me."

Although Lewis reiterated his refusal to comment on the struggle with the C. I. O.'s fourth largest union, it was learned from usually reliable sources that he has been receiving from 6 to 10 letters a day from U. A. W. locals. Of these, the United Press' informant said, only two supported Martin.

If Martin succeeds in formally removing the five officers, a special convention is regarded as inevitable. If it is held, an attempt is expected to be made to oust Martin and replace him with Frankensteen or Walter Reuther, president of the powerful West Side local in Detroit.

The ousted officers claim the support of 70 per cent of the union locals. Martin's supporters have advanced no estimate of their own strength.

Liquor Expected To Go Up in U.S. By 10 Cts. a Quart

A general increase throughout the Nation of 10 cents a quart in the price of liquor was predicted yesterday by Manuel J. Davis, general counsel of the District of Columbia Retail Liquor Dealers Association.

Enactment of the revenue bill of 1938 and the recently passed floor tax bill will bring about the increase in price, Davis said. Prices probably will rise during this month.

The District, Maryland and Virginia will be affected by the increase, along with other States where liquor is sold, Davis, who also is public relations counsel for the National Retail Liquor Package Stores Association, asserted.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Observation.

In the heat and hurly-burly of argument and contention over the executive orders of June 24, when all manner of unofficial interpretation and explanation is being made on the involved passages, Federal personnel, for their own peace of mind, should remember one thing:

No one can tell you exactly how the orders will be applied. The orders may be literally taken apart by all the guessers, analysed and even put to the acids of statistics, and still no one can say how the orders will be applied, much less how effective they will be in any given circumstance. It is all a matter now of guess.

It is a matter of guess for a very obvious reason: The orders purposely were made flexible, so as to be bent from anticipated situations to unanticipated conditions. The orders are wide open for perhaps dozens of interpretations by either the Comptroller General or the Attorney General.

And it is known that the Civil Service Commission will not issue a clear, emphatic and clarifying statement on the orders for many days to come—if ever. This because the orders will be undergoing change and interpretations from officials for many days to come. It would be pretty futile for the commission, let us say, to burst forth with the wanted one and official clarifying statement, for the simple reason that the final word is not with the commission.

Two high officials, Samuel H. Ordway, of the Civil Service Commission, and Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator, were invited to give the answers at a meeting of Federal employes Wednesday night in the Interior Department Auditorium. After much talk, the chairman of the meeting, Arthur Stein, posed a tremendous list of questions on how the orders would affect WPA employes. If either the commissioner or the deputy administrator could answer any satisfactorily, the answers weren't audible to a well-bent ear.

After a few well-tempered rounds, the deputy administrator slunk up a side aisle and departed, perhaps to search the administrative clauses of his heart on a walk home through the Washington night. The commissioner sat it through on the rostrum, unable to predict who would win in any given round.

To date, the commissioner has been called to two meetings to answer questions, to say each time that the orders are so flexible no man, at the moment, can competently discuss them. Everyone can debate them—and there is the point. You must take whatever arguments you hear with lifted eyebrow and a strangling dose of salt. And when all the arguments are closed, you can look the argurers in the face and say:

"I know as much about it right now as you do."

Pertinent Notes.

There have been many calls for the complete text of the executive orders, the callers saying that copies are difficult to obtain. For your information, the current issue of the Government Standard, the A. F. G. E.'s official paper, carries the complete text . . . Some of the additional powers granted the Civil Service Commission by the new orders: The withholding of pay from employes occupying positions contrary to any civil service regulation and from those engaging in political activity—The commission may now require any testimony or evidence to be given under oath . . . One of the chief complaints now heard and which the projected personnel bodies might correct bears on the closing of personnel files to employes. In those files, workers are tried and convicted oftimes without the worker ever knowing that a trial and conviction has taken place . . .

Life Goes On.

And on to other subjects for a happy change: The Union Playhouse is in the midst of organizing an orchestra and a mixed choral group, we learn from Lee H. Shugar, the Playhouse director. Both groups, he says, will be part of the Playhouse staff and will assist in all performances. Federal people wishing to join either group may contact Room 604 at 710 Fourteenth street northwest. Incidentally, the fifth performance of the Playhouse will be held the latter part of this month . . . Roy L. Sheridan, secretary to the Third Assistant Postmaster General, is spending his vacation at his home in Missouri . . .

Newcomers to FCA are Edriz W. Smith, of Berkeley, Calif., to the Credit Union Section; Joseph F. Weckerle, of Hempstead, N. Y., and Thomas W. Lion, jr., of Manassas, Va., to the Administrative Division, Mail Section . . . At the meeting the other night Commissioner Ordway stated a broad policy in connection with the executive orders. The orders, he said in effect, are not calculated to oust anyone from his job; if you are qualified for the job and have demonstrated your fitness, it is the broad intent of the orders that you be retained, he inferred.

$527,838 in Orders Allotted by Navy

The Navy Department yesterday awarded contracts totaling $527,838 for construction and repair at various shore stations.

An order for a $13,560 air compressor to be installed at the Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla., went to the Ingersoll-Rand Co., 1627 K street northwest. Allen Pope, 1405 K street northwest, received an award for $2,500 for work on the 600-yard rifle range at the Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md.

A $4,145 contract for repair of plumbing at the Marine Barracks here was granted to William Busenius, Inc., of Baltimore.

The largest contract, valued at $366,369, for improvement and surfacing the landing field at the Naval Operating Base, Norfolk, Va., was given to F. D. Cline & Leon Ellis, of Greensboro, N. C.

$1,800,000 Deficit Ends Year for D.C.

The District closed its account book yesterday for the past fiscal year with a deficit of an estimated $1,800,000, all of which was anticipated, officials stated.

Failure of the business privilege tax returns to come up to expectations was largely to blame for the red figures, they said.

District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan said it would be several weeks before the actual deficit will be tabulated. The deficit for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1937, was in the neighborhood of $3,000,000.

Horton Builds And Builds to Fill His Acres

Comedian Has Run Garage Into Combination Home and Industrial Plant.

By Frederick C. Othman.

By the United Press.

Encino, Calif., June 30.—We had lunch today with the squire of San Fernando Valley in a house which the movies built, room by room.

The squire is Edward Everett Horton, the comedian. His house is such a diggings as nobody anywhere could possibly conceive. Horton didn't conceive it himself. It just grew.

"And I decided that every time I completed a picture, I'd build an addition," he said.

The only trouble was that Horton never realized he'd be in such demand. He's worked in film after film and that's resulted in room after room, a complete woodworking establishment, a couple of swimming pools, stables, a community center and other establishments entirely too numerous to mention.

The garage he turned into a living room years ago. Now its the entrance hall to a house which long ago had Horton's architect tearing his hair. The architect finally resigned before losing his mind, but Horton calmly continued to build.

Guests Lost for Days!

The house looks simple enough from the outside. Inside it's a series of rooms, staircases, hallways, balconies, banquet halls, and whatnot, all handsomely furnished and comfortable looking, but so involved that strangers have been known to be lost in it for days.

Newest addition is Horton's living room, a gigantic wood-paneled chamber featured by two handsome fireplaces, one on either side.

"I bought those fireplaces some time ago," he said, "but they just didn't seem to look right in any room I had. So I built another room and installed the fireplaces. They still didn't look right. They needed wall paneling to set them off."

Did he buy some veneer and order it applied? Not Horton. He was behind in his building schedule, so he built a planing mill back of the stables. He installed second hand machinery, hired a cabinet maker and built his panels in his own plant.

That completed the house. There wasn't much else Horton could do to it, so he started building adjacent structures. He erected kennels for his 16 dogs, built a milk house for his cows, installed a theater where his old barn had been, dug two swimming pools—one deep and the other shallow for children—and still the movie money was coming in.

Home-Made Hurricanes.

Horton either had to continue building or break his pledge with himself. He erected a brick terrace and then decided to cover it with a great canopy of striped awning.

On this terrace the squire sits of an afternoon when he's not making pictures. It frequently is hot in Encino, but not on Horton's terrace. He has two wind machines to keep the breezes going. He can have a hurricane at the touch of a switch.

He's contemplating vaguely the building of some old English cottages on the other side of his acres and install a colony of British cloth weavers. But that's far in the future.

This description of the squire's house would seem to indicate almost anything about the squire himself. Truth is, he's perfectly sane, happy and healthy. Furthermore, he's a bachelor and needs something to keep him busy. His building hobby does it.

'The Barker'

Ringling Brothers- Barnum and Bailey Circus may have folded up this week, but not Col. Gowdy's Big City Shows. "The Barker," Nifty Miller himself, ballyhooed the big show on schedule Wednesday night to a crowd of nearly 3,000 at the National Sylvan Theater on the Monument Grounds, where Kenyon Nicholson's popular play on the vicissitudes of carnival life was performed by the Wilson Windjammers.

It is a decade since Walter Huston and Claudette Colbert created the leading roles on Broadway and it is dobutful if they ever played to a more good-natured audience than Forney Reese's charges did last night.

From the play or the film, you may recall that Nifty Miller, the peppery "barker" of the title, is an ingrained showman, but seeks better things for his son, Chris. He talks often of how he wants him to become a fine lawyer and not a canvass tout like himself. But Chris arrives from his grandfather's farm all set to spend the summer with the circus. The show's owner, Col. Gowdy, persuades the reluctant Nifty to let the boy stay on as a hand with the outfit. As a good paternal example, Nifty not only gives up his old habits, but also his old girl, Carrie, the Hawaiian dancer. Naturally the lass who shakes a wicked shredded wheat is irked and with a fitting pecuniary insult she gets her friend Lou, the snake charmer, to try her wiles on the young lad and win him from his father. Chris not only falls for her charms, but also imparts to that lady with a past some of his own disarming sincerity. When Chris and Lou marry and leave for Chicago, Nifty is completely broken up, but just as it was the show that brought about his misfortune, it is the show that saves him from despair and in the end we see him back at his old job as the Barker, knowing full well that he will take back the hay-shaker, Carrie.

William Barbee, young athlete about town, played the title role with a vim and earnestnes that was convincing. As Carrie, Therese Pekin was as properly hateful as a pretty young girl in a wig can be. It was quite obvious that Lou, as played by Valerie Turner, could charm not only snakes. Larry Lawrence was a stalwart son and Director Reese himself appeared as Col. Gowdy with much appropriate blustering. As a middle-aged fortune-teller, Nellie Seewald got her laughs neatly. Frank Anderson as Hap, Nifty's assistant, and Leslie Earp, as the sailor turned tatoo artist, clicked in their scenes. John Giuffre, Raymond Worthmiller, Chris Clayton, Philip Tomalin and Jane Lawrence completed the cast.

Open-Air, Parking Playhouse Building on Richmond Highway; 'Henry VIII' Femmes Go Comic; Also Miss Sullavan; New Play at Barter; Notes of the Theater.

WHEN, as and if all of the summer projects now in contemplation reach the point of active operation, Washington will find itself the hub of an unusual diversity of hot weather theatrical activities.

With the Roadside Theater barging along through one of its most successful seasons with revivals of rich and rare old melodramas, out in the "old red barn" on the Rockville pike beyond Bethesda; with the Cross Roads Theater, just over the way at Bailey's Cross Roads in Virginia, meeting with equal success in a series of productions of more modern plays, and Stephen E. Cochran's Olney Theater venture, combining theater, Academy of Stage Training and refectory scheduled to open on July 11 with visiting stars in both old and new plays, provision for the Capital's summertime entertainment would seem to be reasonably complete. But something new is coming along to add still further variety to amusement fare within easy reach of Washington palates.

BELL.

On the Richmond highway, 3 miles south of Alexandria, Va., there is coming into being a new sort of motion picture "palace"—new, that is, to this vicinity, but an old story in New England. It is the latest addition to the chain of open-air picture "theaters" operated by the E. M. Loew theater enterprises of Boston, Mass.

The tract of land on which the theater is located has a frontage of 650 feet on the highway and will be equipped with a series of nine specially built parking ramps which will have a capacity of approximately 600 cars, enabling patrons to enjoy screen entertainment without leaving their automobiles. The project is being equipped with the latest improved RCA sound equipment, especially designed for this type of service and affording sufficient amplification of sound to cover the entire parking area.

Construction is progressing rapidly on this new unit in the Loew chain, the projection booth already having been completed. It is the expectation that this innovation in motion picture purveyance will be ready for public dedication by the first of August. Within a fortnight, the erection of the steel structure of the "shell" will have been completed and landscape gardners now are at work laying out the grounds, which will be beautified by a picturesque arrangement of shrubbery.

This form of picture presentation has proved immensely popular in other parts of the country. It will be interesting to note to what degree it "catches on" nearby in the Old Dominion.

The suggestion of an open-air theater, of course, immediately brings to mind the "airdomes" of two or three decades ago and their constant bugaboo of inclement weather. This seems to be a negligible factor in the instant case, because, seated in their own motor cars, each party of patrons will bring its own roof for the theater. And satisfactory projection seems to be assured by the placement of the projection booth on a line with the third parking ramp, instead of the last which would entail too long a "throw" from machine to screen. Incidentally, it is announced that the screen to be hung for this al fresco cathedral of the cinema will be "the largest in the world"—which, as such things go, is pretty large.

With Binnie Barnes scoring the light comedy success of her career on the screen in "Three Blind Mice," seen at the Capitol during the week that ended last night, and Merle Oberon coming to RKO-Keith's today in a distinctly amusing role in Alexander Korda's Technicolor production of "The Divorce of Lady X," one's thoughts automatically revert to the same producer's earlier hit. "The Private Life of Henry VIII," in which Charles Laughton was the star.

When "Henry VIII" was prevalent on American screens, it was not expected that it would prove the training school of a quartet of skillful comediennes. Yet, that is the way it seems to have turned out. Binnie Barnes, Merle Oberon, Elsa Lanchester (Mrs. Laughton) and Wendy Barrie all were prominently cast in support of the eminent Mr. Laughton, whose bluff King Hal made comedy only a by-product of his enthusiasm for ridding himself of a quick succession of superfluous wives. Nevertheless, there must have been something about that play that sowed deep seeds of humor.

Elsa Lanchester, who seems mysteriously to have disappeared from the cinema, revealed a pungent penchant for comedy, a little on the Flora Finch side, in many later films, and Miss Barnes, as already indicated, has blossomed out into a flibberty-gibbet funster, a little after the manner of Billie Burke in "Merrily We Live" or "Everybody Sing," for example. Of course, it remains to be seen precisely how Miss Oberon's exotic charm may be converted into a source of laughter, but "The Divorce of Lady X" is heavily underlined as a comedy. That leaves only Miss Barrie to step out and demonstrate the possession of comic talents comparable with those of her earlier associates.

Perhaps it is part of an inexorable law of compensation that in killing off his wives Henry VIII should have bred a strong line of gay feminine funmakers.

"Friday at Four," a new comedy by Ralph Homes, dramatic critic of the Detroit Times, will be presented by Robert Porterfield at the Baxter Theater, in Abingdon, Va., for a three-day engagement, beginning next Thursday night, July 7. Among well known Broadway players in the cast will be Kate Mayhew, Paul Huber, Margaret Swope, Fred Lawrence, Eric Walz and Earle Mitchell. The play has been staged by Theron Bamberger, who, during the regular season was a frequent caller at this desk as avant courier of several of the year's foremost touring attractions playing the National. So was his equally gifted wife, Phyllis Perlman, who seems somehow not to be mixed up in the theatrical venture at Abingdon that permits its patrons to pay their way in with produce. If you have a couple of potatoes or an old onion, you might go down and enjoy the show!

Further along the line of actresses who have turned their talents from the sublime to the ridiculous, in a manner of speaking, there is the case of Margaret Sullavan. Although Miss Sullavan made her Washington debut as a comedienne in "A Modern Virgin," on the stage of the Belasco Theater many seasons ago, the most vivid recollection of her in many minds no doubt attaches to her poignant performance with Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone and Robert Young in "Three Comrades," which returns to the screen at the Columbia today.

Miss Sullavan next will be seen locally as co-star with James Stewart in "Shopworn Angel," in which she plays a fast-living, gold-digging showgirl, who interests herself in a young Westerner in New York to train for army service in France. While Miss Sullavan seems to be going in for war in a big way, "Three Comrades" and "Shopworn Angel" will serve as the media of demonstrating the versatility she has acquired as a star of both stage and screen. Personally, I prefer her funny.

"Shopworn Angel," by the way, will follow "Lord Jeff" at the Palace. Or did you know?

That shattered ankle of Arch McDonald's seems to grow worse and worse in the telling of it. Rumors now filter into the office from the grapevine that it was a triple fracture that was sustained. That doesn't interfere with Arch's daily Post-Wheaties-WJSV broadcasts of the National's baseball games, but I wouldn't be so sure about that cow-milking contest with Art Godfrey, scheduled for the Earle stage Fourth of July evening. We hope for the best for Arch, but somehow feel that if he and Art fail to show up the cows will be just as well satisfied!

Bolger Makes Song Debut in Picture

Ray Bolger will go operatic in the Victor Herbert operetta, "Sweethearts," and sing a duet with Jeanette MacDonald. It was a jittery moment for the eccentric dancing star, when he stepped up to the microphone opposite Miss MacDonald, flanked by a 60-piece symphony orchestra and a chorus of 200, for his first test recording.

"Bet you can't even hear me with all that noise," said Bolger, with a sweeping gesture, taking in the orchestra and chorus, when Conductor Herbert Stothart lowered his baton.

"Let's listen to the test," Stothart suggested.

"You were fine, Ray," said Miss MacDonald.

"Was that my voice?" Bolger asked. "Play it again."

"Not bad," he laughed. "Not bad."

Props for Chinese Settings Authentic

Thanks to a motion picture expedition to China, costumes and props, impossible to obtain today, will be seen in "Too Hot to Handle."

When Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer prepared to make "The Good Earth," experts were sent to China to secure properties of all kinds, including enough authentic apparel to clothe the many extras. Those costumes were preserved by the studio wardrobe, the properties as well.

Since it is now impossible to take any such materials out of China, the new Clark Gable-Myrna Loy picture enjoys the advantage of having authentic equipment down to the last detail.

"Comrades" Return to F Street

TITULAR PLAYERS IN REMARQUE STORY

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., June 30.—Funny to see 100 musicians and 85 singers under the direction of Dr. Arthur Guttman—former conductor of the Johann Strauss Theater in Vienna—sweating as though from a turkish bath, while recording for "The Great Waltz," in the beautiful Palace of Versaille, left vacant by Marie Antoinette.

HEDDA HOPPER

"The Blue Danube" will set you on your ear—I mean toes. They'll have to put stop signals in the aisles to keep you from getting up and swinging your partner. It's like the beat of the tom-toms, the pounding of the surf. Waltzes drown you in waves of melody. And to be sure, it comes out as it goes in, Metro's installing new sound equipment in their theaters in London and Paris.

While Miles Mander, as Disraeli, was delivering an impassioned speech, condemning spies, in the prop House of Parliament for "Suez," 6,000 miles away, his brother, Geoffrey Mander, an M. P. for 10 years, was making practically the same speech in the real House of Parliament in London.

Incidentally, I heard there—summer before last—one of the greatest battles of the century, when Lloyd George had Anthony Eden and Ramsay MacDonald on the carpet for going back on their promises to Ethiopia.

What a magnificent actor the world lost when Lloyd George turned statesman. He's dynamite and TNT wrapped in one small package.

What a laugh at the new race track to see our Hollywood gang clutching a Christian Science Monitor, containing a story on the inside of racing, in one hand, and a betting form in the other. You might call that coming and going.

On the marquee of the movie house was: "You and Me—One Wild Night—Two Free Plymouths." What, no blondes nor brunettes thrown in?

During a recent party at Lloyd Bacon's house, thieves got in the back way and cleaned out the fur wraps and ladies' purses. From Mrs. Richard Arlen's they got $15 and two pari-mutuel tickets, uncashed, worth $42.80.

As one of next year's specials, Darryl Zanuck will do "Drums Along the Mohawk," by Walter Edmonds. A best seller about colonial times in the first years of our republic. Now we're getting somewhere. With war clouds all over Europe, great gobs of our citizens are discovering their country and are as thrilled as Columbus.

Wish I hadn't sold my telephone stock. Zanuck phones his studio four or five times a day from Europe. Did it between chukkers other day.

Villa's Chef Cooks For Gable Outing

The soldier of fortune who cooked tortillas and frijoles for Pancho Villa while the bullets whizzed around his ears is now cooking for Hollywood's celebrities.

A few days ago Carrillo found Willy on his doorstep, broke and out of a job. He hired him to prepare the barbecue for Gable, Walter Pidgeon and other members of "Too Hot to Handle" company on his Rancho de los Quiotos in San Diego County.

Indian Challenges Archery Champ

Howard Hill may be recognized as the world's greatest archer, but Iron Eyes Cody, full-blooded Cherokee, rises to challenge him just the same. Finishing work in "Follow the Arrow," Hill walked over to the "Sea Gulls of Salt Lake" set to visit and was introduced to Cody. As the Indian is also an expert archer, that became the topic of conversation.

Hill began showing Cody some unusual and difficult shots he could make accurately at 50 yards. Good-natured talk between the two led to the Indian's challenge to a match.

It will be held at the Elysian Archery Range next week, and H'll's title will be at stake.

TRIUMPH: "Hands Across the Border" will be Robert Taylor's next picture for M.-G.-M. and concerns the friendly rivalry existing between the United States Military Academy and Canada's West Point at Kingston, Ont. . . . Studio representatives were sent to Kingston to secure official consent and informed them that Taylor would be starred in the movie . . . At first there was hesitancy. Then came sudden consent, when the officials learned the further detail—that Taylor would portray a West Pointer and not a Canadian cadet.

PEACE: The War Department will spend $40,000 for the housing and feeding of American troops at the San Francisco World's Fair next year . . . The fair's theme is "Peace."

SUCCESS: Hendrik Willem Van Loon, jr., now is a member of the team of Hare & Van Loon at the Artists Theater in Provincetown . . . "How does your father regard your work?" Van Loon was asked by an interviewer. "Does he regard it as entertainment, as art, or what?" . . . "Oh, pop has no set ideas about those things," was the reply. "He's quite happy—just so long as somebody in the family is working."

DIGNITY: Dudley Nichols is the president of the Screen Writers Guild but seldom has used his presidential gavel at meetings. During the last meeting, a speaker twice was interrupted by the pounding of the gavel. When it happened a third time, the speaker looked up at Nichols for an explanation . . . "Go right ahead and don't mind the gavel." Nichols explained, placing something in his mouth. "I was just cracking walnuts."

ENTERPRISE: Dashiell Hammett, author of "The Thin Man" and "After the Thin Man," has completed another story in this series . . . It will be called "Another Thin Man." In this new story, Myrna Loy and William Powell become the parents of a baby which never smiles . . . If this movie is successful, the next story will be called "And Another Thin Man."

CHATTER: The Sunday Express in London, which purchased Leon Turrou's story of his work in breaking the German spy ring, has decided not to publish the series . . . William Wyler, the director, sails for Spain . . . When Walt Disney returns to Hollywood, he'll announce the building of a new two-million dollar Mickey Mouse studio . . . Next week Richmond County prosecutors will announce startling revelations concerning ambulance-chasing and jury-fixing . . . Oliver H. P. Garrett will write the scenario of "one-third of a nation."

ACHIEVEMENT: The selection of Norma Shearer to portray the Scarlett O'Hara role in the Selznick production of "Gone With the Wind"—and to be co-starred with Clark Gable—came as a surprise to Hollywood . . . Both these stars are employed by M.-G.-M. That studio once had loaned Gable's services to Paramount, as a punishment to him. But the picture, instead, proved to be a hit . . . And now Metro refused to permit Gable to work for Selznick, unless Miss Shearer got the Scarlett role.

DEFEAT: Some reporters who had covered Max Schmeling's fight camp were discussing the defeated heavyweight's return to Germany . . . "When Max gets back to Berlin," one of them asked, "I wonder what he'll find?" . . . "He'll find," was Caswell Adams' guess, "that he had a grandfather named Goldberg."

PUZZLEMENT: At 8:15 last night a twosome entered the Casa Manana. The man asked the captain for a table, and after a five-minute delay—because the place was packed—a table was set up for them in a corner . . . The man kept shaking his head at each routine of the show—which is simply a revival of Palace vaudeville without any scenery of chorus girls and which has been grossing $40,000 a week . . . He was Clifford C. Fisher, former producer of the bankrupt French Casino, predecessor to the Casa Manana. In this room, now jammed with customers, he had spent more for a two-minute backdrop than the cost of the entire revue he was seeing.

President's NEA Address

By the Associated Press

New York, June 30.—The text of President Roosevelt's address to the National Education Association follows:

If you have followed the arguments of financial experts over the last few years, you have guessed that they have as many theories of keeping books as there are ends to serve. They do not always agree on the definition of capital, and they even disagree in what is an asset and what is a liability. That is true both in private business and in government.

But whatever differences bookkeepers and financiers may have over the rules of their professions, no man or woman of common sense can forget, or allow Government to forget, what are the true and ultimate assets and liabilities of a Nation.

The only real capital of a Nation is its natural resources and its human beings. So long as we take care of and make the most of both of them, we shall survive as a strong Nation, a successful Nation and a progressive Nation—whether or not the bookkeepers say other kinds of budgets are from time to time out of balance.

Must Maintain Structure.

This capital structure—natural resources and human beings—has to be maintained at all times. The plant has to be kept up and new capital put in year by year to meet increasing needs. If we skimp on that capital, if we exhaust our natural resources and weaken the capacity of our human beings, then we shall go the way of all weak nations.

Before we can think straight as a Nation, we have to consider—in addition to the old kind—a new kind of government balance sheet—a long-range sheet which shows survival values for our population and for our democratic way of living, balanced against what we paid for them. Judged by that test—history's test—I venture to say that the long-range budget of the present Administration of our Government has been in the black and not in the red.

For many years I, like you, have been a pedagogue, striving to inculcate in the youth of America a greater knowledge of and interest in the problems which, with such force, strike the whole world in the face today. In these recent years we have taught the prudent husbandry of our national estate—our rivers, our soil, our forests, our phosphates, our oils, our minerals and our wild life. Along these lines we have made mighty strides—come further than in all the years before in knowledge of how to grapple with the problems of maintaining the estate that our forefathers handed down to us.

An Age of Building.

With the dissemination of this knowledge we have taken action. Few men begrudge what that action has cost, because it has been based on operations physically large and spectacular, dramatic and easy to see. I am thankful that I live in an age of building, for it is far easier to dramatize to oneself the importance of the object if you see it while it is going up than if you come along later and see it only in its completed stage. We are fortunate today in seeing the New York World's Fair of 1939 in the construction stage. This glimpse will make it mean more to us when we see it completed next year.

The other half of the preservation of our national capital is likewise a problem of husbandry—the conserving of health, energy, skill and morale of our population, and especially of that part of our population which will be the America of tomorrow.

This also is a problem of the fullest use and development of precious resources of ability which cannot be stored and will be lost if they remain unused. No nation can meet this changing world unless its people, individually and collectively, grow in ability to understand and handle the new knowledge as applied to increasingly intricate human relationships. That is why the teachers of America are the ultimate guardians of the human capital of America, the assets which must be made to pay social dividends if democracy is to survive.

We have believed whole-heartedly in investing the money of all the people on the education of the people. That conviction, backed up by taxes and dollars, is no accident, for it is the logical application of our faith in democracy.

Man's present-day control of the affairs of nature is the direct result of investment in education. And the democratization of education has made it possible for outstanding ability, which would otherwise be completely lost, to make its outstanding contribution to the common weal. We cannot afford to overlook any source of human raw material. Genius flowers in most unexpected places; "it is the impetus of the undistinguished host that hurls forth a Diomed or a Hector."

No government can create the human touch and self-sacrifice which the individual teacher gives to the process of education. But what government can do is to provide financial support and to protect from interference the freedom to learn.

No one wants the Federal Government to subsidize education any more than is absolutely necessary. It has been and will be the traditional policy of the United States to leave the actual management of schools and their curricula to State and local control.

But we know that in many places local government unfortunately cannot adequately finance either the freedom or the facilities to learn. And there the Federal government can properly supplement local resources.

Standards Divergent.

Here is where the whole problem of education ties in definitely with natural resources and the economic picture of the individual community or State. We all know that the best schools are in most cases located in those communities which can afford to spend the most money on them—the most money for adequate teachers' salaries, for modern buildings and for modern equipment of all kinds. We know that the weakest educational link in the system lies in those communities which have the lowest taxable values, therefore the smallest per capita tax receipts and, therefore, the lowest teachers' salaries and most inadequate buildings and equipment. We do not blame these latter communities. They want better educational facilities but simply have not enough money to pay the cost.

There is probably a wider divergence today in the standard of education between the richest communities and the poorest communities than there was 100 years ago; and it is, therefore, our immediate task to seek to close that gap—not in any way by decreasing the facilities of the richer communities, but by extending aid to those less fortunate. We all know that if we do not close this gap it will continue to widen, for the best brains in the poor communities will either have no chance to develop or will migrate to those places where their ability will stand a better chance.

To continue the parallel between natural and human sources, it is well to remember that our poorest communities exist where the land is most greatly eroded, where farming does not pay, where industries have moved out, where flood and drought have done their work, where transportation facilities are of the poorest and where cheap electricity is unavailable for the home.

All of this leads me to ask you not to demand that the Federal Government provide financial assistance to all communities. Our aid for many reasons, financial and otherwise, must be confined to lifting the level at the bottom rather than to giving assistance at the top. Today we cannot do both, and we must, therefore, confine ourselves to the greater need.

In line with this policy, the Federal Government during the last five years has given relatively far more assistance to the poorer communities than to the rich. We have done it through direct relief and through work relief, through the Resettlement Administration and the Farm Security Administration and through the rehabilitation of flooded, stranded or dust-blown areas. We have provided schoolhouses, colleges, libraries, educational equipment and sanitation in every State of the Union. I include "sanitation" because it has always seemed to me that good health and good education must go hand in hand. We have placed many millions of dollars in the field of adult education through the Works Progress Administration and, here again, most of the money has been expended in the poorer communities of the land.

Free Learning Stressed.

I have spoken of the twin interlocking assets of national and human resources and of the need of developing them hand in hand. But with this goes the equally important and equally difficult problem of keeping education intellectually free. For freedom to learn is the first necessity of guaranteeing that man himself shall be self-reliant enough to be free.

Such things did not need as much emphasis a generation ago, but when the clock of civilization can be turned back by burning libraries, by exiling scientists, artists, musicians, writers and teachers, by dispersing universities and by censoring news and literature and art, an added burden is placed upon those countries where the torch of free thought and free learning still burns bright.

If the fires of freedom and civil liberties burn low in other lands, they must be made brighter in our own.

If in other lands the press is censored we must redouble our efforts here to keep it free.

If in other lands the external truths of the past are threatened by intolerance we must provide a safe place here for their perpetuation.

There may be times when men and women in the turmoil of change lose touch with the civilized gains of centuries of education, but the gains of education are never really lost. Books may be burned and cities sacked, but truth, like the yearning for freedom, lives in the hearts of humble men and women. The ultimate victory of tomorrow is with democracy, and through democracy with education, for no people can be kept eternally ignorant or eternally enslaved.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Holding a silver trowel made by a famous New York jeweler, President Roosevelt is shown as he laid the cornerstone for the $3,000,000 United States building on the World's Fair grounds at New York. With him is Col. Edwin M. Watson, military aide.

Roosevelt's World Fair Speech

By the Associated Press

New York, June 30.—The text of President Roosevelt's speech at the laying of the World Fair Federal Building cornerstone follows:

On this occasion we formally commence the construction of the building of the Government of the United States. I gladly express the appreciation of that Government to the representative of so many other nations who have graciously decided to take part in the New York World's Fair of 1939.

Already the plans for their participation are drawn, and to them I want to stress my hope that many of their countrymen will visit the fair next year. To them also a hearty welcome will be given. I emphasize this on the ground of reciprocity, because for many years the visiting balance has been somewhat uneven. Far more Americans have been traveling to the shores of other continents, especially Europe, than visitors from the other nations to our shores. I encourage all of my compatriots to learn all they can at first hand about other nations and to make friends there, but I wish that more of the citizens of other nations could visit us and make friends here.

All of us realize, of course, that the affairs of many parts of the world are, to put it politely, somewhat distraught. Such a condition necessarily accompanies wars and rumors of wars.

We in this hemisphere are happily removed, in large measure, both from fear and from the controversies which breed it. In a large sense, however, we cannot remain unconcerned, especially because it is our fortune to enjoy friendship and good relations with all nations.

You who represent the other nations here today have heard of what is known as the policy of the good neighbor. To that policy we have steadily adhered, and it may well be said that it is the definite policy of all the American republics.

It is a policy which can never be merely unilateral. In stressing it, the American republics appreciate, I am confident, that it is bilateral and multilateral and that the fair dealing which it implies must be reciprocated.

It is a policy which was not in its inception, or subsequently, limited to one hemisphere. It has proven so successful in the western hemisphere that the American republics believe that it would succeed in the rest of the world if the spirit which lies behind it were better understood and more actively striven for in the other parts of the world.

Furthermore, the policy of the good neighbor is, as we know, not limited to those problems of international relations which may result in war. We are against war and have agreed among ourselves quietly to discuss difficulties in such a way that the possibility of war has become remote. But the policy involves also matters of trade and matters affecting the interchange of culture.

In these modern days when so many mew economic and social problems call for the revision of many new economic and social tenents, closer personal contacts are an essential to the well-being of nations.

That is why the New York World's Fair and the San Francisco Fair are well-timed for 1939. They will encourage that interchange of thought, of culture, and of trade which are so vital today. They will give to the opposite ends of our country an opportunity to see the exhibits and visitors from the rest of the world—they will give to those visitors a splendid chance to see something of the length and breadth of the United States.

All of us who are here today look forward to April, 1939, when this great exposition will be formally opened. It has been well said that you cannot hate a man you know. Therefore, this exposition will stand as a symbol of world peace for, without doubt, it is a useful advance on the patient road to peace.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

ONLY ONE CIVILIAN.

You can drive in 90 minutes from the White House to Gettysburg. There President Roosevelt goes day after tomorrow to dedicate a monument, as President Lincoln did, not quite 75 years ago, on the field of one of the 15 most decisive battles in history. (It's only one of the hundred battlefields within 100 miles of the Capital.)

* * * *

As a boy out on the prairies, I often puzzled over maps of Gettysburg. How did Lee penetrate so far north? Why did the Northern troops face north, toward the land they were protecting from invasion? Many hours I pored over the little black and white rectangles.

Jenny Wade ... only civilian

I climbed several tall steel towers yesterday and, partly in spite of a guide who tried to confuse me, I eventually found out. You really can't do it without a guide—even if he hasn't read "Long Remember," the last fine novel about Gettysburg, as ours hadn't.

* * * *

These guides pass an examination. You pay them a $3 fee (sometimes they earn three or four fees in a day) to escort you over 17 miles of roads which curve with the battle lines. They lecture you for hours, sometimes, alas, in sing-song rote, with too much emphasis on brigadiers' names, and which regiment stood behind which tree, until you are bewildered.

"—one airplane, a few machine guns."

So when you go to Gettysburg, as you inevitably will, you must browbeat or cajole the guide to start out by letting you climb the green tower near the center of the battlefield . . .

Then, if you have done a little home reading first, you will understand how 70,000 men fought over a square mile of ground under the bombardment of 300 cannon and settled the survival of this Republic.

* * * *

The guide tells you the infantrymen could fire only three shots every five minutes with their old rifles. But each cannon poured out 15 shots every five minutes . . . The bombardment could be heard 100 miles away in Philadelphia.

* * * *

Neither commander had a very clear notion of what the enemy was doing, and was even in the dark about some of his own troops. One airplane, a few machine guns, might have shortened the Civil War by two years—or might have left us with two great republics instead of one.

* * * *

Gettysburg is now the greatest outdoor concentration of statuary and monuments in the world, more than 1,000 in all; one of the guides says more than 1,400, one behind almost every tree and bush.

The monument to Lee, who attacked and lost the battle, is vastly more impressive than the one to Meade, who stood fast and won it.

* * * *

Meade was always underrated as a commander; perhaps because he hated boots and always wore slacks . . . His headquarters in the center of the field, the size of a two-car garage, still stands . . .

On the outside of the hotel where Lincoln polished his speech there's a weathered painting of Honest Abe, not far from the old railroad station where he alighted from his train. The whole region lives in the bright glow of history.

In one way, that battle 75 years ago was startlingly different from this year's battles in Spain and China: Only one civilian was killed.

She was Jenny Wade, a pretty girl of 20, who stood kneading some dough when a bullet stung through two doors. Others were in their cellars, but Jenny was taking care of her sister and an infant of 3 days.

* * * *

They're camping tonight on the fields south of Gettysburg, 2,000 veterans who faced each other in this battle, now in their middle 90's, where the minie bullets were so thick 75 years ago . . . The War Department paid their expenses and is taking care of its own. Their yellow tents are more comfortable than the hard ground was then; there are screen doors and boardwalks and little shaded canvas porches.

Stored not far away are the coffins . . . Twenty-five years ago, at the fiftieth reunion, the Army overestimated the number of coffins needed.

* * * *

On Sunday President Roosevelt will kindle the "eternal light," on the "peace" monument at the northern end of the battlefield, a flame of Pennsylvania gas intended to burn forever . . . He could say the 286 words that would bind the Republic even more firmly together than Lincoln's 286 words . . . He has them in his mind.

Howard Trustee Named.

Richard Hurst Hill has been appointed temporary secretary of the board of trustees of Howard University to succeed Dr. Emmett J. Scott, it was announced yesterday. Hill will serve from today until the next meeting of the board, which will probably take place in October.

Labor Leader Raps North in Halting Circus

Whitehead Charges Officials Unwilling to Risk Rest of Tour.

"Mr. North and the circus management felt they had already licked the cream of the business in the big cities and were unwilling to take the usual business risk of continuing their scheduled tour of the smaller cities," he charged, "even though they are forcing the 1,600 circus employes out of their jobs."

Routed as it was through the American Federation of Labor, parent body of the actors' union, the statement was viewed as a reply by President William Green to an appeal by Melvin D. Hildreth, of Washington, president of the Circus Fans Association, for Green to aid in healing the wage dispute. This precipitated the show's shutdown in Scranton, Pa., last week.

Saying the A. F. of L. deplores the circus' return to winter quarters in Sarasota, Fla.—the three show trains are schedules to arrive there today—Whitehead accused North of refusing to compromise on a 12½ per cent pay cut.

"He publicly stated in conference with union and city officials the circus had cleared $250,000 so far this year," Whitehead said.

Court Upholds 11 Gaming Sentences

The U. S. Court of Appeals yesterday upheld the convictions of the late Carroll Peytor (Nubby) Nuckols, Nicholas (Nick the Greek) Floratos, and nine other Washington gamblers.

Upholding, in effect, the Federal search and seizure warrants used in a series of spectacular police raids more than a year ago, the appellate court's ruling is expected to apply equally to the conviction of other gamblers seized in like manner.

"Nubby" Nuckols committed suicide while his appeal was pending, but the other ten defendants are free on bond. They will be returned to jail to serve sentences, ranging from six months to three years.

Rain-Check Plan Worked Out for Sunset Concerts

A rain check system which will insure every ticket holder of hearing a concert for his money has been worked out by the National Symphony Orchestra for the Sunset Symphonies, beginning July 10, it was announced yesterday by C. C. Cappel, orchestra manager.

If a sunday concert is rained out, Cappel explained, it will be given on Monday night. If the Monday night performance is canceled because of rain, ticket holders may exchange their stubs for the concert of the following Sunday.

In the case of Wednesday concerts the postponed performance will be held on Thursday, with an exchange privilege for the following Wednesday if the Thursday performance is canceled.

Tickets for all concerts for the summer season will go on sale today at the symphony box office in the Julius Garfinckel & Co. store.

Tercentenary Finn Delegates Here for Visit

Foreign Minister Among Party Entertained at Legation.

Rudolf Holsti, Foreign Minister of Finland, and a party of five Finnish leaders arrived in Washington last night after participating in the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the first Swedish and Finnish settlements on the Delaware River.

The delegation was met at the station by James Clement Dunn and Stanley Woodward, of the State Department, and Representative Pehr G. Holmes, of Massachusetts, member of the Tercentenary Commission.

The delegation was entertained at an informal party at the Finnish legation last night, and today they will be guests of the commission at a luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel. The members of the party then will travel by water to Mount Vernon, where they will place a wreath at the tomb of George Washington.

Members of the party besides Holsti, are Vaino Hakkila, speaker of the Finnish Parliament; Arthur Leinonen, Victor Vesterinen and Miss Kyllikki Pohjala, all members of parliament, and the Rev. Sigfrid Sirenius, representing the church of Finland.

Printing Types Held Regaining Classic Grace

The modern trend in type is back to the classical—beautiful to the eye and less matter-of-fact than the sterner fonts—Sol Hess, associate director of the Lanston Monotype Machine Co. of Philadelphia, told 150 delegates to the seventeenth annual conference on Printing Education of Graphic Arts, in session at the Washington Hotel last night.

"I always dislike to be a prophet of types of the future," said Hess.

"But I think the more classic Roman form will become more popular. This is probably because the sterner types have been used so much. The grace and beauty of the classic forms are returning.

Hess traced the history of type from its beginning—from the days of the Phoenician alphabet, more than 1,500 B. C.

Yesterday morning the delegates finished their registration. Later they heard an address by George R. Keller, Washington manager of the American Type Founders' Sales Corporation and former president of the United Typothetae of America, on "The Printing Business, Its Needs and Opportunities."

Other speakers yesterday included Fred W. Hoch, supervisor of Production Management of the United Typothetae of America, and George Welp, of the International Printing Ink Corporation, of New York.

At a luncheon yesterday the delegates were welcomed to the District by George Ortleb, Deputy U. S. Printer, who spoke in the absence of Public Printer A. E. Giegengack.

The delegates were taken on an inspection tour of the Government Printing Office in the afternoon, and will resume their sessions this morning.

6 New Submarines Ordered by Navy

The Navy arranged yesterday for the construction of six submarines estimated to cost approximately $30,000,000 and to be completed in about three years.

Acting Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison assigned the task of building two of the ships to the Portsmouth (N. H.) Navy Yard. He directed the Mare Island (Calif.) Navy Yard to build another and contracted with the Electric Boat Co., Groton, Conn., for three more. The contract price of the latter was $3,067,000 each, subject to adjustments for changes in labor and material costs.

Awards have been made separately for the Diesel propelling machinery to be used in the undersea craft. Its cost will vary from $2,583,000 to $2,880,801 per ship.

Embodying the most modern armament and other equipment, the submarines will be of about 13,000 tons. Hulls are to be completed in 33 months.

In conformity with the naval expansion bill, the Navy on Wednesday assigned construction of ten auxiliaries, costing in all about $23,000,000, to navy yards. Contracts are yet to be announced for construction of four destroyers and three fleet tugs, for which bids were opened this month.

Nice Will Seek a Second Term; Calls His Foes 'Conscienceless'

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 30.—Gov. Harry W. Nice, one of the few Republicans ever elected Governor of normally Democratic Maryland, announced tonight he would be a candidate for re-election.

He was influenced, he asserted, by "an almost unbelievably fanatical policy of political sabotage" which "has endeavored to blind the eyes of the people of Maryland to the progress on which we are embarked."

Administration advisers, the Governor continued, have insisted he should again become the Republican standard-bearer to bring "into the clear light of a political campaign the miserable distortions which are being spread by a conscienceless opposition."

"On several occasions during the (last) campaign and early in my administration, I stated that I did not intend to be a candidate to succeed myself," he said. "I realized the gigantic nature of my task. I felt I could do no more than the negative work of rectifying the evils and clearing the ground for future constructive activities.

"Success beyond all expectations, even in our fondest hopes, has crowned our efforts. We now find ourselves engrossed in the very midst of a positive program. . . . But the benefits of this work, for the greater part only just begun, will be lost unless the constructive policies we have inaugurated are carried on by the administration which inaugurated them. . . ."

"Faced with this unforeseen dilemma, I now must make my decision. I act . . . to preserve the values of the service I have endeavored to render to you . . . I act along the lines of the only course I can conscientiously follow under conditions as they now exist.

"I shall be a candidate to succeed myself as Governor of Maryland."

The Goverhor's announcement, long-waited and closely-guarded by him against premature release, brought an end to Republican "mark time" tactics which have left Democrats battling among themselves over the gubernatorial race for more than a year.

It contained a summary of some 20 "achievements" which the Governor contended highlighted his administration's record and justified his re-election.

The list included the remodeling and reconstruction of the executive mansion at Annapolis; balancing of the budget and restoration of the State's finances to a sound condition despite a "frightful financial situation" faced at the outset of the Nice administration; establishment of social welfare reforms, including unemployment insurance and relief; "much improvement" in the State highway system, in light of the fact that "at the close of the last administration, Maryland roads were among the worst in America."

Reduction of public service costs, totaling $2,771,000 annually; through Public Service Commission adjustments "effected without one dollar of costs for court action"; establishment of a State engineering department, and "an almost unparalleled record of amicable settlement of industrial conflict."

150 Colored Singers Present Spirituals At Sylvan Theater

Spirituals, old and new, in special musical settings by colored composers, were presented last night by the Schubert-Shakesperian Society, 150 colored singers, at the Sylvan Theater on the Monument Grounds, with Mrs. Tina Eugene Bohannon, supervisor of WPA adult education in divisions 10 to 13 of public schools, as master of ceremonies.

An appreciative audience applauded spirited renditions of such numbers as "There's a Meetin' Here Tonight" and "In That Great Gettin' Up Mornin'," and stood, in reverent silence, without applause, while the late James Weldon Johnson's "National Negro Anthem" was given by the choral group.

Solo numbers especially well received included Harry Thacker Burleigh's "Deep River," Vincent Frazier, tenor; Hall Johnson's "City Called Heaven," Timothy Ward, tenor; Clarence Cameron White's "Nobody Knows de Trouble I've Seen," W. Weir Stewart, violin, and various numbers by Miss Mattue Jenkins, soprano, and Lawrence Whisonant, tenor. The choruses were directed by George W. Murphy and Miss Gladys Ward.

Hazen Bond Issue Plan Is Criticized by Lusk

Commissioner Hazen's proposed $25,000,000 bond issue for highway improvements in the District was assailed yesterday by Rufus S. Lusk, secretary of the Washington Taxpayers League, in an address at the Kiwanis Club luncheon.

"This much money," he said, attacking the plan for a new $1,500,000 court building, "would build a great many junior high schools providing education for 1200 pupils each, whereas a municipal court employs but 27 people."

Revenue Board Opens Division At Los Angeles

Technical Staff Also Will Have Headquarters in Chicago and N. Y.

In a move to decentralize phases of the Bureau of Internal Revenue work, a division of the technical staff will be established for the Pacific Coast area with headquarters in Los Angeles beginning today.

On August 1 a similar technical staff division will be set up in New York and on September 1 a Chicago division will be established.

The move will result in the transfer from the bureau here to the field of approximately 260 employes. The bureau at present employes about 4,550 persons.

Head of the Pacific Division, which will have branch offices in San Francisco, Seattle and Portland, will be Norman D. Cann. A total of 67 employes here has already been assigned to the division.

The purpose of the move, officials said, is to expedite settlement of contested tax cases. The field division will represent Internal Revenue Commissioner Guy T. Helvering in determining income, profits, estate and gift tax liability in cases within their areas where the taxpayers have protested the liability made by the revenue agents in charge. Also, with representatives of the chief counsel, they will have final responsibility for the disposition of cases docketed before the Board of Tax Appeals.

Commissioner Helvering intimated that the field divisions to be established this summer will be largely experimental. Should results justify it, he said, technical staff divisions will be set up in other sections of the country.

Should complete decentralization finally result, Helvering estimated that about 650 employes would eventually be transferred from Washington to the field.

Appeals Court Tightens Rule On Lawyers

2 Years' College Work to Be Required, Beginning in 1943.

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday raised the standard of training for lawyers after July 1, 1943.

The new rule provides that one beginning the study of law after September 1, this year, must have studied at least two years in an approved college or university, or its equivalent, in order to practice in the appellate court.

Attorneys in good standing in the United States Supreme Court are exempt from the rule.

Any attorney admitted to practice in the United States District Court or in the highest court of any State must also have graduated from a law school approved by the appellate court.

This law school, the rule states, must have required at the time of the lawyer's matriculation as a condition of admittance at least two years of study in a college which offered a three-year course.

It is expected that the United States District Court will adopt a similar rule governing attorneys admitted to practice before it.

The District Bar Association recommended that the courts require higher standards for practice last week in a controversial meeting.

The appellate court did not adopt one of the bar association's recommendations that a committee named by the court be authorized to determine that an applicant for admission to practice had the equivalent of the required education.

Landis Thwarted In Effort to Send Mother Farewell

Landis, former rookie Washington fireman, asked a Greek ice cream vendor, John Charles, to take a message to his mother while awaiting removal to the Atlanta train from the First Precinct Station. Charles, warned by police before he went to Landis' cell not to speak with him, refused.

Landis bought ice cream from Charles for all of his cellmates a few minutes before leaving for Union Station manacled to deputy United States marshals John Upperman and William Gasque.

Landis' wife died two days after being found brutally beaten on a lonely road the morning of March 24.

Session Called Today in Quiz On Monopolies

An appeal for "co-operation of all factors in the population" was issued last night by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, as the first full meeting of the Administration's 12-man monopoly investigating committee was called for 2 o'clock this afternoon.

"We know that the problem before us is to stimulate normal business activity, so that the unemployed may be put to work at wages that will develop the home market," said O'Mahoney, who is expected to be elected chairman of the group.

The committee will do little more than organize and discuss the potential scope of the monopoly inquiry at today's meeting. Evenly balanced between legislators and Government officials, its members include three Senators, three Representatives and six agents of Government bureaus.

Henderson May Get Job.

One report was that Leon Henderson, chief economic adviser of the Works Progress Administration, will be made the $500,000 investigation's "co-ordinator." O'Mahoney has repeatedly denied signs of friction between the legislative and executive groups, and has asserted it will "work as a unit."

"From my conversations with various members of the committee, both the executive branch and from Congress, I know that all feel that this committee has a real opportunity to perform a constructive service, and they look forward to the co-operation of all factors of the population," said O'Mahoney's statement last night.

"Business is as much interested in the success of this committee as is Government and labor, and also the consumers."

O'Mahoney said the "home market" cannot be developed "so long as unemployed are on relief, nor can industry be stimulated until the home market is developed."

Borah Still Silent.

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, who with O'Mahoney is sponsor of a bill to require all large corporations to take out Federal licenses, continued his silence on the committee's objectives. Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, who opposed participation by the executive departments, reiterated his prediction that the Government agencies will control the course of the study.

Besides these three Senate members, Chairman Sumners, of the House Judiciary Committee, heads the House membership, also comprising Representatives Eicher (Democrat), of Iowa, and Reece (Republican), of Tennessee. Sumners, facing opposition in his Texas district, recently was asked by the President to return for the inquiry. He is expected back today.

Representatives of the executive agencies on the 12-man joint committee are Thurman Arnold, Justice Department; William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission; Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the Treasury; Richard C. Patterson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce; Isador Lubin, Labor Department, and Chairman Garland Ferguson, of the Federal Trade Commission.

William Jemison's Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for William W. Jemison, 59, who died Wednesday, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the home, 1930 First street northwest. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mr. Jemison, who was born in New Castle, Del., had lived in Washington nearly all his life. He was educated at Business High School and then entered the Treasury Department. Mr. Jemison transferred to the Federal Reserve Board at the time of its organization in 1913. At the time of his death, he was in the filing division of the Board of Governors.

He was a member of the B. B. French Lodge, F. A. A. M., and of United Brethren Church. The Rev. Simpson Daugherty, pastor of the church, will officiate at the funeral services.

Mr. Jemison's father, Ewan Jemison, who died several years ago, was assistant superintendent of the Treasury Department.

Mr. Jemison is survived by his wife, Mrs. Amelia L. Jemison; a son, William Z. Jemison, and two daughters, Mrs. Ernest Woodchek and Mrs. Frank J. Muller.

Walsh Denounces Use of Federal Funds for Campaigns

Senator Walsh last night denounced as a "traitor to President Roosevelt and the Democratic Party" any Administration agency or officer that uses Federal funds to influence votes. The Senate Campaign Funds Committee, shown above, yesterday studied the transcript of a speech by Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator, in which he told a delegation of organized relief workers they must "keep our friends in power." Left to right are Senators Walsh, O'Mahoney and Sheppard, chairman.

On Capitol Hill

Emergency Relief Aministration, One of Oldest New Deal Agencies, Gives Up the Ghost.

A bookkeeper drew a double line in a ledger in the WPA office yesterday, the Associated Press reported, and the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, one of the oldest and richest agencies of the New Deal, gave up the ghost.

HOPKINS.

Its cash register once sang to the tune of $1,000,000,000 per annum. But when its Congressional lease on life ran out at the end of the fiscal year yesterday its assets amounted to only $250,000. This automatically goes to the Treasury to pay any claims on the FERA estate.

FERA was born on May 22, 1933, when a young social worker from New York, Harry Hopkins, came to Washington and was made administrator of the new agency, which was to distribute Federal funds to the States, chiefly for direct relief.

Its doom was pronounced on June 22, 1933, when Congress directed the administrator to wind up its affairs gradually. The Government was going out of the business of direct relief, and turning to work relief administered by WPA.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, indorsed yesterday what he said was President Roosevelt's apparent attempt to force a realignment of the Nation's two major political parties on a liberal versus conservative basis.

A realignment placing the Democratic Party in the liberal camp would be welcomed by him, Hatch said.

But Senator King (Democrat), Utah, indicated that the more conservative elements of the Democratic Party were loath to accept the President's definition of a liberal. King said he would refuse to acept a definition of the term "liberal" by any other man.

"I want to make that appraisal myself," he said.

The Treasury yesterday hired Peter J. Malley, of New York, to haul $1,290,000,000 worth of silver from New York to the new storehouse at West Point. He will be paid $157,000.

Malley's trucks will be guarded by 55 Coast Guardsmen on the 50-mile Treasury trek. He'll have to make the trip five days a week for nearly ten months to complete the job. The first truckload will leave New York Tuesday or Wednesday. A million bars of silver, gathered from all parts of the world in the last four years, will be moved. A bar weighs 1,000 ounces and each ounce has a statutory value of $1.29. The market price, however, is only 43 cents an ounce.

Philip Murray, chairman of the C. I. O. Steel Workers Union, told reporters the steel industry and the C. I. O. have not discussed reducing wages.

Murray's union has a wage contract with United States Steel corporation and its subsidiaries. When "big steel" announced price reductions last week, there was speculation as to whether wage cuts might also be proposed.

The C. I. O. contract with U. S. Steel would permit either party to reopen negotiations on wages and working conditions on ten days' notice.

D. C. Police Shift 6 and Promote 1

One promotion and six transfers on the detective force were announced last night by Detective Capt. Ira B. Keck.

Detective William Rawlinson, of the First Precinct, was promoted to the rank of detective sergeant and assigned to the homicide squad. Relieved of duty with the check-and-fraud squad, Detective Sergeant Oscar Mansfield was assigned to the clothing and jewelry squad.

Detective Sergeant Charles Warfield was moved from the clothing and jewelry squad to a night lieutenancy in the Detective Bureau. Detective Sergeant Michael Mahaney was transferred from the Third Precinct to the Second, and Detective Sergeants Tom Sweeney and Walter Beck from the Second to the newly created Thirteenth Precinct.

Pilot Retiring After 33 Years With Fireboat

James Raleigh Proud of Fact His Craft Never Was in an Accident.

"I've had a lot of close calls, but I haven't had one accident in 33 years that cost the District one cent for repairs."

That is the story of James Raleigh, 64-year-old pilot of Washington's first and only fireboat who retires today.

"One of the narrowest escapes I guess I ever had," he recalled, "was during the winter of '36, when we received a distress signal of four long blasts from a Standard Oil tanker just below the Lincoln Memorial. The river was jammed with ice and the tanker was caught fast.

"We were making for her in the Firefighter when the jam suddenly burst further up the river and sent tons of ice crashing against the sides of my boat. The flow was carrying us directly toward the stone abutments of Highway Bridge. I was trying desperately to swing the boat, but we were surrounded by ice.

"All hands were on deck, waiting for the crash. Just as we neared the abutments a sudden clearing of the ice gave me a chance and I swung her clear of the bridge a few seconds before we would have crashed."

Raleigh is the last of a crew of 29 men who were with the Firefighter when it first was put into dock here in 1905. His captain, Jacob Stulz, came with the crew in 1906 and has served a total of 42 years with the Fire Department.

Raleigh remembers the first alarm turned in for the boat on July 9, 1905. The blaze destroyed the old oyster wharf at Eleventh and Water streets southwest. A year later another big fire in the Johnson coal yard gutted the buildings and killed about 20 horses.

"One of the toughest jobs I believe we've ever tackled," he declared, "was the Johnson-Wimsatt fire at Twelfth and Water streets. We fought that blaze for almost three days without taking time to rest."

Always referring to the Firefighter as "We," Raleigh is proud of the trim craft.

"She weighs 192 gross tons and skips along at about 12 knots under 600 horsepower motors," he boasted, "and she is in just as good condition as the day they brought her down from Delaware."

Informed last night that he would be retired on half pay, Raleigh beamed. "I've got a trim little 42-foot boat of my own and a summer cottage at Point Lookout and I'm figuring on doing a lot of fishing and hunting."

Pilot Raleigh will be pleased with the rod and reel his crew members plan to present to him tonight before he rolls his bedding and says good-by to the Firefighter.

Mrs. N. T. Harris Dies After Illness

New Orleans, June 30 (AP).—Mrs. Norvin Trent Harris, sr., 73, related to two distinguished Virginia families, the Randolphs and the Marshalls, died tonight after an illness.

She was the widow of Norvin Trent Harris, internationally known sportsman who died in 1932.

Mrs. Harris was socially prominent in New Orleans, Virginia and Kentucky.

Camera Aide Is Found Slain In Hollywood

By the United Press.

Hollywood, June 30.—King D. Gray, an assistant movie cameraman, was found shot to death today in his automobile on Wilcox avenue, in front of Hollywood postoffice. Police surmised he had been murdered.

Gray's widow was questioned tonight by police, who sought first of all to learn why he was shot and left where hundreds of pedestrians and motorists pass hourly.

Police Capt. J. J. Jones believed Gray was murdered, but advanced the theory that a companion might have been driving him to a hospital after a shooting or suicide attempt and fled in panic when Gray died.

There were no powder burns around the wound in Gray's chest. Police said Gray, who was described as a "quiet, retiring" man, had been dead six to ten hours. There was no gun in the car.

Records at Universal Studios showed Gray worked there until last Saturday.

Police found an expensive watch, a valuable diamond and a wallet containing $63 on the body.

Mrs. Gray told detectives she last saw her husband at 9 p. m. yesterday, when he left home with a friend. She said she had received no word from him, and was convinced he had no enemies.

Police started a search for the friend, whose name was not divulged.

James Fisher, an employe of the Hollywood Citizen-News, found Gray dead. Fisher told police he saw Gray slumped over the wheel of his automobile and, thinking he was asleep, went over and shook him. Then he saw Gray was dead.

Celler Demands 25% 'Ceiling' on Every Tax Rate

Representative Emanuel Celler (Democrat), New York, lambasted New Deal tax policies last night and demanded a constitutional amendment to fix a 25 per cent "ceiling" on all rates.

The attack followed President Roosevelt's disclosure Tuesday at Hyde Park, N. Y., that studies are being made of methods to liquidate the huge public debt.

Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau said his department has not yet begun studies looking to new legislation and it might not begin before August or September.

Celler told a radio audience "sound revision of our tax laws will result in the creation and maintenance of work opportunities" and that present policies are "crippling recovery."

"At present income taxes are so high as to prevent important savings by those who can risk their capital, and inheritance taxes are so extreme as to cause important dissipation of the liquid capital of the community," Celler said. "At the same time, our national debt is increasing by billions each year."

Pennsylvania's 44-Hour Week Ruled Invalid

State Supreme Court Bases Decision on Power to Grant Exceptions.

Philadelphia, June 30 (AP).—Pennsylvania's new law limiting male workers to a maximum work week of 44 hours was declared unconstitutional today by the State supreme court.

The law never went into effect. As soon as the act was signed by Gov. George H. Earle, who said 44 hours was "long enough for any one to work," more than 700 firms joined in attacking it.

The supreme court ruling had no effect on a similar law applying only to women, now in force.

Secretary of Labor and Industry Ralph M. Bashore said the decision "strikes a blow at the efforts of the Administration to remedy sweatshop activities."

As passed, the law prohibited employment for more than 44 hours a week, or more than 8 hours a day, but the department of labor and industry was empowered to grant exemptions where they did not conflict with Federal laws. This was a point on which it fell the high court saying it was an illegal delegation of legislative powers.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Her Fiance Starts Gambling, Losing, Borrowing; Is Now in Debt. Indifferent to Marriage; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been engaged almost two years to a boy I have known four years. We had very few disagreements until the past year, when he started gambling. At first it was just on the side. Then he began having losses he couldn't afford, and borrowed money to "catch up." But of course he hasn't caught up, and neither has he stopped gambling. At first, I tried to pretend it didn't matter, thinking he would reform after he had learned his lesson; but he hasn't learned.

* * * *

He finished law school a year ago. All during school we used to plan for the day we could be married. The years seemed so long before he would graduate, and we thought we couldn't wait. But now if marriage is mentioned at all, it is I who bring up the subject. His attitude is very indifferent, and when I have mentioned that fact, he explains that it is because he has no money and naturally can't make any plans. He has a fairly permanent job paying $120 a month.

* * * *

I have reminded him that his gambling is coming between us; that we can't get married until he saves something; but he says he isn't ready to quit. Once, after a quarrel, I returned his engagement ring, but later we settled the matter and I took back the ring, although he wouldn't promise to stop gambling. Am I wrong in urging him to stop? I admit I do nag at times and that makes the situation worse, because he thinks I am making a mountain out of a molehill. Usually we are too "broke" to go out and if we do go out, he is always broke afterward. But we have lots of fun walking and doing almost anything that other youngsters do. We aren't always scrapping, as this letter might lead you to believe.

* * * *

I honestly don't know what to do to keep him interested in other things. I even had him teach me to play poker so we could play for pennies at home, but one night after he left he went to a card game. He knows it hurts me, and I can't help thinking that if he cared he would give it up, for that reason if for no other. He has said he will give it up after marriage, reminding me that my brother did, which is true. But haven't I a right to expect him to give it up before? How can I be sure he would afterward? I could not be happy unless he did. I love him enough to give in on lots of things, but giving in on this would only mean worse trouble later on, so far as I can see. LOU.

Break With Him.

DEAR LOU: You have just about as much chance of putting a stop to your fiance's gambling with pleading and reproaches, with hopefully devised and pitifully proffered counter-attractions, as you would have of stemming the flow of Niagara Falls with your two hands. You are faced with a cruel alternative—that of playing along with him and committing yourself to almost certain wreckage of future personal happiness, and that of making a clean, immediate break and thus giving him a first warning of the never-ending price he is going to have to pay, in the continuous loss of things worthwhile, if he persists in his stupid, wasteful, shortsighted folly.

* * * *

He is succumbing to the tinsel lure of the something-for-nothing school of philosophy so dear to the lazybones, the no-good, the profligate, the wastrel, who thinks (or tries to fool himself) that success is a sleight-of-hand achievement; that some day (always some future day) he is going to lay down his nickel and get back a million, more or less. He is the sort of person who lacks either the brains or the guts to map out a purposeful, hard-working, on-going, up-climbing, obstacle-conquering, honor-crowned life program for himself, and stay with it until it comes, at least partially, to pass.

* * * *

So long as he was still being educated and supported entirely at his parents' expense, it was an effortless matter to spin imaginative yarns about the big things he was going to do after school days—but, as subsequent performance has proved, more or less of a piece with any 10-year-old's grandiose intentions of becoming a locomotive engineer or an airplane pilot or a sea captain, or the fairy princess who will marry the prince. Now that he is confronted with the necessity of transmuting his dreams into reality through his own disciplined, intelligently directed effort, he simply isn't up to that effort. He is expecting some game of chance to provide him what he isn't willing prayerfully to work and plan for.

* * * *

He may eventually reform of his own accord, or he may not. A genuine reform will only be self-induced, by a belated realization that he has been playing the fool, that he stands to lose far more than he stands to gain through seeking success or security via the gambler's route; that he has, indeed, already lost much—in time, in money, in abilities gone slack for lack of exercise, in self respect and the esteem of others; in the loss, perhaps, of his sweetheart's love and trust. His reform will begin the day he realizes these things far more acutely than any other could ever tell him and when, in the face of that realization, to determine to do an about-face, go back to the crossroads, set his path firmly on the right path, keep them there, and proceed—full steam ahead—to make up as best he can for lost time and wasted effort and substance.

* * * *

In my opinion, the only way you can hasten the dawning of that day for him is to refuse to accompany him any longer, in spirit or in person, along this much-mistaken path he is currently pursuing. This is a case where action will speak far more loudly than words. Don't lecture, exhort or reproach him any further. Just bid him a firm goodbye; and tell him why the leave-taking, in your opinion, is necessary to the point of being obligatory.

Peasant Costume for Croquet

IF YOU'RE tired of trying to look sophisticated or being feminine and frilly, why not get a peasant costume and appear natural, naive and wholesome? For informal lawn or garden parties or for a neighborly game of croquet or even for wearing around the house on a hot summer afternoon, there's nothing so cool and becoming as a flowered dirndl, with corselet and blouse. The newest peasant outfit reflects the Swedish influence, which manifests itself in floral prints of the gayest of colors. Virginia Bruce, movie star, who is a croquet devotee, is shown above in the peasant costume she wears while knocking the ball under the wire. It is a printed dirndl with laced corselet over a vague blue blouse. She carries an embroidered organdy parasol for sun protection.

Vitamin D Gives Vitality

NO TWO-WEEK sunbather is this beauty. You know by her resilient golden skin, her healthy vitality that she has an an all-year program for sunshine—the giver of Vitamin D.

See how she manages her long baths on the beach—cleverly avoiding the boiled-lobster effects achieved by her fellow vacationers.

A smart young lady—she knows a deep tan isn't the thing any more—so she pats on a lotion to prevent it. The lotion's 4 parts zinc oxide, 32 parts glycerine, 64 parts rosewater.

And when vacation's over—she's still a sun-worshipper. As long as weather permits, she sun-bathes on the porch or by an open south window. Because the ultra-violet rays which carry vitamin D mus fall directly on the flesh she wears little or nothing.

What does she do when winter rolls around? She keeps up her vitality, her resistance to colds by bathing in the glow of a sun-lamp.

Send 10 cents for our leaflet, "Get Health and Beauty With Vitamin D," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of leaflet.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, June 30.

IN ALL MY long and seamy career as a professional trainmeeter, I think I reached my peak the day Robert Taylor and Walt Disney slithered in on the same section of the Twentieth Century Limited. Disney was expected, but Beauty Bob sort of pulled a sneak and not even one twitching press-agent was on hand to greet the young man.

ALICE HUGHES

The fact that Robert's new picture is a prize-fighting saga called "The Crowd Roars" had nothing whatever to do with his trip, though he admitted he was going to see the championship pugilistic contest. As soon as the reporters pulled themselves together they smote him with all the old chestnuts—how about Barbara Stanwyck, and did you hate all that beauty publicity? Robert brushed them off and went on his way, chased frantically by 250 young members of the "Meet the Century Club."

But it was Disney, papa of Mickey and Donald Duck, who fascinated me, and make anything out of that you choose. Here was a young fellow who made film-cartoon history with his "Three Little Pigs," and then gambled everything he owned on a full-length cartoon fantasy called "Snow White." He bet, and he won—as Walt himself says, "Even the bankers were convinced." And here is Disney, staking the profits on another long film, "Bambi"—and coming East to be made an honorary master of arts of Yale and Harvard universities. No—I'm not old and creaky, and impervious to masculine good looks—but Walt Disney was the Wonder Man who came in on the Century that exciting morning! Taylor—oh yes, the actor with the nice widow's peak that all the girls are crazy for.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—While we are on the subject of arrivals, let me quote Dixie Tighe, the girl who meets all boats. She awards the Cliche Championship to an American who came sailing up the bay on the American Trader, pointed to the Statue of Liberty, and said: "There's the only torch singer who ever stands still!" . . . Who said it first—Helen Morgan?

* * * *

Bulletin from Southbury, Conn.—Six-year-old Martin, my storm and strife is rapidly uprooting the proud old Nutmeg State, and soon nothing will be left but its honored name. His chief claim to fame is a new 10-week-old Dalmatian pup named Punch, since all the other kids have to be nice to Martin to qualify as dog-minder . . .

* * * *

When the local swank set wants to have a really jolly time, it goes "slumming" with a trip to Coney Island, or a daring foray to the Automat, where a coin in the slot brings very good grub. Among those who have enjoyed this racy sport are Prince and Princess Radziwill, whoever they are. It is such fun to put in the nickels and dimes! The wisest comment my spouse brought back from that big war (remember?) was "It doesn't take much to amuse a soldier." And the same goes for the Uptown Crowd.

* * * *

And don't think we don't have our little troubles, too, now that the summer edition of the sacred Social Register is out. For instance, the name of Richard Whitney, once boss of the local stock exchange, cannot be found—since he is now trying out for first base on the baseball team at the old academy on the lordly Hudson, Sing Sing. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, being "in trade" (faugh!) is out, but her daughter, little Gloria, is in. And every lovely society girl who sings in supper clubs for money—is out! Oh, it's all so sad!

* * * *

Our Fashion Group wound up its luncheon season with a whopper on the subject of "Fashions in Fun." Luscious Lucius Beebe, reporter and bon vivant, presided, and Rudy Vallee and Cobina Wright emitted speeches. Comrade Vallee denounced swing music as just a revived gag for exhibitionists, while Mrs. Wright praised the young girls of "Saloon society" for the decorum of their conduct. It was an unusual party for the 550 Fashion Groupers present, since we usually listen to Style Experts. After the New Luncheon Deal, we went away again, no problems solved and none posed, either.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay.

Curls for Cinderella.

All the way home she thought about it. Maybe now that they had seen Shirley Temple, mother would let her have a permanent. Anyway, she would ask. But if not—well, she could at least do her hair up in curlers. Of course her curls wouldn't be red, still they would be curls. How could anybody look cute in hair that was straight and stringy—with not even a ribbon?

She saw herself sitting on the front steps at home, a mass of curls on her head, a ribbon tied in a cute little bow on top. Passersby stopped to exclaim, "What a darling little girl!" Marjorie and Joan begged her to play house. They would let her be "Mrs." Barbara came ingratiatingly, holding out the Persian kitten she never allowed anyone to touch. The mean Jenks boy offered her a ride on his coaster wagon. Lucille, the pretty little girl from across the street who never played with the rest of them, came over, put an arm around her and whispered a "secret," while the others looked on enviously.

* * * *

Yes, curls—and a ribbon—would make her a lot different. Then if she could have some cute dresses . . . with little piped jackets . . . and embroidery . . . and little tucks. Dresses that were short enough. Hers were always too long. So she wouldn't outgrow them, mother said. Mother never seemed to know what everybody was wearing. She bet Shirley Temple's mother—oh well, anyway she would pick the next dress herself. It would be way, way above her knees.

What cute little round arms and legs Shirley had! She looked at her own legs. "Pipe stems, father called them. Well, she would drink her milk from now on . . . she would drink lots and lots of milk . . . and eat her spinach . . . and her carrots—maybe they did make hair a little curly—and she wouldn't take any more cake or candy between meals . . . and she would eat a big bowl of oatmeal every morning . . . and then maybe she would have dimpled knees.

* * * *

Another thing, she would quit being afraid of grownups. She would not hang her head when they spoke to her. No, she would just look back at them boldly and shake hands or curtsey. She would even be sweet about it if they kissed her. And she would say, "Yes, Mr. Jones," and "No, Miss Smith," and she would try to think of nice cute things that would make them laugh when she answered their questions. Yes, and she would smile a lot.

Now that was the trouble—she didn't laugh enough, or jump around. Aunt Ruth's words flamed in her memory. "That's the most serious child I ever saw—a regular little old woman." Well, she would show them. From now on she would be gay . . . and jump up and down . . . and dance . . . and smile . . . and smile, smile. "She's such a happy little thing," an old lady had exclaimed, as Shirley passed. Well, she would be happy too . . . a mass of curls on her head, a ribbon bow, a dress with a little piped jacket, dimpled knees—and a smile.

* * * *

The bus stopped. As she followed her mother down the aisle she started to screw her mouth into a smile, then changed her mind. The sloppy old fat man on the end seat was staring at her . . . he might say something. Anyway, she would as well wait now until she got her curls and her ribbon and her cute little dresses.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Here Is Diet Now Used In Disease of Kidneys

Summer months are good ones for the kidney invalid because the skin takes the burden off the kidneys to a certain extent. Some forms of kidney disease have been cured by going to a desert climate such as New Mexico or Arizona or to Egypt. Summer climate in the United States closely approximates Egypt, so the nephritic may feel more comfortable at this time.

In the dietetic treatment of kidney disease, the principal considerations are to control the intake of salt, fluid and protein. In some cases the kidney cannot excrete salt or water and dropsy results, and in some cases there is a disturbance of protein nutrition. When the kidney is unable to excrete nitrogen it is natural that we should cut down the nitrogenous foods in the diet. This means very largely the protein foods such as meat, eggs, etc.

Nowadays the salt-free diet, in which no salt whatever is used, is thought to be excessively rigorous and is substituted by a salt-poor diet. It is almost impossible to make up a diet which excludes salt entirely.

In the early phase of treatment of severe nephritis a diet as follows is used, which is as near dry, salt-free and protein-free as is safe to give:

Later a diet such as follows can be used with benefit in practically all cases of kidney damage:

Breakfast: Grapefruit juice, French toast (dry), syrup, baking powder biscuits with jelly, coffee with sugar but no cream.

For Cooling Purposes.

Hot weather tip: keep the refrigerator well stocked with several kinds of fresh fruit, canned fruit, cooked and uncooked vegetables, salad "makings," fruit beverages and canned meats and fish.

Avoid Windburn Ills On Week-End Holiday

Open Car Holds Danger for Those Who Have Been Sunning on Beach; Hair and Eyes Especially Need Protection.

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE WEEK-END of July Fourth officially inaugurates the sunburn season, and if you ride home from the beach in an open car and add windburn, you'll know you've got something!

Even on a hazy day you are not safe from the sun. The infrared rays which cause the burn come right through the vapor, while the ultraviolet rays which give you a sun tan are stopped, and you burn without browning.

If this is your first real exposure to the summer sun, do not try to bake to a rich brown all in one sitting, or to prove that you "can take it!" Sun tan is something you should work up to gradually. On the first day, if you are wise, you will limit yourself to an hour in the early morning sun and then move over into the shade.

Along about 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon you can have another hour, provided you feel up to it. The beginner should venture out only in the early morning sun, for the ultraviolet rays are too strong between the hours of 11 a. m. and 3 p. m. Unless you have already acquired a protective coating of tan, you should not remain in the sun more than 15 minutes during these hours. On the second and third mornings you may be able to take an hour and a half of sun before 11 a. m., unless you have a burn from the day before.

The insidious thing about sunburn is that you do not realize you are getting it until you have got it. Watch for the first sign of redness in the skin. Get out of the sun the minute your skin begins to glow and feel hot to the touch. Lingering ten minutes more may leave you with a severe burn.

The danger from sunburn is that it interferes with the normal functioning of the pores. The skin is unable to throw off the poisons from the body and an additional burden is placed on the kidneys. Chilling further taxes organs already overworking to cope with the burn; so do not let the breeze blow directly on you.

If you do get a burn, drink plenty of water and fruit juices. Do not gulp down quantities of ice while you are hot, but have the water cool and sip it slowly to avoid indigestion.

You should protect your hair from the direct blaze of the sun. The beauty and health of the hair depend on its cystine content, and part of the cystine is destroyed by those same ultraviolet rays which give your skin a golden tan. That is the reason too much summer sun can make your hair look and feel like a bale of shredded wheat.

New Gadgets Bring Freedom to Homemakers Who Plan Fourth of July Meals and Parties

What center decoration could be more appropriate for a glorious celebration than this combination? The center bowl contains cherry ice cream topped and surrounded by magic firecrackeroons. This colorful dessert is inexpensive and easy to prepare.

A JOYOUS new freedom for housewives on Independence Day has found its way into modern homes in the last few years. With innumerable time saving kitchen and party appliances available today, Fourth of July feasts can be whipped up in no time.

The fast-freeze refrigerators and mixing units cut kitchen time in half. The clever new ice cream molds and the staggering variety of favors, place cards and decorations should make party giving this Fourth a pleasant diversion. Shopping for these in advance will give you added inspiration for your party.

Suppose you've a brood of social-conscious teen ages at home. Nothing in the world will please them so much as their own Independence Day party. They will want their party clothes and their table decorations to be patriotic to the limit. Satisfy these yearnings by letting them give a bangup party, with no burnt fingers. Substitute candy and cookies for the traditional fireworks. Their menu may include a favorite punch, potato chips, assorted sandwiches and a big bowl of chicken salad, an undying favorite with youngsters. The center of attention will rest upon the dessert, perhaps cherry ice cream and magic firecrackeroons.

4 cups shredded coconut
4 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted

Blend together sweetened condensed milk and shredded cocoanut. Press into balls firmly. Then roll on waxed paper until about 3 inches long by 1 inch in diameter. Let stand about 10 minutes, or until shape is set. Place on greased baking sheet. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 10 minutes, or until very delicately browned. Remove from pan at once. Cool and roll in cooled melted chocolate. Make fuses of strips of citron.

Fourth of July Dance.

An exceedingly effective arrangement for a buffet dance may be achieved with a lively imagination. Little expense and negligible work combine in this suggestion for a dance at country club or home. If you possess a big back yard, rig it up with cotton bunting and lanterns. Run red, white and blue streamers from tree to tree. Set the biggest table you have in the coolest spot, and trim it with red, white and blue crepe paper or bunting. If you can go "deeper" into this, get bright peasant linen cloth and napkins of the same color. There are some gay Bohemian woven ones on the market which are festive at a party. Mix peasant pottery to gain your desired color effect, and combine white candles and a white bowl of red roses or vice versa.

As your table will be buffet service, this menu will be appetizing and satisfying:

Chilled grapefruit—small American flag center; drum major salad, served on individual plates; fruit punch; bread and butter sandwiches; giant sherbet firecrackers; cocoanut gems.

GIANT SHERBERT FIRECRACKERS

(Automatic Refrigerator Method)

2-3 cup sweetened condensed milk
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup water
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 cup crushed raspberries
2 egg whites

Blend sweetened condensed milk, lemon juice, melted butter and water. Add raspberries; chill. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into chilled mixture. Pour into freezing pan. Place in freezing unit. After mixture is about half frozen, remove from refrigerator. Scrape mixture from sides and bottom of pan. Beat until smooth, but not until melted. Smoothe out and replace in freezing unit until frozen for serving. Serves six. Serve in slender parfait or water tumblers. Surround each with a cylinder of stiff red paper and put a cherry for a fuse in the top.

For a unique celebration for grown-ups—refreshments will be a trifle more sophisticated. If you plan a small informal dinner party, remember to lay stress on beautifully prepared and colorful dishes, combined with as cheerful a patriotic table setting as you can think up. A well-balanced but not too heavy menu includes:

Stuffed eggs in tomato jelly
Cold cuts
Hot blackberry muffins
Radish roses
Patriotic pie with cherry marshmallow topping
Black coffee

DRUM MAJOR SALAD

6 tablespoons Mayonnaise
1-3 pound cream cheese or Cottage cheese
3 tablespoons chopped walnuts
3 tablespoons chopped olives
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tomatoes
1 green pepper
Lettuce or salad greens
12 celery sticks
12 pitted olives

Mayonnaise Garnish.

Mash cream cheese. Add Mayonnaise and beat until smooth. Add walnuts, olives and salt and blend well together. Spread filling between two slices of tomatoes. Arrange strips of green pepper diagonally on filling (see illustration). Place on a bed of lettuce or salad greens. Cut celery sticks 4 inches long and place an olive on one end to resemble drum sticks. Garnish with mayonnaise. Serves six. Individual variations of the drum major salad and giant firecrackers are possible.

Pleasant Homes

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THERE'S a fine art to this business of being a hostess. And for the sake of brides just starting out on their careers, here are some of the rules:

Yourself, first of all. No use to try to put a party over unless you are looking like a million. So have a festive dress all ready to slip into at the witching hour, and a schedule that permits a last minute primping after you've got everything finished in the kitchen.

The menu, next—Whether it's a company dinner, coffee and cake on the porch, or iced punch in state, have one interesting touch. Something unexpected in homemade cake; sandwich filling that will enchant the men; a salad that is as beautiful to see as it is good to eat. If you have one high point, you can get by with staples for the rest. That makes even a big occasion easy to put over.

The appointments—Have all the dishes and all the glassware you're going to need sparkling on trays ready to bring forth to set the table whether it's for buffet supper, formal dinner or tea on the porch. It will save no end of flutter or dish washing during your party. The ideal way is to settle on the kind of entertaining you can do best, then buy enough china or glass to serve as many people as you're likely to have at once.

The decorations—Flowers arranged where they do most good and in colors that do things for the house. From the garden if possible, but when there isn't just the right thing available for the picking, don't hesitate to balance the budget to include some "boughten" blooms.

The house itself—Don't try to refix the whole place the day before company comes. If you start too many ambitious plans for changes just before the party, you'll get all involved and probably not finish anyway—only make make a wreck

The guests—Invite as few as possible just because you think you should. Ask people you really enjoy. And if they're a conversational argumentative gang, just turn them loose to talk.

Prizes Are Offered For Dishes Made Of Fresh Peaches

FRESH peaches have been selected for the new recipe contest. Possibly no other simple summer dessert in the American home holds as popular a position as peaches and cream. When one thinks of the "melt in your mouth" peach taste plus the dietetic good which the vitamins give, there is small wonder at the variety of recipes using fresh peaches.

Your recipe entry may consist of any fresh peach dish, as a peach cup, salad, custard, mousse or parfait. Peach bavarian creams and melbas are delicious, and there's nothing to compare with an old fashioned Southern peach pie, cobbler or short cake.

The most interesting fresh peach recipe will receive a prize of $3, the second choice $2, and there will be three additional prizes of $1 each. Mail you carefully written recipe to The Post Food Editor by Saturday, July 9.

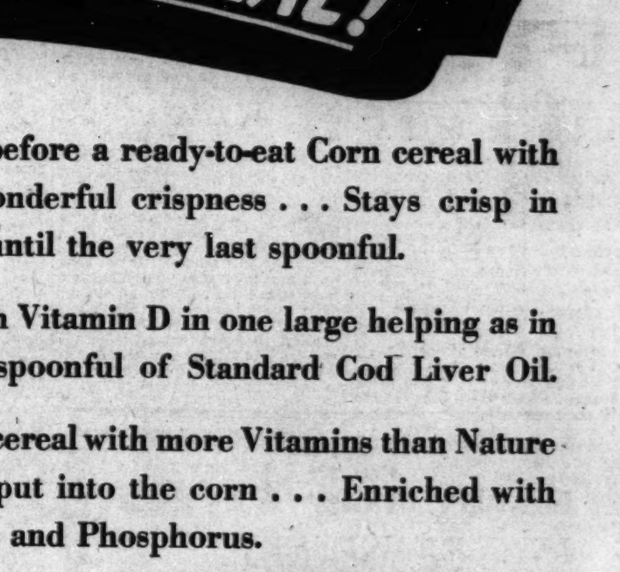
FOR ALL THE CHILDREN OF AMERICA... AMERICA'S GREATEST MILLER SETS OUT TO PRODUCE A PERFECT BREAKFAST CEREAL!

1. Never before a ready-to-eat Corn cereal with such wonderful crispness . . . Stays crisp in cream until the very last spoonful.
2. As much Vitamin D in one large helping as in one teaspoonful of Standard Cod Liver Oil.
3. A Corn cereal with more Vitamins than Nature herself put into the corn . . . Enriched with Calcium and Phosphorus.

A New Flavor You'll Thrill to!

PLUS A COMBINATION OF FOOD VALUES THAT NO READY-TO-EAT CEREAL EVER HAD BEFORE



A "perfect" cereal! Well, flavor comes first. So in Corn KIX we've tried to give you a breakfast cereal that tastes far more delicious than any cereal ever did before.

And you be the judge! Try KIX. . . and decide for yourself how we've succeeded! Just taste these marvelously crisp, crunchy globes of deliciousness . . . that stay crisp in cream until the very last spoonful . . . yet just seem to melt in your mouth. You'll say you never tasted a breakfast cereal like it before.

Then compare Food Values. Children and grown-ups, too, need the vitamins and minerals you get in Corn KIX. Vitamins B and D . . . Calcium . . . Phosphorus! And some of these it's hard to get enough of in the ordinary diet.

Ask your dealer for Corn KIX today. Let your family try this new taste thrill for breakfast tomorrow. See if they don't say—"A perfect breakfast cereal at last!"

GENERAL MILLS, INC., MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

IMPORTANT! Notice to Doctors, Dentists and Dietitians

We believe that you will welcome Corn KIX as an important addition to the general diet. If you will write us on your professional letterhead, we shall be glad to send you free, a full-size package for your own use.

For your information, Corn KIX has been fortified by the addition of the following: 115.6 milligrams of calcium and 82.3 milligrams of phosphorus pentaoxide (each calculated as dicalcium phosphate) added to each ounce of cereal. 200 U. S. P. units of Vitamin D added to each ounce of cereal—(1½ ounces of cereal contains Vitamin D equivalent to a teaspoonful of standard Cod Liver Oil.) A greater percentage of wheat germ incorporated in the cereal than found in the whole wheat berry.

NEVER BEFORE A READY-TO-EAT CEREAL WITH THIS COMBINATION OF VITAMINS, MINERALS AND FOOD VALUES

VITAMIN B—Corn KIX contains Vitamin B. This vitamin assists in the promotion of growth and stimulation of appetite. It also contributes to the proper nourishment of the nerves and blood.

VITAMIN D—Corn KIX contains Vitamin D. This essential vitamin, also known as the sunshine vitamin, aids in building bones and teeth. Children, especially, need it.

CALCIUM—Corn KIX also contains calcium. Calcium helps to build strong bones and is necessary for sound teeth. Growing children in particular need plenty of calcium.

PHOSPHORUS—Corn KIX is enriched with phosphorus, which combines with calcium to help build bones and teeth. Children require relatively more phosphorus than is required by adults.

Cookie Made With Bran Wins Prize

Mrs. L. E. Donaldson Gets $3 for Crunchy Cake Recipe.

Maple Pecan, All-Around Cookies Are Among Winners.

"A house should have a cookie jar
For when it's half past three and Children coming home from school
As hungry as can be
There's nothing quite so helpful
As filling children up
With fluffy spicy ginger cakes
And sweet milk in a cup."

So once wrote a well-known child's poet, who was quoted by Mrs. L. E. Donaldson in her contest letter last week. The reference is particularly apt, since her entry was awarded first prize for delicious health cookies, which children of all ages will enjoy. Every imaginable type of refrigerator cookie was entered. The quality of recipes, entered by scores of energetic housewives, was high. Many recipes were identical, and this made judgment difficult. Recipe suggestions carried such attractive names as "tropical burrs," "date rings," "fig slices," "nutty crispettes," "peanut butteroons," "Russian pecan wafers" and "grandma's 'lasses cookies."

Easy to Digest.

MRS. L. E. DONALDSON.

Mrs. Donaldson, 632 Princeton place northwest, receives a check for $3 for her refrigerator health cookie. This recipe embodies crispy flavor and healthful ingredients, good for young and old. The bran flakes and nuts make for a crisp, crunchy taste, while the extract flavorings create a delicious contrast.

Delicious Health Cookie.

2 cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup light brown sugar, firmly packed
2 eggs, well beaten
½ teaspoon almond extract
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
½ or 1 cup broken nut meats
1 cup bran flakes

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt and sift again. Cream cutter thoroughly, add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add bran and blend. Shape in rolls and wrap in waxed paper to chill thoroughly. Cut into thin slices and bake on greased cookie sheet in moderately hot oven (425 degrees F.) about ten minutes. Makes about four dozen.

Nut Cookie Winner.

MISS FRANTZ.

Miss Jean Frantz, 1623 Thirty-fifth street northwest, is the winner of the check for $2. There were many inviting recipes submitted on nut cookies, and this field was hotly contested, for all nut cookies are crunchy and good to eat. The suggestion of maple combined with chopped nut meats and cocoanut has a flavor all its own.

Maple Pecan Cookies.

1 cup fat
1 teaspoon baking powder
3 cups dark brown sugar
1 teaspoon soda
2 eggs, well beaten
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon maple flavoring
1 cup pecan meats, chopped
4 cups pastry flour
3 cups shredded coconut, chopped

Cream the fat and sugar together. Add the maple flavoring and the well-beaten eggs. Sift the soda, baking powder and salt with the flour and add with the chopped nuts and cocoanut. Form in rolls about 2 or 2½ inches in diameter and wrap in waxed paper. Chill till firm and slice a scant ¼ of an inch thick. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F).

All-Around Cookies.

MRS. MILLER.

Mrs. Ida Miller, 1225 Holbrook street northeast has entered many appealing recipes in The Washington Post contests. She is always neat and orderly in her approach to the subject. She has reason to smile, for she has won third prize for her recipe. Her Polka Dot cookies look so striking and are such appropriate all-around cookies, that you may want to try these yourself. Mrs. Miller creates three types of cookies from her basic vanilla refrigerator mixture—orange drops, chocolate cookies and Polka Dots. There is not sufficient room to publish all of these varieties, so only the basic recipe and the Polka Dot method appear here.

VANILLA REFRIGERATOR COOKIES.

(Basic Recipe.)

1½ cups butter or shortening
3 eggs
1½ cups granulated sugar
5 cups sifted all-purpose flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons vanilla flavoring

Cream butter with vanilla, add sugar gradually and beat until creamy. Beat in eggs. Sift dry ingredients, stir into dry mixture. Shape into 3 rolls about 12 inches long, wrap in waxed paper or aluminum foil, chill until hard. When ready to bake, slice off as many cookies as desired, about ⅛ inch thick. Place about ½ inch apart on ungreased baking sheets, bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees F) 12 to 15 minutes. Remove from sheet immediately, cool on a wire rack. This makes about 15-dozen cookies.

VANILLA POLKA DOTS.

Roll two-thirds part of dough on floured board into a sheet about 10 by 12 inches. The remaining dough can be used for chocolate or orange cookies. Make a roll about 10 inches long by ½ inch thick of chocolate mixture which contains 1½ squares melted chocolate. Place chocolate core on end of dough and roll. Wrap, then chill. When ready to bake, cut in ⅛ inch slices. Arrange on ungreased baking sheet and bake as directed in the basic recipe.

Filled Cookies.

MRS. MARTIN.

Mrs. W. Howard Martin, 6121 Eighth street northwest, seems to have found the secret for a delightful, digestible, filled cookie. Many filled cookies, bought in a hurry, are heavy and don't invite the consumer back for more. Mrs. Martin's cookies have won a prize this week, for as she herself says, "If safely hidden, these butterscotch cookies will keep for weeks."

BUTTERSCOTCH COOKIES.

¾ cupful butter
¾ teaspoon soda
3 cupfuls brown sugar
¾ teaspoon cream of tartar
3 eggs
5 cupfuls flour
1 tablespoonful vanilla

Cream the butter and sugar together. Add the beaten eggs, vanilla and mix in the dry ingredients that have been sifted together. Now divide the dough into half and divide one of the halves into half again. To ¼ of the dough, add 1 cupful of coconut. To another ¼, add ½ cupful (walnut) nut meats. Leave the remaining half plain. Form these three into separate rolls, wrap in wax paper, and store in the refrigerator until a convenient time to bake. (Store at least 8 hours.)

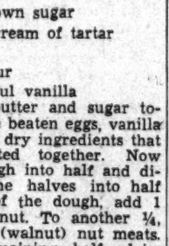
When ready to bake, slice the cocoanut and walnut mixtures very thinly and bake in a hot oven (425) until a golden brown. From the plain cooky dough may be filled cookies, as follows.

Filling.

1 cupful of chopped dates
½ cupful sugar
¼ cupful water
½ cupful nutmeats.

Cook these ingredients together until a spoonful is thick enough to hold its shape on a cooky. Slice the plain dough thinly as possible, place a small amount of the filling on one cooky and cover with another. Bake in a moderate oven (375) for ten minutes. In storing these cookes, don't mix them in the container for the filled ones will take some of the crispness from the others.

Peanut Butter Filling.



MRS. HICKS.

Mrs. R. H. Hicks, 4304 Tenth street northeast, says that after many tryouts she at last has found some peanut butter cookies that are really good. Although the ingredients are not so rich as those in other peanut butter cookies the recipe is more simple, less expensive and one that can be whipped up in a hurry. The peanut putter flavor is pleasing and not too strong.

Peanut Butter Cookies.

½ cup brown sugar
½ cup granulated sugar
½ cup butter
1 egg
1 cup peanut butter
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon soda
1½ cups bread flour
½ teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter, add sifted sugar gradually. Beat in egg, peanut butter, salt, soda, flour sifted before measuring and vanilla.

Roll the dough into small balls. Place them on a greased tin, press them flat with a fork. Bake them in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, for about 15 minutes.

Dried Lima Beans Now Packed in Cans

This Vegetable Provides a High Nutritional Value.

The dried lima is now available in cans for quick meal preparation. This vegetable was popular a generation ago, but has not been heard of so much in recent years.

The dried lima bean is rich in protein and ranks with other legumes in carbohydrates. It contains both vitamins A and B. As for such necessary food ingredients as calcium, magnesium, potassium, sodium, phosphorus, chlorine, sulphur and iron, you will best appreciate the dried lima bean by comparing it with such common foods as lean beef, eggs, fish, milk and potatoes. In iron, potassium and magnesium, the lima bean ranks higher than the five foods mentioned. In sodium and phosphorus it ranks second—and in calcium, third.

Limas en Casserole.

2 cups cooked dried limas (seaside bran)
2 cups milk
2 tablespoons flour
1 pimiento, chopped fine
6 thin slices bacon cooked until crisp

Cut cooked bacon into small pieces. Place a layer of limas in a buttered casserole; sprinkle with salt, flour, bacon and pimienta; repeat. Cover and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) about 30 minutes or until milk is all absorbed. Serve from the casserole, garnishing top with strips of crisp fried bacon and strips of pimiento.

Hint Offered For Picking Out Perfect Melon

There Is No Stem Attached to Vine-Ripened Cantaloupe.

Selection of melons in the summer is one task that might easily be turned into a pleasure and an achievement. There is an art in the buying of perfect melons.

The cantaloupe has led a checkered career. About the year I, men first began cultivating the muskmelon in India. This country probably gave the fruit its name. From the Orient it traveled west to Persia, Turkestan, thme Mediterranan and America . . .

Muskmelons are abundant and reasonably priced this year. A wide assortment appears on current grocery lists—the popular cantaloupe first, followed by the honeydew, the honeyball and "Hearts of Gold." The origin of the name cantaloupe is interesting. Muskmelons were just musk-melons when they arrived from the East in Italy centuries ago. Then a special variety was cultivated in the gardens of the Italian castle of Cantalup—thus the present name. Today the general term of cantaloupe applies to all oval or netted melons suitable to shipping.

New Varieties.

Persians and Cassabas are varieties which will be purchasable in quantity a little later in the season. Attentive marketers have noticed great improvement in cantaloupes in the last few years. This may be due to a variety called "Mildew Resistant, No. 45." This melon's flavor is rich.

The Post Food Editor happened to be touring the West a few years ago when the United States Department of Agricultural Research was experimenting to correct a powdery mildew blight. This disease threatenen to wipe out all the muskmelons of the fertile Imperial California Valley. It was of interest to observe the vast system of transplanting and fruit grafting which was being employed.

The Agricultural Department realized that it would be hopeless to attempt complete eradication of this blight. In 1926, several mixed varities of melon, which were not susceptible to disease, were imported from India. Crossing of the Hindu and California melons occurred—until in 1928 the No. 45 was born. Eight years of extensive spring and fall selection went on in the Imperial Valley until the Agricultural experts felt that their specimens were as fine as could be grafted. Last year the perfected "No. 45's" were placed on the market.

Prices Are Low.

Today there is an overabundance of ripe, delicious melons available. Prices are below those of former years.

Here are some suggestions from the United States Home Economics Bureau: First—Examine the stem end of the melon. Best melons are picked off the vine ripe—not green or overripe. Picked full ripe there will be a small even scar with no stem at all appearing. Honeydews are the only melons with their stems attached. Second—Look the whole cantaloupe over critically. It should be firm, well netted with a light golden yellow uniform color under the nettings. If unripe, the ground color is faded yellow. Third—The musky ordor of some cantaloupe reveals ripeness.

Technically the honeydew and ball are not classified as cantaloupes, as their coloring is from light green to light yellow and they are only vaguely netted. Their flesh is spicier and sweeter than their brethren fruit. After all, the final test of perfect melons is in their eating and this is up to individual taste. Whether the melon is wrapped and kept in a refrigerator or chilled prior to eating, it should never be filled with ice, as water spoils the flavor. Utilize chipped ice outside the halved, lightly-salted melon, a

Edison Fetes Visitors On Brazilian Man o' War

By Elizabeth Ford.

It's a man's whirl. Yesterday, while Washington's fair young things, who tore up vacation plans to remain in town for the arrival of the Almirante Saldanha, rested their heels in any cool spot they could find, the officers and midshipmen of the Brazilian training ship rushed from one stag affair to the next.

The Mayflower was the scene at 1 o'clock of the luncheon given by the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Charles Edison, in honor of Commander Washington Perry de Almeida, whose word is final aboard the Saldanha.

Others present from the Brazilian group were the Charge d'Affaires of the embassy, Joaquin de Souza Leao; the Naval Attache, Lieut. Comdr. Raul Reis; the Second Secretary, A. Teixeira Soares and Lieut. Comdr. Annibal de Prado Carvalho, executive officer of the South American boat.

Representing the Stars and Stripes at the affair were Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations; Rear Admiral George T. Pettengill, whose life is just one training ship after another; Rear Admiral Ralston S. Holmes; Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the Marine Corps; Laurence Duggan, frock-coated chief of the Division of American Republics of the Department of State; Commander W. H. P. Blandy, who used to be United States Naval Attache in Brazil, and Commander Harold J. Nelson.

Edison Dines Aboard Ship

Then last evening an exclusive group of guests hastened across the gangplank of the Almirante Saldanha to attend the dinner given by Commander de Almeida in honor of Assistant Secretary Charles Edison. Punctilious people, these Brazilians.

Those feted, in addition to Secretary Edison, included Admiral Leahy, Rear Admiral Pettengill, Rear Admiral Holmes, Rear Admiral J. O. Richardson, Capt. John R. Beardall, Commander Nelson and Lieut. Comdr. Reis.

The only break in the masculine monopoly came yesterday afternoon when Commander and Mrs. Atherton Macondray invited some friends over to their home on Seminary Ridge to meet Capt. Paul Bardy and Lieut. Capt. Antonio Doria. The cocktail party, both informal and impromptu, took place for the most part on the wide lawn which surrounds the Macondrays' house. Guests arrived around 5 o'clock and remained long after, enjoying every minute of the event.

Capt. Bardy and Lieut. Capt. Doria are friends of a friend of Commander Macondray. This mutual acquaintance is Commander Felix Johnson, a member of the Naval Mission now in Rio.

Down from Delaware and other historical points of interest came the Finnish delegation to the Tercentenary at 7:05 last evening. Arriving via the Presidential entrance at Union Station, they rode through the twilight to the Mayflower Hotel. From now on through Saturday, however, they will be occupying the limelight and the Finnish Minister and Mme. Eero Jarnefelt are having practically no extra time on their hands.

Finnish Women Visit Capital

Of interest to distaff members of Washington society is Miss Kyllikki Pohjala, a member of the delegation and a member also of the Finnish Parliament. She is vitally interested in all kinds of social and educational projects; studied in the United States during a stay here in 1934, and served as a nurse in the Finnish-Estonian civil war which took place in 1918. She recently has written a book on the conflict.

Then there is Miss Slikka-Liisa Virtano, not officially a member of the delegation, but traveling with it in the capacity of news correspondent for the Helsinjin Sanoaap. She is young, a brunette, and carries a candid camera. What she sees, hears and snaps is all being sent home for the first edition.

Last, but far from least, is Mme. Rudolf W. Holsti, wife of the Finnish Minister of Foreign Affairs. When Dr. Holsti was serving as Finnish Delegate to the League of Nations, they lived in Geneva. They have three attractive children.

Although the official program for the Finnish visitors is scheduled to start today with a trip to Mount Vernon, the Minister and Mme. Jarnefelt entertained at the Legation last evening at an unofficial dinner for their countrymen. Another unofficial affair will be the dinner which Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja will give in honor of the Holstis at the 1925 F Street Club this evening. Mr. Hurja is a member of the American-Finnish Delaware Tercentenary Committee and now may wear a blue and white rosette in his buttonhole for he has been made Commander of the Order of the White Rose of Finland.

Tomorrow, the Minister and Mme. Jarnefelt will fete Dr. and Mme. Holsti at luncheon at the Carlton, and in the afternoon, from 5 to 7 o'clock, will give a reception at the Legation in honor of the delegation.

One of This Season's June Brides

Hessler Studio.

MRS. HAROLD MOORMAN, who, before her marriage which took place on Wednesday, was Miss Nancy Lydia Ansell, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Samuel Tilden Ansell. With the bride is her junior attendant and niece, little Tracy Ansell.

Mrs. Taylor Due Back Tomorrow

Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, will return tomorrow from a stay in Boyce, Va. She will be here a day or two before going to her home in Chicago.

Miss Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, went to Locust Valley, Long Island, for the large supper dance given on Wednesday night by Mrs. Edward R. Stettinius for her granddaughter, Miss Isabel Stettinius Marsh. Miss Taylor attended a dinner given beforehand by two classmates of hers at Foxcroft, the Misses Margaret Beadleston and Joan H. Rhoades. The dinner was held at the Piping Rock Club.

Dr. and Mrs. Michael J. McInerney gave a dinner at the Shoreham Terrace last evening to celebrate the former's birthday.

Their guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Somerville, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Somerville 3d, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Harding, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Somerville, Mr. and Mrs. James R. Conard, Mr. and Mrs. John J. O'Connor, Dr. and Mrs. John R. Cavanah, Miss Elizabeth McInerney and Dr. Robert F. Costello.

Mrs. Beal Wed To School Head

Of interest to Washington was the wedding on Wednesday afternon in Newburgh, N. Y., of Mrs. Alice Dresel Beal, of that city, to George Van Santvoord, son of Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Van Santvoord, of Troy, N. Y., and headmaster of the Hotchkiss School at Lakeville, Conn.

The bride is the daughter of the late Lieut. George Dresel, U. S. Navy, of Washington, and the late Mrs. Dresel. She attended the Holton Arms School, here and is a member of the Junior League and the Cosmopolitan Club of New York.

The Rev. Arthur B. Kinsolving 2d, dean of the Cathedral of the Incarnation, Garden City, Long Island, performed the ceremony, which took place in St. George's Church. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Capt Alger Dresel, had no attendants. Carle L. Parsons, of Lakeville, Conn., was best man, and the ushers were Thaddeus Reynolds Beal and John Wilkie Beal, sons of the bride; John Hamilton Rice and Van Santvoord Bowen, nephews of the bridegroom; Gaspard d'Andelot Belin and William Warren Scranton, of Scranton, Pa.

Mr. Van Santvoord is a graduate of the Hotchkiss School, Yale University and Oriel College, Oxford. He formerly taught at Winchester College in England, Yale and at the University of Buffalo.

Phillipses Close Home And Go to New York

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips have closed their home on Foxhall road and are at the Plaza Hotel in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillips will proceed from there to their summer home at Ebensburg, Pa., returning to Washington in the fall.

Envoy to Sweden, Frederick Sterling, To Sail on July 15

Frederick Sterling, United States Minister to Sweden, will sail July 15 on the Manhattan for his post, to which he was named several weeks ago. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Sterling, daughter of Mrs. John R. Williams, of Washington. Mr. Sterling has previously served as Minister to Bulgaria and Ireland, and has been winding up his work as United States Commissioner of the Paris Exposition.

Last evening Mr. and Mrs. Sterling were guests of honor at a dinner, given by Mrs. James F. Curtis, at the 1925 F Street Club, her former home.

Richards Couple Will Reside Here

Now on a wedding trip which includes both Boston and Virginia Beach, Mr. and Mrs. James Wilson Richards will live in Washington after the middle of this month. Their marriage took place on Tuesday, June 28, at St. Gabriel's Church at 9 in the morning. Mrs. Richards is the former Miss Bonnie Marie Robinette, daughter of Mrs. O. Marguerite Robinette of Washington. Mr. Richards is the son of Mrs. John W. Richards, also of this city and the late Mr. Richards.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Roy J. Kerley, the bride wore white satin trimmed with lace and a tulle veil. She carried roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Sue Robbins served as matron of honor and was attired in turquoise blue chiffon. The bridesmaids were Miss Juanita Robinette, sister of the bride, and Miss Evelyn Richards, sister of the bridegroom. Both were dressed in gowns similar to that of the matron of honor.

Jerry Richards acted as best man for his brother, and the ushers were John Richards and Gately Richards, other brothers of the bridegroom.

The bride attended Maryland University.

Mme. Espil to Go To Narragansett

Mme. Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador, will leave next Wednesday for Narragansett, R. I., where she and the Ambassador have taken a house for the summer. She will remain there the rest of the season and the Ambassador will join her for weekends.

The Ambassador and the Naval Attache of the embassy, Capt. Saba H. Sueroy, will give a reception July 15 for the commander and officers of the Argentine training ship, the Presidente Saliamente, which arrives in Charleston, S. C., July 11.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Shields have closed their home, Grey Rocks, in Silver Spring, Md., and will spend the remainder of the summer at Gibson Island, returning to Washington September 10.

During part of the summer they will have as their guests their children, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Shields, and Mr. and Mrs. Roger S. Peacock and Mr. and Mrs. Roger D. Shields.

Washingtonians sailing tomorrow for South America on the Pan America include Col. and Mrs. Allen Kimberly and Mr. and Mrs. Alfredo Lauro.

On the same boat will be the retiring First Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Fernando Lobo.

Dr. Rodriguez Visits Capital

Dr. Jose Santiago Rodriguez, newly appointed Venezuelan Minister to Colombia, is now at the Mayflower Hotel. He will go to his home in Caracas for a short stay before taking up his duties in Bogota.

On Wednesday evening he entertained at dinner the United States Minister to Panama and Mrs. Frank P. Corrigan, and the Costa Rican Minister and Senora de Castro Beeche.

Dr. Rodriguez has been in Costa Rica for some months as the delegate from his country on the mediation board in charge of the boundary dispute between Honduras and Nicaragua. Dr. Corrigan is also a member of the same board.

Hulls to Attend Luncheon for Swedes, Finns

Tercentenary Commission's Affair Today Honors Delegations.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull will be among the guests at the luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel today by the United States Delaware Valley Tercentenary Commission, for the dignitaries from Sweden and Finland who arrive this morning for the Capital's share in the celebration of the 300th anniversary of Swedish-Finnish settlement in this country.

Although Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf is not expected to come here for the luncheon, latest reports say that he is recovering rapidly from his illness and that he may arrive with his suite Sunday. Crown Princess Louise may not come to Washington if her husband is unable to make the journey.

Col. Oscar Solbert, chairman of the executive committee of the tercentenary celebration, and former White House aide, will be among the guests at the luncheon. Others will include Mrs. Richard Sandler, wife of the Swedish Minister of Foreign Affairs; August Savstrom, speaker of the Swedish second chamber of the Riksdag, and Mrs. Savstrom.

Finland's delegation includes Dr. E. Rudolf W. Holsti, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Mrs. Holsti; Vaino P. Hakkila, Speaker of Parliament; several members of the Parliament, and Amos V. Anderson, Finnish editor. The Finnish delegation is at the Mayflower and the Swedes are at the Shoreham.

The Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt will head the members of the staff of the Finnish legation at the luncheon today. As the Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom are still in New York with the Crown Prince, the Counselor of the legation and Mme. Wenneberg will be the ranking members of the staff at the luncheon.

Among others in attendance will be Senator Joseph F. Guffey, chairman of the Tercentenary Commission, and his sisters, Miss Ida Guffey and Miss Paulette Guffey; Senator John G. Townsend, jr., vice chairman; Representative Pehr G. Holmes, secretary; Senator and Mrs. James J. Davis and Miss Jane Davis; Senator and Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, Representative Francis E. Walter, Representative William Fallen, Alexander B. Geary, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Scheidt, and Mr. and Mrs. Christopher L. Ward. The men in this list are members of the commission. The luncheon will start at 1:15 p. m. and will be held in the Blue room.

Cocktail Party Given for Friends By Harry Villard

Harry Villard, of the State Department, entertained a few friends at cocktail time yesterday in the garden of his Georgetown home.

Present in the group were Commander and Mrs. Charles Baker, Robert Buell, also of the Department, Mrs. Patterson Roberts, Miss Elsie Ekengren and Miss Betty Hardie.

Margaret Boss Will Wed Today

A wedding of interest to Washington and its vicinity will take place this afternoon in St. Philip's Episcopal Church in Laurel, Md., when Miss Margaret Snowden Boss becomes the bride of Dr. Donald Clay MacLaughlin, of Baltimore, the son of Mrs. Henry G. MacLaughlin, of Hagerstown. Miss Boss is the daughter of Mrs. James Gamaliel Boss.

Miss Boss will have Miss Mary Jane Stanley, her cousin, as maid of honor and the bridesmaids will be Miss Marian Holland and Miss Lucy Welling. D. Kenneth McLaughlin, of Hagerstown, will be his brother's best man.

Murphy-Borger Nuptials in D. C.

Gowned in exquisite chantilly lace over satin, Miss Magdalen Borger yesterday morning became the bride of Robert Henry Murphy. The ceremony was solemnized at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Church with the Rev. B. P. Hoffman officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Borger, of Washington, while Mr. Murphy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Murphy, of Boston.

Escorted by her father to an altar decorated with roses and candles, Miss Borger carried the prayer book which had also been carried by her mother when the latter was married in the same church.

Miss Frances Borger served as her sister's maid of honor and only attendant and was attired in peach marquisitte over satin with matching accessories. Her flowers were roses and delphinium. Frederick Casey, of Boston, Mass., was best man. The ushers were William Vincent Borger, of Washington, D. C., brother of the bride, and Manuello Sainz, of Havana, Cuba.

Following the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast for the bridal party and immediate families at Mrs. Kay's Tollhouse Tavern. Mrs. Borger, mother of the bride, was dressed in blue lace, with which she wore white accessories and a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Murphy, mother of the bridegroom, was in Alice blue with navy accessories. Her corsage was of gardenias.

When the couple left on their wedding trip, the former Miss Borger was wearing a delft and navy blue silk suit with navy accessories. On their return they will make their home in Arlington.

The bride is a graduate of Notre Dame Academy and Columbus University. She is a member of the American Bar Association and is past president of Phi Delta Alpha and Pi Chi sororities. Mr. Murphy is an alumnus of the National University of Law.

Jane Brower Married in Va.

The mariage of Miss Jane Compton Brower, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John William Brower, of this city, and William Bland Allen, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Allen, of Woodstock, Va., took place last evening at the home of the bride's aunts, the Misses Nancy and Ida Compton, in Front Royal, Va.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore her mother's wedding gown of ivory satin with a train. A long tulle veil was caught by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss June Maynard Trout, of Gastonia, N. C., was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Mary Lauck Walton and Miss Evelyn Fisher, of this city; Miss Anne Armstrong, of Staunton, and Miss Nancy Riddleberger, of Strasburg.

The best man was M. W. Magruder, of Woodstock, and ushers were Schuyler Bradley, of Harrisonburg, and Philip Grabill and French Boyer, of Woodstock.

Mrs. Allen attended Mary Washington College and George Washington University, where she was a member of Phi Mu Sorority. Mr. Allen was graduated from Massanutten Military Academy, at Woodstock. He is the grandson of the late Judge Henry B. Allen and Mrs. Julia Gatewood Allen.

Announces Marriage.

Mrs. Martha Wagner, of Washington, announces the marriage of her daughter, Marjory, to John P. Graves on June 28 at Calvary Baptist Church.

D. C. Resident Is Wed in N. Y.

Of interest to Washington is the marriage which took place June 25 in Schodack Landing, N. Y., of Miss Jean Webster, of Otmego, Mich., and William Morrow Requa, of Washington. The ceremony was performed at the summer home of the Rev. and Mrs. Leonard F. Requa, parents of the bridegroom. The Rev. L. F. Requa, who is pastor of the First Baptist Church in Southington, Conn., officiated. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. William H. Webster, of Otmego.

After a wedding trip through the Adirondacks, the couple will make their home in Washington. The former Miss Webster is a graduate of Western State College and has been teaching in the Bangor (Mich.) High School. Her husband was graduated from Cornell in 1931.

Given in marriage by her brother, the Rev. Patrick O'F. Webster, pastor of the Bangor Lawrence Congregational Church, in Michigan, the bride wore white lace and net over white satin. Her fingertip veil fell from a coronet of lilies of the valley and she carried white roses.

Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Eileen Webster. Leonard J. Requa, jr., served as his brother's best man. The ushers were T. A. McGoey and G. J. Wightman, of New York; E. K. Lochner, of Rosemont, Pa., and Fudley Smith, of Washington.

Women Plan Dinner Here For Swedes

Miss Alice Paul Will Welcome Friends in Visiting Group.

Fete for Tercentenary Delegation to Be at Belmont House.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Distinguished women of the Tercentenary delegation from Sweden and Finland will be entertained at dinner tomorrow night at Alva Belmont House, headquarters of the National Women's Party. Mrs. Stephen Pell, of New York City, national chairman of the party, has come to Washington to welcome them and the 50 guests will include other officers of the organization and presidents of women's groups such as the National Association of Women Lawyers and others of allied interests.

Miss Alice Paul, who returned three weeks ago from Geneva, where she had been since the assembly of the League of Nations last September, as a member of the committee on international relations of the Woman's Party as well as of its National Council, will greet several of the visitors as friends and co-workers. These will include Miss Kerstin Hesselgren, member of the Swedish Riksdag, who for years has been the only woman in the Swedish delegation to the League and is prominent in the woman's movement in Europe. Dr. Hanna Rydh, professor of archaeology at Stockholm and wife of the governor of one of the large provinces in Sweden, is another. She is also president of the Fredrika Bremer Association of Sweden, named for Fredrika Bremer, whose work for women there stands beside that of Susan B. Anthony in this country.

Wives of Cabinet Members Among Guests

Mme. Rickard Sandler, wife of the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Sweden, who has been president of the League Assembly for a year, will be in the party of ten guests of honor for whom the dinner is being given. She has spent much time with her husband in Geneva and has been active in work for women. Another guest will be Mme. Holsti, wife of the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Finland, and, also from that country, Miss Kyllakki Pohjala, a member of Parliament.

The dinner is being arranged by the National Woman's Party in response to the requests of the Tercentenary Commission and the Swedish Legation, because of the interest of members of the delegation in the woman's movement in this country.

Mrs. Pell, Miss Paul, Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley and Mrs. Charles Bayard Hilles, of Delaware, are also taking the boat trip with them to Mount Vernon today in order to have an opportunity to exchange information on what is being done here and in their countries.

The dinner will be served tomorrow night in the garden of historic Alva Belmont House which extends the length of the old coach house and lies partly in the shade of a spreading Dutch elm tree said to be 200 years old. The garden is always the scene of summer parties there when the weather is fair.

Mrs. Pell will preside during the evening. Mrs. Hilles will welcome the guests in behalf of the women of Delaware, where the settlers from Sweden and Finland landed 300 years ago. She is also bringing a huge Swedish flag which she had made for the occasion and which will be displayed in honor of the visitors. Representative Virginia Jenckes has been invited to be present and to give a welcome in behalf of the women members of Congress. Mrs. Atbie Scott Baker, of the National Council of the Woman's Party, who has spent several seasons in Geneva, also will be among the women of the hostess group.

Arrangements for the dinner are in charge of Mrs. Marie Moore Forrest, chairman of the District of Columbia Branch of the Woman's Party, who will be assisted by Mrs. Edwina Avery, Mrs. Wiley and Mrs. Horace Pote.

Budget Conference Held at General Federation Headquarters

MRS. SAIDIE ORR DUNBAR, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, yesterday conferred with members of the budget committee at its first meeting since the beginning of her administration. Allotments are being made to the different departments of the organization for the work of the coming year. Left to right are Mrs. Roland H. Latham, of Asheville, N. C., chairman of the budget; Mrs. Dunbar, Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, first vice president, and Mrs. L. J. B. Buck, of Richmond, Va., treasurer, photographed at the headquarters, 1734 N street.

JUNIOR GIRLS of the Community Building of the Y. W. C. A. at 614 E street will have a clubroom all their own this summer. A room in the basement of the building has been enlarged, redecorated and equipped for their use through the gift of a friend.

The summer director of recreation, Mrs. Anne Klesius, who will work with the regular director, Mrs. Virginia Sholar, will be there to meet the girls this afternoon at 4, when a reception will mark the formal opening of the room. Miss Hettie P. Anderson, general secretary of the Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. John W. Davidge, chairman of the Community Building committee of the Y. W. C. A., Miss Aleada Nelson, director; Mrs. Elizabeth Hubbard, cafeteria director, and Mrs. Isabel Wagner, secretary, will all be present.

The club has been equipped with a new ping pong table and bookshelves so it can be used for a reading room and library as well as a play room.

In the lounge of the Community Building is an exhibition of oils by the Society of Washington Artists, which will hang there during the summer.

MRS. FRANK A. LINZEL, president of the Woman's Council of Churches and also of the Building Company of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club, is putting things in shape to leave Saturday for a vacation in Ocean City, N. J. She will be accompanied by Mr. Linzel and their daughter, Peggy.

The latter, now attending the Presbyterian Young People's Conference at Hood College, Frederick, Md., will spend the second week of a visit in New Jersey with a friend in Ventnor.

• • • •

DR. W. BRADFORD BAYLISS, director of religious education at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, is in charge of the conference at Hood College this summer. It opened last Saturday and closes tomorrow. About 300 young people from Pennsylvania, Maryland and the District are attending, including 21 from Chevy Chase Church.

Women Voters To Have Offices

The Voteless District of Columbia League of Women Voters of which Mrs. Louis Ottenberg is president, has announced its plan to establish a headquarters next season. It will be opened September 15 in room 409 of the Star Building.

The league, which has been one of the most active women's organizations in the District in the past few years, has carried on its program without a central meeting place. Committees which have gathered statistics on relief, unemployment, the school situation and other matters of concern to the District in which the league has interested itself, have been obliged to work out their reports at home or in borrowed office space.

Mrs. Gardner Jackson is chairman of the committee for furnishing the new headquarters and word has gone out among the league members that she is ready to receive any office furniture and equipment they have to offer. The new office will be conducted by volunteer workers ready to take over the administrative details.

Department chairmen for the coming year will be: Mrs. Charles Weston, government and its operation; child welfare, Mrs. Charles Lee Hodge; government and education, Mrs. Allen Moore; government and economic welfare, Mrs. P. W. Campbell; Government and foreign policy, Mrs. M. O. Lorenz; Government and the legal status of women, Mrs. Pearl B. Klein, and training class for new members, Mrs. Henry Chalmers.

Mrs. Teachum Seated by Lodge

Mrs. Mary Teachum, known as "Mother Teachum," founder of the Order of Job's Daughters in the District of Columbia, was installed last night at the Wardman Park Hotel as grand guardian of the Grand Guardian Council. She succeeds Mrs. Laura S. Wallace, who a year ago organized the grand council, including the six bethels in Washington, and was its first elective grand guardian.

The first bethel was started by Mrs. Teachum 15 years ago, and a second was formed ten years later. These functioned under the supreme guardian council, which appointed the grand guardian of the district each year. Mrs. Wallace, who was apointed grand guardian two years ago, instituted three bethels and chartered a fourth, making Washington eligible to have a grand guardian council of its own. The two-day council session just closed is the first annual meting of this body since its organization.

Other newly-elected officers, who were installed last night at the ceremony, attended by several hundred persons, included: Associate grand guardian, Herbert B. Nevius; vice grand guardian, Miss Mary Benser; vice associate-grand guardian, William G. Newman; grand guide, Mrs. Mary Reed; grand marshal, Miss Dorothy Vernon; grand secretary, Mrs. Aimee Schmidt; grand treasurer, Harry Hayden; grand chaplain, Mrs. Marguerite Beveridge; grand librarian, Mrs. Flora Campbell; grand director of music, Mrs. Sallie Wilson; grand first messenger, Mrs. Elizabeth Newson; second messenger, Mrs. Nellie Brattain; third messenger, Miss Helen Hett; fourth messenger, Mrs. Raleigh Christie; fifth messenger, Mrs. Ella Dowden; grand senior custodian, Mrs. Frances Robinson; grand junior custodian, Mrs. Roberta Stewart; grand inner guard, William H. Fox; grand outer guard, John McConnell.

The installation was held in connection with a banquet and followed by a dance. Harry Schmidt, grand patron of the Order of the Eastern Star of the District of Columbia, acted as installing officer; with Mrs. Wallace, installing guide; William J. Dunham, retiring associate grand guardian as marshal; Mrs. Wilson as installing musician; Miss Virginia Burnham of Maryland, as chaplain, and Louis Carl of Virginia, supreme inner guard, as installing secretary. At the close of the ceremony Mrs. Wallace presented Mrs. Teachum with the McArthur jewel and in turn was presented with the jewel of the past grand guardian.

Registration Opens Today for Those Spending Vacations in City.

Registration opens this morning at the Y. W. C. A. for Camp Stay-at-Home, the summer program for the Girl Reserves who are spending their vacation in Washington. Special activities for senior boys and girls will be an important part of the "camp" program which starts July 6.

On Monday evenings from 6 to 10 o'clock, the program will include supper, tennis, ping pong, mixed glee club, newspaper publication, and dramatics. On Wednesdays evenings there will be dancing on the roof of the Y. W. C. A. from 8 to 11 o'clock, and on Fridays, the program will offer splash parties, boat trips, cookout suppers, bike riding and parties at the "Road Side."

General direction of the program is under Mabel R. Cook, girl reserve executive. Her staff will include Margaret Graves and Mrs. Van T. Smith, of the Girl Reserve office, who will assist in general direction of the program; Mrs. Virginia Sholar, recreational secretary, who will have charge of dramatics, the craft shop, and the stage crew; Miss Mary M. Burnett, in charge of the music, including a mixed glee club, organized at the request of prospective day campers; Kathryn Latimer, who has had experience as an accompanist and teacher and who will play for the Wednesday evening dances under the supervision of Mrs. Homer Wills.

In addition to members of the staff regularly employed at the "Y," a group of volunteers will assist. Publication of a weekly newspaper by members of the senior high school boys' and girls' group, will be directed by Mary Lesta Wakeman, of American University.

Alison Claflin, well known in District tennis circles, will be in charge of tennis instruction. Miss Claflin was graduated from George Washington University this June and will enter Wellesley College in the fall on fellowship to begin work on her master's degree in health and physical education.

Lydia Farrall will act as office assistant, helping Miss Wakeman on the newspaper. Jane Lippert will help supervise the Monday evening programs.

Special Thursday programs for junior girls will include indoor activities and outdoor excursions. Four members of the staff, Ruth Wood, student at Illinois State Normal; Sue Klaber, Women's College, Greensboro, N. C.; Mary Louise Dolan, and Martha Cooper will conduct these. Miss Wood specializes in crafts, Miss Klaber and Miss Dolan will work in the library, and Miss Dolan also will assist with registratiotn.

Camp activities are being arranged for three separate groups. Senior high school boys and girls will meet Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings; senior girls, Tuesday and Friday mornings, and junior high school girls, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday mornings.

The girls' morning groups will swim, play tennis, engage in craft work, use the library, and have music and dancing instruction. Juniors on Thursdays will hold all-day programs lasting until 3 p. m., and including indoor and outdoor projects.

A committee of girls and boys has tentatively arranged schedules for the mixed group activities, and will remain in charge of program planning through the summer. Those on the committee are Robert Bollan, William Bray, Betty Falconer, Stuart Magee, Walter Nichlas, Edward Shipley, Sheridan Smith, Harriet Wolk and Betty Ann Worrall.

Although the campers themselves will be responsible for planning and helping to carry out most of the programs through the summer, certain definite events already have been scheduled. The entire camp will visit Mrs. Luke I. Wilson's estate, Tree Tops, at some time during the season. Mrs. Wilson is a member of the Y. W. C. A. board of directors. The senior girls will psy one visit to Y. W. C. A. Camp Kahlert on West River at Sudley, Md.

Dr. Frances M. Butts Honors Mrs. Olmstead

Dr. Frances Moon Butts entertained at luncheon Monday at the Mayflower in honor of Mrs. Dawson Olmstead, who will leave tomorrow with Maj. Olmstead for his new station at Fort Monmouth, N. J.

Other guests present were Miss Clara Mandersheide, Mrs. Nellie Walker Irish, Mrs. James E. Watson and Mrs. Ida E. James.

Time Heals Civil War Veterans' Fierce Rivalry at Gettysburg

The Post is the only daily morning paper in Washington with A. P. WIREPHOTO Service.

"I'm the Healthiest Man I Ever Saw"

Health is a popular subject among the Blue and the Gray veterans gathered at Gettysburg for the seventy-fifth anniversary of the great battle. Sampson S. Simpson (right), of Los Angeles, the 6-foot 2-inch commander of the Pacific Division of the U. C. V., confides to Gen. John W. Harris, 90, of Oklahoma City, "In all my 94 years I never saw a man in such health as I have been."

At left, two Confederate veterans greet a Union soldier in the mode of 1938. They are (left to right) W. D. Welsh, 100, of Pennsylvania; Durant Hatch, 93, and John Harris, 90, both of Oklahoma City.

Hurt Three Times in Life, Each Time at Gettysburg

James Hammaker (above, right), 94, once of the Fiftieth Virginia Infantry, wonders as his nurse gives him a drink if Gettysburg isn't a jinx. He was shot in the leg in the famous battle, and while he lay wounded he was shot again because he refused to surrender. Coming to the reunion, he fell from a Pullman berth and broke his shoulder. W. W. Morton (above, left), 93, of Indiana, was a victim of too much excitement. An Army surgeon and a nurse give him their full attention.

'Anxious to Get Up and "See Some Girls"

A. H. Yeager, 94, of Texas, arrived at the Gettysburg reunion "rarin' to go" but soon found that bed was the best place after all. To all who visited him he waved a cheery "Hello" and said he was anxious to get up and "see some girls." He was one of several veterans who were victims of exhaustion and excitement.

Sweep Prizes in State Golf Event

Frank Cunningham (swinging), Burning Tree professional, and Volney Burnett, Kenwood amateur, who made a clean sweep in the Maryland State 3-in-1 tournament yesterday at Chevy Chase. They paired to win the pro-amateur, Cunningham won the sweepstakes and Burnett the amateur prize with a 70.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

There were several very fine pieces of literature produced by the heavyweight championship fight at the Yankee Stadium last week, but the prize for brevity and accuracy should go to Cameron Shipp, who came up from North Carolina to cover his first sports assignment.

His complete story, which appeared on the first page of the Charlotte News, follows:

By CAMERON SHIPP
Charlotte News, Book Editor.

Yankee Stadium, June 22.—Blow by blow description of Louis-Schmeling fight:

Bang!—

* * *

On a recent visit to Washington I came across something unique, at least to me, in the way of golf courses. It was designed by Tom Ryan, the professional, and built on the 13-acre estate of Lowell Mellett over in Alexandria, Va. If you don't think a private, nine-hole golf course can be built on 13 acres, this might give you an idea.

VIDMER.

There are only three greens, but there are nine tees. Each hole is played three times, but each time from a different direction and at different distances. There are traps, bunkers, rough and fairways on each hole and the yardage ranges from a 75-yard shot on No. 4 to a 252-yard shot on No. 5. There are two par-4 holes and the rest are threes, giving the course a par of 29.

But the most attractive part of the layout is that at no time are you more than a drive and a niblick from the "nineteenth" hole!

* * *

Speaking of golf, which I admit I often am, Perley Boone, publicity director for the 1939 World's Fair, has a 13-year-old son who plays rather regularly at Oakland. The other day he was going around the course with another youngster and just after he had driven from the fifteenth tee a couple of senior members loomed up over the horizon, so the boys stepped aside to let them go through.

One of the men banged out a beautiful drive down the middle of the fairway and in high glee, with just a touch of condescension, he turned to young Bunny Boone and chuckled:

"Well, young fellow, do you think you'll ever be able to hit a ball like that?"

"Well, I'm not sure, sir," Bunny replied with an air of respect, "but I think I'm out in front of you."

The older man roared with laughter. "Out in front of me, eh? You never hit one that far, son."

He strutted on down the fairway, came to his ball and hit his second shot. Then he walked on about 30 yards, looked down and to his amazement came across Bunny's ball.

"Is this your drive?" he asked, his mouth open.

"You didn't see it come over your head, did you?" Bunny asked.

* * *

A few years ago Jed Harris, the producer of Pulitzer Prize Plays, including the current winner, "Our Town," attended the opera in Munich and met Gene Tunney for the first time.

Immediately the former heavyweight champion of the world began talking about the performance. He spoke of the music, the voices, the stage settings, the actors and the actresses, while Jed stood by patiently. Finally the producer spoke up.

"It may seem strange to you, Mr. Tunney," he said, "but whereas, you are so terribly interested in opera, I am just as interested in boxing. Won't you have lunch with me tomorrow?"

Cunningham And Burnett Top Golfers

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Frank Cunningham, Burning Tree professional, and Volney Burnett, Kenwood amateur, played the Chevy Chase course in a total of 1 over par yesterday, Cunningham with 69 and Burnett a 70, scored a best ball of 63 between them and made a clean sweep of the top prizes in a Maryland State Golf Association pro-amateur event.

Out in 31, 4 under par, they returned in 32, 2 under, bettering perfect figures by 6 strokes. Cunningham's 35, 34—69 won the pro sweepstakes, and Burnett's 34, 36—70 won the Class A amateur event for a perfect day for the twosome.

Baltimore entrants monopolized the second and third prizes in the am-pro, Ralph Beach and his partner, Bobby Goldman, Suburban, scoring a 5 under par 29 on the back nine for a 64 best ball, while Andy Gibson, Bonnie View mentor, and E. G. Barnes, Rolling Road, were next with 34, 31—65.

Three Teams in Tie.

Three teams finished in a tie with 66's for the other awards in the pro-amateur event, Cunningham and Maury Fitzgerald, Kenwood, 34—32—66, and Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam pro, with two partners, Eddie Bean, of the home Landover course, with a pair of 33's and Bobby Brownell, Manor, with 35—31—66.

Gibson, most consistent winner of the year, three-putted three greens and finished a stroke behind Cunningham in the pro sweepstakes with a 1 over par 70, good for a second place tie with Cliff Spencer who had the lowest back nine of the day, a 35, and coupled it with an outgoing 37 for his 70. Ralph Beach with 71 and host club pro Robert T. Barnett, with 72 were just out of the money.

Burnett's 70 won the gross prize in the Class A amateur event by a 5-stroke margin over Harry Pitt, Manor ace, who had 75. Two tied for the low gross in A Class, C. S. Catherman, jr., Cumberland, with 76—6—70, and Maury Fitzgerald, Kenwood, 77—7—70. Pitt also was runner-up in the net awards with 75—3—72.

Jones Wins "B" Gross.

George Jones, Manor, scored an 81, from consistent nines of 41 and 40 to win the gross award in Class B, while Ed Mattingly, Cumberland, was the low net winner with 82—10—72.

Cunningham, making his second competitive start of the year, played a fine round over the long course that was stretched to its full 6,607 yards. He missed par on only the first and fifteenth holes, where he was trapped and over, respectively, and birdied the third, with a 20-foot putt and the fourteenth, where he placed his second shot dead to the pin. The other 14 holes matched the card.

Burnett had a fine chance to better par, needing par for a 68 on the seventeenth tee, but his second shots on the finishing holes fell short and he finished 5-5 for a 70. The sixth hole was his only other mistake, while he garnered birdies on five and nine, with putts of some 10 and 15 feet.

Burnett aided the Burning Tree mentor by six shots, with pars on the two holes where Cunningham was over, his birdies on five and nine, and pars on eight and eleven, where he received strokes to turn them into birdies. Volney, '37 Maryland State champion, won the mixed two-ball with Mrs. Meckley over the same course last year with a 70, and is District pro-amateur titleholder, with George Diffenbaugh.

Amateur-Pro.

Frank Cunningham (Burning Tree) and Voley Burnett (Kenwood), 31, 32—63.

Ralph Beach and R. Goldman (Suburban), 35, 29—64.

John Burke Wins, Enters Semifinals

Routs Holditch 12 & 11 in Inter-Collegiate Golf Tourney.

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., June 30.—At the conclusion of a day of sensational shotmaking, which saw Willie Turnesa, young Holy Cross favorite, fail again in his bid for the crown, the National Intercollegiate Golf Tournament today entered the semi-final stage.

Turnesa, 23-year-old member of the Elmsford, N. Y., Turnesas, after going into a 2-up lead through 18 holes of the 36-hole quarter-finals, could not cope with the steadiness of Bob Babbish, University of Detroit sophomore, and fell by the wayside, 3 and 2.

Lew W. Oehmig of Chattanooga, Tenn., and the University of Virginia, who tied the Holy Cross senior for medal honors in the qualifying, stepped out to take a brilliantly-fought duel from Henry Castillo, Louisiana State sophomore, 3 and 1.

Louisiana State University, however placed a representative in the semi-finals as Bert McDowell, a sophomore from Kansas City, came through with a surprise 2 and 1 triumph over Bill Barclay, of the University of Michigan.

John P. Burke, a Georgetown University sophomore Newport, R. I., breezed through easily to the semi-finals with a 12 and 11 decision over Stanley Holditch of Georgia Tech, quarter-finalist last year, whose game collapsed.

In the semi-finals at 36 holes tomorrow, Oehmig plays McDowell and Babbish faces Burke. All four survivors are seeking the college crown for the first time.

Burke played the first nine in one under par, birdieing the 3rd hole with a four by chipping close, and parring the rest. Holditch, bad on chips and putts and "feeling bad" was five over.

Burke finished out the 18 ten up, bogeying 11th and 14th after landing in traps, but birdieing 16th with 10 footer and 18th by getting on green in two. Holditch three putted 11th and 12th, missed tee shots on 13th and 14th and achieved the only win of morning when he chipped in from the edge for a birdie four on 17th.

Burke won first three holes of afternoon, sinking ten footers for birdies on the last two. Holditch won the 22nd with a birdie and 24th when Burke overshot the green on his second blow. Burke parred 25th and match ended when Holditch missed a short putt.

Yale, Kent Crews Win

Oarsmen Advance to 3d Round for Thames Cup.

By the Associated Press

Henley-on-Thames, England, June 30.—In bleak, rainy weather and fighting a chill head wind, the Yale 150-pound crew and the eight from Kent School of Connecticut advanced into the third round of Thames Challenge up competition in the Royal Henley Regatta, and Joe Burke, of Philadelphia, the United States champion, reached the semifinals in the diamond sculls.

Kent School, pitted against the Harvard lightweights by the luck of the draw, defeated the Crimson oarsmen by three-quarters of a length and rowed the mile and five-sixteenths in 7 minutes 17 seconds. Yale, which had drawn a first-round bye, was clocked in 7:39 for its length triumph over the First Trinity crew of Cambridge.

Kent School will meet St. John's College of Oxford in the third round tomorrow, while the Elis race the British Imperial College Boat Club.

Burk, favorite in the diamond sculls, scored by 2½ lengths over J. D. Steele, of Great Britain in 10:16, and tomorrow will row against T. H. Tyler, of the Thames Club.

The other United States sculler, R. W. Bates, of Boston, was beaten by L. D. Habbitts, of the Reading Rowing Club. The Englishman, clocked in 9:47, won by a length and a quarter.

Dean Is a Father.

Los Angeles, June 30 (AP).—Man Mountain Dean, 317-pound bearded wrestler, and an avowed candidate for the Georgia Legislature, today received a telegram from his wife at Norcross, Ga., advising that he was a father. He said the telegram told him the newcomer was "a boy, weight 11¾ pounds."

O'Mahoney Pins Dusek At Stadium

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The summer-time schedule went into effect last night before 1,500 fans at Griffith Stadium as Danno O'Mahoney, a fine looking lad, cracked his vaunted Irish whip on the somewhat soiled and bruised carcass of Joe Dusek and put him away in 35½ minutes of honest toil.

Ordinarily this would be at least a 55-minute job, but Joe was warm around the midriff from a series of hasty exits from the ring, and Danno was hot under the collar because of Dusek's underhanded tactics, and the combination accounted for the rather abrupt termination.

Biggest news of the evening, perhaps, was the comeback of Walter Gray, the bald cavalier who issues more challenges than Tony Galento from a roomy chair in Row 2. It was his first of the outdoor season, and he displayed rare form despite his two-month layoff. He almost landed a potent right on Cliff Olson, but 12 people between him and the prospective recipient ruined his marksmanship.

The preliminaries were not up to snuff, with the single exception of the Jack League-Cliff Olson business, which went a half hour to a draw. Olson succeeded in riling all the ringside customers and mussing League's diminishing wig, but couldn't quite put his man down. This was, from a strictly neutral viewpoint, the hottest match of the evening.

In other bouts Hank Barber disposed of Thor Johnson in eight minutes with a body roll and press; Bill Metelof tossed Angelo Savoldi in 15 minutes with a crotch hold and body press, and Gino Garibaldi pinned a Gawgia stranger billing himself as Ed (Strangler) White, in 11 minutes with a cluster of flying tackles.

In the main maul O'Mahoney got off to a slow start and Dusek cuffed him around rather smartly. Danno looked like the scion of a long line of hod-carriers in those first few minutes, but once he found himself, had things all his own way. Joe showed the fans a new stunt when he did a couple of laps around the track on his knees, vainly reaching for a rope, with O'Mahoney astride his back, trying to clamp on a scissors hold.

O'Mahoney was heaved into the non-combatants twice, and Dusek made the trip exactly four times. Joe grunted like a pack of hungry wolves in a hamburger stand, and seemed to take his punishment rather noisily. Danno was quiet and reserved, and in the end his strong, silent man stuff triumphed.

Bob Pastor Given Nod Over Fiducia As Crowd Boos

Nutley, N. J., June 30 (AP).—The crowd didn't think so, but Referee Gene Roman declared Bob Pastor, New York heavyweight, the winner over Freddy Fiducia, of Newark, tonight in a 10-round feature boxing event.

Pastor, who "ran" Joe Louis, world champion, for 10 rounds shortly before the Brown Bomber won his title from Jim Braddock last year, forced the fight from the outset. It was the former N. Y. U. boy's sixth straight victory of a campaign he expects will earn him the right to meet Louis for the title in 1939.

Fiducia, at 191, six pounds heavier than Pastor, tired at the start of the fifth round. The New Yorker worked persistently at the Newark fighter's mid-section. Each Fiducia rally brought cheering from the crowd and when Roman announced Pastor the winner heavy booing chased the New Yorker from the ring.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, June 30.—Van Lingle Mungo gave up just one hit today—a two-bagger by Hal Worstler—as he pitched his best game in two seasons in hurling the Dodgers to a 5-to-0 shutout victory over the Boston Bees.

He fanned six, and, although he walked eight, he was in full control of the situation at all times. Only two runners got as far as second base, and none passed that station.

Charlotte Decker Beats Mrs. Miller

Baltimore, June 30.—The 1937 District of Columbia tennis standings and the Homeland Racket Club seedings were upset today by the 8—6, 6—4 victory 18-year-old Charlotte Decker, of Washington, took from the veteran, Mrs. Dorette Miller, also of the Capital.

The survivor is the District No. 8 player and the loser No. 5. Their engagement today was the quarter-finals, Miss Decker having conquered, earlier in the afternoon, 14-year-old Helen Harrison, who took her first tennis title this morning, the Middle Atlantic girls under 15.

Both Mrs. Miller, who was seeded third, and Miss Decker, unranked, took their services all the way in the opening set, but the latter held leads of 4—2, 5—3, 5—4 in the last set.

Singles—Second Round.

Doubles—First Round.

Mrs. Miller and Elinor Pinckel (Washington) defeated Mrs. Robert Stinson and Mrs. Jack Ewing, 6—1, 6—1.

Mrs. J. F. Devlin and Grace Parker defeated Miss Decker and Margaret Graham (Washington), 6—1, 6—3.

Boston Bats DeShong Off Moundin 7th

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Boston, June 30.—Jim Bagby, the pitching son of a pitching father, made it unanimous today for the Boston Red Sox in the two-game series with the Nats. He threw a six-hit ball game at the Washington club.

The score wasn't even close—11 to 1. The tall young right-hander, up from Rocky Mount, N. C., acted like a chip off the old block, for his daddy was a famed nemesis of the Nats back in the days when he was winning 30 games per season for the Cleveland Indians.

He would have smeared the Nats with a shut-out were it not for Sammy West, who collected three of the Nats' half-dozen hits. West drove over Washington's only run of the game with his third single, in the seventh inning.

DeShong Blows Up.

There was another reason for the Nats' defeat aside from Bagby. He answers to the names of James Brooklyn DeShong. For four innings, DeShong was dueling the Boston rookie in a tight 1-to-0 battle and then—wham! The base hits started popping.

The Red Sox sprayed the premises with 16 hits, all told. Fourteen of these they slammed out against DeShong during the six innings Bucky Harris permitted the fancy-dressing right-hander to stay in there. They assaulted DeShong for four runs in the fifth and five in the sixth.

The Red Sox hit no home runs today—but they came close. They hit four triples against DeShong. Each of the four top men in the batting order—Cramer, Vosmik, Foxx and Cronin—authored a three-bagger. And Foxx topped off his day's work with a double against Joe Krakauskas.

The Nats turned in several false alarms during the ball game. There was the first inning, for example, when West's single and a pair of walks filled the bases with one out. But Zeke Bonura popped up and Cecil Travis grounded out.

And there was the second inning when West and Lewis singled in succession with one out, only to see their chances to score fade when West was thrown out by ten feet attempting to take third on Lewis' blow. Al Simmons had a chance to restore the Nats to the ball game in the seventh when he came to bat with two out and the bases full, and he made a valiant attempt, but Roger Cramer skipped back against the center field wall to haul down his terrific line drive.

Bagby today achieved what no other pitcher on the Nats' 15-game road trip could accomplish. He stopped George Case. For the first time in 15 games, Case went hitless. He walked once in five times at bat.

Got Run in Second.

The Red Sox wrested a run out of DeShong in the second inning when Joe Cronin tripled into right-field. Higgins' single to the same sector scored him. DeShong averted further trouble when Chapman sent a double-play line drive to Travis.

It was a cheap infield hit by Chapman that opened the big fifth inning into which the Sox packed six hits and four runs. But there was nothing cheap about the hits that followed—Doerr's single to left, Desautels' single to right, Cramer's three-bagger over first base, and centerfield singles by Vosmik and Foxx.

Joe Krakauskas took charge after that and the one run he allowed didn't make much difference.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Boston, June 30.—If this were an election year, the one man who could carry the State for either party would be Mr. James Emory Foxx. Because, up here in Boston, Mr. Foxx is no less than Presidential timber. Boston folks are mildly daffy about the muscular fellow from Sudlersville, Md.

POVICH.

Up here, he's a prime topic of conversation these days. His batting exploits with the Red Sox have set the town slightly on its ear. It's not "who won?" but "how many did Foxx drive in?" that Boston fans are primarily interested in. Long ago they resigned themselves to the apparent fact that the Red Sox or the Bees would not cut a pennant figure this season.

* * * *

As Foxx goes, so go the Red Sox is the oft-repeated line of Boston baseball scriveners, but that is hardly a truism. Because Foxx at this writing is the hottest thing in the league with a bat in its hands and the Red Sox are still running a poor third to the Indians and Yankees.

But it is a sensational year that Foxx is having at bat. For the first time since he paid over $100,000 to Connie Mack for the contract of the sinewy first baseman, Tom Yawkey is realizing on his investment. The dynamite that has been dormant in Foxx's bat for a couple of seasons is beginning to explode all over the league. Again he is the terror of all pitchers.

At this writing, Foxx has pumped 22 home runs over Fenway Park's leftfield wall and various other fences in the league. But, more important, he has driven 83 runs across the plate. In both respects—homers and runs batted in—he is leading the league. And his .345 average leads all the Red Sox at bat.

Boston folks are beginning to visualize a runs-batted in record for Foxx. And at his current pace, the record will belong to him at the end of the season. Lou Gehrig holds the American League mark with 179 runs driven in a season and Hack Wilson possesses the record for both leagues—190. But if there is no let-down by Foxx in the remaining months of the season, his bat will have produced in excess of 200 runs.

* * * *

That's what they pay off on—runs driven in. Jimmy Dykes may be setting something of a style for American League managers. He has warned his pitchers that anyone of 'em who pitches Foxx a good ball with men on bases will be fined. They have orders from Dykes to make him swing at bad balls or walk him.

Boston newspaper men ascribe Foxx's sudden comeback at bat—he hit less than .300 last season—to an improvement in a sinus condition that handicapped him last year. Boston papers carry reports of Foxx's sinuses daily—like the stock markets and the weather reports. If Foxx, perchance, fails to get a hit, then his sinuses are bothering him. If he collects a couple of hits his sinuses are all right that particular day.

* * * *

There is nothing ordinary about Foxx's sinuses, the Boston newspapers would have you know. To really understand the terrific battle that Foxx is making against his ailment one must realize that—we quote from an afternoon journal—"Foxx's sinuses are the worst in either big league."

There isn't much doubt that the big fellow is troubled by the ailment that hastened the end of many a big league star's career. He cheerfully admitted in St. Louis the other day that when the Browns' pitchers walk him six consecutive times to set a new major league record for walks issued to one man in a single game, he was getting a lucky break.

* * * *

"It was all right with me," said Foxx. "I couldn't see a thing that day. If they had been pitching watermelons up there, I wouldn't have been able to hit 'em."

Foxx's amazing comeback is traced to a discovery he made in spring training camp last March. Pitchers were throwing fast balls right by him—the kind he used to knock out of the lot—and he was worried. He wasn't getting his bat around fast enough and he knew it. He began to wonder about those bats the factory had sent him.

He hesitated to order lighter bats. On the theory that his 40-ounce bats had been too heavy, he had put in a supply of 36-ouncers. But he was still not getting his hits. Troubled, he awoke from his sleep one morning, made his way to the clubhouse and put his bats on the scales.

They weighed 39 ounces. He broke them all over the clubhouse steps, wired the factory for 36-ounce bats, no heavier, and his .345 batting average, he thinks, is the direct result.

Work of the Nats.

Helen Wills Moody and Helen Jacobs Meet in Wimbledon Singles Finals

By Scotty Reston,

Associated Press Sports Writer

Wimbledon, England, June 30.—Helen Wills Moody and Helen Jacobs, those inevitable and incomparable opponents, emerged triumphant from two terrifying semifinal round matches on Wimbledon's center court today.

On Saturday they clash for the All-England Championship, picking up their rivalry where they left off in the 1935 finals when Mrs. Moody spotted Helen the Second a 5-to-2 lead in the third set and then beat her, to win her seventh Wimbledon crown.

Mrs. Moody, her feet blistered, her strength gone, eliminated tall, angular Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, of Germany and Denmark, 12—10, 6—4, after a battle that lasted 1 hour and 55 minutes.

Miss Jacobs—the girl they didn't seed, the girl who fainted in the clubhouse just before her second-round match—beat the cofavorite, Alice Marble, of San Francisco, 6—4, 6—4.

Thus America can count almost certainly upon winning both of Wimbledon's singles titles. The Women's Championship now is in the bag. And there were few tonight who conceded Henry Wilfred (Bunny) Austin, of England, any chance against Don Budge in the men's final tomorrow.

But all the drama of this Wimbledon tournament centers on the women's division and the heroic comebacks of America's two Helens.

Nine times since 1924 Mrs. Moody has come to this old ivy-fringed center court. Every time she has reached the final. And now, trying for her eighth title—a record if she makes it—she finds herself opposed once more by her Berkeley, Calif., rival.

Miss Jacobs seems to have lived most of her life in the shadow of "Queen Helen." The only time she really managed to beat her, in the 1933 American championship finals, Helen the First was injured. The only time she seemed certain of beating her—when she got to match point in the ninth game of the 1935 finals—Mrs. Moody produced that same competitive spark which brought her through again today.

Now then, they meet again and Miss Jacobs, admittedly a better player today than she was in 1935 while Mrs. Moody has slowed up, even now is not confident.

"All I hope is I play well," she said tonight. "I saw Mrs. Moody play today, and she certainly played well."

Mrs. Moody, on the other hand, takes these battles serenely. When she came off the court today Mrs. George W. Wightman, captain of the American Wightman Cup team, met her at the door.

"Why did you keep your sweater on all the time?" she asked.

"To be honest, I didn't even know I had it on," Helen answered.

It was this sort of concentration that brought her back from what looked like certain defeat by Mme. Sperling, the German girl, who is a Dane by marriage.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 30.
Dear Al:

Harry Hoffman has purchased the contract of Apprentice Jockey Beverly Hacker, who carried off the riding honors at the long 36-day session here by riding 37 winners. Hoffman obtained the services of Hacker through a deal with S. B. Webb, the details of which were not announced. The Benningites began the four-day meeting here with a winner when Webb Foot stepped home. It is peculiar how many people I can meet after my selections have a bad day. This morning I went to the market and ordered a pound of hamburger. The butcher dunked the scoop into the meat, put it on the scales and it was an exact pound. "You fellows really can guess weight, all right," I remarked. "Yes, we guess right, once in a while," returned the butcher, and with a scowl as he wrapped up the meat he muttered. "Just like you." I departed hurriedly. The second running of the Milton O. Rouss Memorial Handicap will top the Saturday program here. Rouss paved the way for the passing of the present West Virginia pari-mutuel law. Queen Elizabeth and Hard Chase have been shipped back to Delaware Park. I see by the papers that there was some to do about the 66,000 crowd at Suffolk Downs betting close to $700,000. On a Preakness Day at Pimlico, I saw 30,000 wager a million dollars. Jockey H. Lauch has returned from Wheeling and gets in the saddle tomorrow. No daily double tickets were sold on the combination of Packaway and Allen Caid.

BILL.

First race—Harold, Jr., was a well meant good thing last out and failed to get away from the post in time. With an alert start, this one may click. Jan Star has closed with excellent speed in recent races and should be dangerous. Reigh Tetrarch can better his most recent start.

Second race—Keswick Hill seems well placed. Took two purses at the other meeting and faces his own kind. Anya has plenty of speed and is in light. Leah Fern is a possible surprise.

Third race—Kenner appears to have an edge on this field. Improved during the last few weeks and I'm going to string along. Custer should have won that last and with a better ride probably will give the top one a stiff battle. Gold Streak and Running Water to fight it out for the show.

Fourth race—Shaggy Ann likes the route and was never in better form. She may take a lead on these and take walk. Voodoism closed like the wind recently and could be a sleeper here. Gee Sharp should be in the thick of contention. Veritas and Canteret could take it but they are very doubtful starters.

Fifth race—Sea Finn defeated this kind over this same course and appears ready to collect another set of brackets. Best Policy has plenty of early foot and could take it all. Justa Giro to take care of the show award.

Sixth race—Brooke Herod scored over similar company and at about the same distance last out. Needs only the right ride. Eblis, if sent back will be in the thick of contention. Far North, in with feather-weight, could surprise.

Seventh race—Spotless drops back in his class and may pick up a purse for his new owner in this field. Passing Sun and Wibm for the place and show.

Eighth race—Mamuck, with Machado to do the riding, will be hard to whip if sent postward with serious intentions. Bistrita can better that last. Dayletter for the show end.

Ninth race (substitute)—Little Percy, first on the also eligible list, looks like a lock if in action. Justa Pilgrim and Seaboy appear to be money possibilities.

Best bet— Sea Finn.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 30.—Up here in the mountains where steeds from either side of the Blue Ridge clashed for bags of gold in the colonial days, the Charles Town Horse Show Association, one of the oldest bodies of its kind in this country opened its four-day meeting today.

With a crowd of 5,000 watching, H. Howard's Eblis, dubbed a hard luck horse when he failed to win at the long 36-day session here, led virtually all the way to win the W. W. Johnson purse, outstanding race on the program.

Jockey Mannie Berg, almost knocked off in Eblis' previous race, kept the 6-year-old gelding out of trouble today. He hustled him up to the outside, got him to the front and "went on about his business" as the horsemen say. The Hutchinson Horst entry of Aella and Sylvia G. was installed the favorite and accounted for second and third money with Sylvia G. leading her stablemate home.

Eblis paid a $6.40 mutuel and turned in time of 1:26 1-5 for the seven furlong course. The track was fast and conditions were ideal.

Sammy Palumbo rode his third winner of the program here today in a thrilling last race which saw Machilla, a $7.40 favorite, score by a scant nose over Flying Carpet. Huppy was third in the field of eight.

Black Senators to Play Eagles and Stars Here

The Washington Black Senators will conclude their first-half series in the Negro National League this week-end when they meet the Newark Eagles Saturday and the Philadelphia Stars on Sunday in a double-header at Griffith Stadium.

The Senators have just signed five new players to bolster the team and may prove to be the dark horse of the second-half schedule.

Bing Long, third baseman and three times selected for the East-West classic, and James Ford, second baseman, of the Chicago American Giants, were purchased by the Senators Sunday at the New York schedule meeting. Slim Johnson and Bud Hayslet, pitchers, were purchased from the Elite Giants and Buffalo teams of the Negro National League. Josh Hoskins, hard-hitting outfielder, helps the Senators to round out the fastest and hardest-hitting outfield in Negro baseball.

DAISY PETAL	(Benham)	112	8	8	8	8	8	Pulled up	18.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WEB FOOT, $7.20, $4.00, $3.80; ANN GROUCHER, $15.20, $8.00; ENGLE'S LAD, $6.20.

WEB FOOT, shaking off ANN GROUCHER, took command with good energy, drew out, but had to be strongly ridden in final 20 yards to stave off ANN GROUCHER. The latter took slight lead, was outrun and then came with good speed when placed to drive. ENGLE'S LAD could not threaten seriously.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:12. Off 3:12½. Winner, W. W. Gift's br. g. (6), by All Away—Myrtle Gale. Trained by J. E. Crider. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:51 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PACKAWAY, $7.00, $3.20, $2.80; ISLE O' JOY, $2.80, $2.40; RADIAL, $4.00.

PACKAWAY, in thick of contention from start, came to outside for racing room, was steadied to stretch and under intermittent punishment, was up in concluding strides. ISLE O' JOY went to front in opening furlong, saved ground and held on gamely under pressure. RADIAL raced forwardly throughout and finished between leaders.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:43. Off 3:48. Winner, E. H. Titmus, Jr.'s, ch. g. (12), by Troupe La Mort—Textile Queen. Trained by S. Fiammia. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:16.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAND BY, $12.20, $7.40, $5.60; TOPSIE H., $7.20, $3.80; NAY NAY, $2.80.

STAND BY, hustled to front going to turn, was raised while headed by NAY NAY on backstretch, responded to drive to regain command and drew out. TOPSIE H., forwardly placed from beginning, came to inside for final drive and closed full of run. NAY NAY raced on outside of STAND BY after opening furlong, was rushed along and weakened.

FOURTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:16. Off 4:18. Winner, T. Callahan's b. g. (5), by Epinard—Damoris. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:51.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DEPINARD, $3.00, $2.60, $2.40; INDIANA, $4.60, $3.00; RED NOSE, $2.40.

DEPINARD, off alertly, shook off early bid of MISS TOUCAN, drew out and held INDIANA safe in closing stages. INDIANA, forced to race on outside and carried wide throughout entering stretch, closed with good courage. RED NOSE went evenly throughout.

FIFTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:45. Off 4:50. Winner, W. Kendrick's br. f. (3), by Tarpaulin—Valley of the Moon. Trained by A. L. Leith. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:50.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WASHOE VALLEY, $3.80, $3.40, $2.60; ROYAL VEIL, $5.20, $3.00; BUCKLEY'S PRIDE, $3.40.

WASHOE VALLEY, fractious at post and started out of hand, was away on top, drew out gradually and was much the best. ROYAL VEIL was hard ridden throughout and showed a good effort. BUCKLEY'S PRIDE, off well, was taken back sharply and gained steadily thereafter to close full of run.

SIXTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $500. For 2-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:14. Off 5:14. Winner, H. Howard's b. g. †Hutchins and Horse entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EBLIS, $6.40, $3.60, $3.40; SYLVIA G. (entry), $2.60, $2.80; AELLA (entry), $2.80.

EBLIS, sent up on outside under hustling tactics to get to front, opened good lead while rated and won easily after saving ground. SYLVIA G. saved ground while racing forwardly and was not put to drive until too late. AELLA was rushed for furlong and taken under steadying restraint when outrun by EBLIS and came willingly when put to drive.

SEVENTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:42. Winner, R. C. Waple's br. f. (4), by Calid—Grand Peggy. Trained by M. H. Everhart. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:27 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PEGADETTE, $9.60, $4.60, $4.20; HEART PLAY, $3.80, $3.40; GAGNE, $4.80.

PEGADETTE went to front at once, saved ground while setting pace and under steadying restraint, had to be placed to pressure to hold HEART PLAY safe. The latter, forced to race in close quarters, came gamely when clear in final sixteenth. GAGNE had good speed to stretch and went to front. TIMEPIECE was pulled up repeatedly while in trouble against rail and was listlessly handled at end.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 6:10. Off 6:11. Winner, T. Callahan's ch. g. (8), by Torchilla—May Stell. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:55.

ACKERMAN.

Protection of striped bass during the spawning season from March 1 to May 31, while allowing a winter season for the taking of the fish by commercial fishermen in nets, is provided in a new law enacted by the 1938 Legislature in New Jersey.

It also prohibits the sale and possession of stripes less than 18 inches long, which is the result of a compromise in a lengthy controversy between commercial fishermen and the sports fishermen.

Commercial men intending to net rockfish within 3 nautical miles of the beach must apply to the fish commission for a license, which will be issued at their discretion, for the taking of these fish between November 1 and February 28. The penalties for the nonobservance of the regulations are in every way adequate.

North Carolina is working for a law to protect this fine sport fish also, for in no State along the upper Atlantic since the settling of the colonies has there been any thought given to their continued existence. Not until in many section where they had been numerous beyond telling they had actually disappeared, did sportsmen and commercial interests get together to formulate plans for their rehabilitation.

* * * *

Connecticut and Rhode Island were foremost in these plans. Dr. Daniel Merriman, of Yale, made a study in conjunction with the fish commissions of most of the States, and it is on his findings that laws are being formulated for enaction.

The most important of these was that the rockfish, far more longlived than most fish, did not spawn until they were at least 5 years old and 20 inches long. This is going to have much to do with new established minimum size limits.

In Maine, striped bass are running in large numbers in the Sheepscot River, and are being taken by a variety of methods. Prominent citizens, interested in sport fishing, contend that seine and weir fishing will soon exhaust the supply. And they are right, but, unlike other sections (our own Chesapeake Bay), they are going to do something about it.

* * * *

Like the citizens of Washington County, in Maine, who asked the fish commissioner for a hearing, with the result that the Pleasant River was closed to all fishing for sea salmon except with hook and line.

A concerted movement is on foot to develop an extensive salt water sport fishery along the 2,500 miles of Maine coast. Town after town is recognizing the possibilities of this activity as a recreational asset and seeking any ways and all means of making the fishing more attractive to out-of-state sportsmen.

The Dennys River is closed to any fishing, except salmon with hook and line, the Kennebunk, the Mousam have been closed, and the Sheepscot shortly will be, to all except bass fishing with hook and line.

* * *

New Jersey is in no way slow about recognizing the value of the sportsmen's dollars, which they estimated last year, poured into their coffers to the tune of over $5,000,000, from more than 1,000,000 fishermen coming to their little more than 100 miles of coast line to enjoy their fun.

Yet the State of Maryland, with resources beyond most Eastern coastal States, does little or nothing to save them, and sell the surplus to sportsmen for literally 100 times the amount they are producing now under haphazard regulation.

* * *

Close to a million pounds of rockfish are taken by a relatively few Maryland commercial fishermen every year. The few thousands of dollars they return now is not an adequate return; neither is it equitable. Protect these fish until they have spawned at least once, outlaw nets, and prohibit their sale during the spawning season — then thousands of Marylanders, instead of a few could make, from them, a good living.

The 11-inch minimum means nothing as far as conservation is concerned, and the 15-pound maximum limit holds the sport fisherman to the plane of the commercial men, who have abused their privileges for the past hundred years, and in addition makes them, also like many of the commercial men, evaders of the law.

When—will Maryland sportsmen wake up?

Rockfishing in the Kent Island area of the Eastern Shore is the best bet for the week-end. Capt. Bob Lee at Shadyside has consistently been bringing in these fish for the past several weeks. Raising and striking best in the evening, on yellow Florida lures, they run occasionally to as much as eight and nine pounds.

During the past week, whenever the small shore shrimp have been obtainable, his boats have been chumming the stripers. If you have never tried this kind of fishing, do so by all means, for with no weight beyond a split shot or two, even the small fish will "go to town."

Regardless of the fact that reports have been circulated all through this month of catches at Oregon Inlet, our first report in five weeks came in yesterday—from Capt. Sam Tillett, who has always been reliable beyond any question. He says: "Fishing has been very poor—the summer run of blues has started, with fish running up to 3 pounds. The channel bass should start running soon." We add to that: July is one of the best months at this point for the big spot-tails. They run in size from 20 to 35 pounds.

Catches of flues down the lower Virginia shore are 25 to 100 daily per boat, but small. The cabio are still hitting, but they too, are small. It is seldom the boats fail to bring in at least one.

Our tide tables this year give but 4 points, but key points from which almost any place on the bay or Potomac can be figured within a reasonable time. One thing that must be taken into consideration—the time of change is for a point close to shore, which is always from 30 minutes to 2 hours earlier than in mid-channel.

Their compiling requires a great deal of work on the part of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey and is a courtesy extended to local anglers—not a part of the daily routine, as many seem to believe.

North Carolina, through Hugo and John Rutherford, of Allemuchy, N. J., on their way North from several months fishing at Bimini on their sportfisherman Mako II, puts in a bid as a big game-fishing section, because of the hooking and bringing to boat of two blue marlin estimated to weigh in excess of 400 and 500 pounds.

Through no fault of Hugo, who has been selected as the captain of the American Tuna Team by New York fishing scribes, neither fish was boated. The first, because the hook pulled out just as the fish was to be gaffed, and the second, when the leader was fouled on the propeller in a boat-side flurry.

Maryland's Bass Season to Open Today

Fishermen Test Skill On 'Fighter'

Season Ends November 30 Except Deep Creek Lake Region.

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 30.—Maryland anglers who like to test their skill against a game, fighting fish, will get their first chance of the year tomorrow, when the State's black bass season opens officially.

The small-mouth bass, regarded by many sportsmen as a prime test of a fisherman's ability, will be fair catch for the State's Izaak Waltons until next November 30, except in Deep Creek Lake, Garrett County, where bass may not be taken after October 31.

Particular spots favored by bass fishermen in the past include the Monocacy River and the upper Potomac. They may be caught only in nontidal waters.

At sundown today the trout season officially ended, except in Deep Creek Lake and the Youghiogheny River below Swallow Falls, also in Garrett County. There, trout may be taken until well into the fall, with the latter fishing ground open until November 30.

Except in Deep Creek Lake, bass must measure 10 inches long to be kept, under conservation commission laws. In the lake, the bass may measure 9 inches.

British Riders Ready.

New York, June 30 (AP).—Great Britain, in accepting the United States Polo Association's proposal to play the next series for the International Cup at Meadow Brook, Long Island, in June, 1939, instead of the customary September dates, already has launched its challenge preparations.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald.

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

Man of the Month is:
Al Simmons.

In one of the most amazing batting spurges of recent years, Al Simmons wins the Post-Wheaties Man of the Month honors for June by a two-point margin over Third Baseman Buddy Lewis.

SIMMONS

Simmons' triumph in the race for Man of the Month distinction is downright remarkable inasmuch as he has been in the Washington line-up regularly only since June 17.

He spotted his rivals a tremendous early lead for the honors and then, with a sensational batting spree on the Nats' road trip, overhauled all of them. The daily booming of the Simmons bat, which produced six home runs and 24 runs driven in during the 15-game trip, earned him points in great clusters.

During his batting spree, Simmons raised his average from .280 to .310.

Simmons had a three-point advantage over Buddy Lewis entering yesterday's game at Boston. He failed to add any points when Roger Cramer galloped against the centerfield fence to haul down his terrific line drive with the bases full in the seventh inning. Lewis, making one of the Nats' six hits, picked up one point.

Sammy West bolstered his total by winning five points in yesterday's game at Boston where he made three of the Nats' six hits. Four points were awarded to Buddy Myer because he made two of the Nats' hits—one a double—and starred in the field. Buddy Lewis' one hit netted him one point.

Sports Postscripts

This may be rushing the season but it's interesting to note that professional football, once the object of collegiate scorn, will be welcomed to the campuses of no less than seven colleges when the National League elevens start practice next month . . . And if Georgetown University's field could have been obtained the Washington Redskins would have boosted that number to eight . . . The Hoya field was unavailable because the series of retreats which will be conducted at the school this summer precludes the noises that abound when gridders get together . . . Bernie Masterson, star quarterback for the Chicago Bears, Western Division champions last year, will be married July 4 to Pauline Larkin of Chicago . . . He's a restaurant proprietor in the Windy City . . . Fifteen freshmen will be included on the National League all-star squad, which will attempt to snap the junior circuit's streak next Wednesday in Cincinnati . . . Earl "Dutch" Clark, recognized generally as the greatest star in professional football and universally as one of the best-conditioned athletes in the world, recommends sun-bathing but not swimming to his Detroit Lions . . . Dancing also is helpful to the gridder, says Clark, but the hours are not . . .

Dan Howley, former Cincinnati manager, has been relieved of his position as pilot of the Toronto Maple Leafs but will serve with the club in the capacity of scout and general adviser . . . His successor is First Baseman Jack Burns, formerly a member of the St. Louis Browns . . . Six major league clubs are after Hank Borowy, the Fordham pitcher who beat Georgetown last spring . . . Cleveland players say Joe Humphries, Tribe rookie, and not Bob Feller has the fastest ball in the majors . . . One of the first requests made Babe Ruth by Manager Bolly Grimes of the Dodgers was that he show First Baseman Buddy Hassett how to get more power into his batting swing . . .

T. J. D. Fisher Gets A Hole-in-One!

T. J. D. Fisher waited 68 years to make a hole-in-one and yesterday performed the feat over his home course—Chevy Chase—in the company of Admiral C. E. Courtney and Admiral H. I. Cone.

The perfect shot came on the fourth hole for the father of C. Ashmead Fuller, six-time club champion. The ball hit on the green, bounced once and trickled in the cup.

Jack Knott Allows Only 4 Hits to End Series.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 30.—Jack Knott, who was just another pitcher with the St. Louis Browns, turned in a masterful four-hitter today against his former mates, to give the Chicago White Sox an 11-to-1 victory and a sweep of the four-game series.

Knott gave up only one hit until the eighth inning, when singles by Red Kress and Glenn McQuillen and Don Heffner's double produced the lone Brownie run.

Yanks Down Macks, 7-1; Homers Aid

Ruffing Allows 4 Hits; DiMaggio and Henrich Hit for Circuit.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 30 (AP).—Behind the four-hit pitching of big Red Ruffing, the Yankees' homer hitters trampled the Philadelphia Athletics, 7 to 1, today, to stretch their winning streak to five straight.

Joe DiMaggio's eleventh homer, with two aboard in the first inning, and Tommy Henrich's eighth, with one on base in the fifth, accounted for five of the Yankee runs.

Ruffing, chalking up his tenth win against three defeats for the season, fanned five and walked only one batter. He retired the first 12 men to face him and, except for Lou Finney's pinch-homer in the sixth, allowed only one base runner to get as far as second.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 30.—The New York Giants fired their heaviest batting barrage of the season today, collected 19 hits good for 29 bases, walloped the Phillies 14 to 1 and boosted their National League lead to four full games.

Their scoring splurge was featured by a nine-hit nine-run rally in the third inning which drove both Claude Passeau and Lefty Al Smith to the showers. After that it was a cinch for Clyde Castleman to breeze in with his third win of the year, a seven-hit performance.

Hank Leiber, belting his seventh homer of the year, along with a pair of doubles and a single, and Sambo Leslie, with two doubles and three singles, paced the Ginats' attack. Every batter in the lineup except Second Baseman Alex Kampouris and Castleman hit safely at least once.

Leiber's homer with two on and one double came in the third inning splurge. Leslie and Mel Ott also connected for two hits each in this big inning.

4 Edgemoor Club Netters In Semifinal

By Jack Munhall.

Edgemoor Club was assured of the singles title of the District of Columbia tennis championships yesterday when four of its entries advanced into the semi-final round at Columbia Country Club before one of the largest galleries in recent years.

The all-Edgemoor Club final was made certain by Tony Latona's smashing upset victory over "Baron" Bill Breese, following in the wake of the expected victories of Defending Champion Barney Welsh, Dooley Mitchell and Hugh Lynch.

Breese, the big colorful fellow with the baggy khaki shorts and Harvard accent, had been established a heavy favorite to turn back the playgrounds instructor and then go on to challenge Welsh's right to his fifth straight District championship.

His own lack of practice, however, plus the steady, well-rounded game exhibited by Latona, combined to produce one of the major upsets of the tournament. The scores were 8—6, 6—4.

The same deadly combine of poor condition and surprisingly strong opposition all but caused the elimination of Mitchell, the No. 2 player. Paunchy around the middle and plainly out of condition, the popular Columbus accountancy professor was extended to the limit in repelling Lieut. James Farrin in three sets, 10—8, 1—6, 6—1.

Welsh, playing with his customary power and smoothness, had little trouble with Ray Stocklinski, only unseeded player in the quarter-finals, and Lynch likewise did not encounter difficulty in subduing Lieut. Stan Robinson.

Welsh, who has not lost a match to a District player in five years, was long with his forcing shots in the early part of his match, but once underway, simply overpowered the game public parks player. The scores were 6—0, 6—1.

In today's semifinal singles matches, Welsh will meet Latona at 4:30 p. m., and Latona will face Lynch a half hour later.

The doubles play also will reach the finals today if all scheduled matches are run off.

Lynch and young Davis Johnsen, who already are in the semifinals, will meet the winner of the Farrin-Howarth, Carr-Arnold third-round set-to in one feature at 6 p. m., while Welsh and Mitchell must capture two matches to gain the finals.

The defending champions collide with Lieut. Tom Sherburne and Bonham at 6 o'clock, and then, if successful, face Breese and Buddy Adair at 6:30.

Quarter-Finals.

Barney Welsh defeated Ray Stocklinocki, 6—0, 6—1; Dooley Mitchell defeated Lieut. James Farrin, U. S. N., 10—8, 1—6, 6—1; Tony Latona defeated Bill Breese, 8—6, 6—4; Hugh Lynch defeated Lieut. Stan Robinson, 6—2, 6—2.

Four Races Daily Head Sport Card

Show Will Run Tomorrow, Monday; Oldest in These Parts.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., June 30.—Grounds and show ring were pronounced in perfect condition today for the 35th annual Culpeper Horse Show tomorrow and Monday.

Saturday has been designated "Farmer's Day" and Monday "Homecoming Day."

An added event this year is the better hands class, which has been well filled. The winner will be eligible for the New York show and the cup donated by Lewis Strauss.

Classes will begin at 10 a. m. each day.

John S. Thornton, secretary of the show, predicted today the 35th annual showing would draw the largest entry list in its history.

Four races, three on the flat and one steeplechase, are scheduled for both Saturday and Monday.

The entry list includes Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Spring Hope, Two Leggins, The Bear and Missing Caddy. Other horses are entered by U. S. Randle, J. North Fletcher, E. L. Redmond, Mrs. D. N. Lee, Miss Julia Shearer, Miss Betty Couzens, Dr. L. M. Allen, Miss Margaret Cotter, Mrs. Cary Jackson, Mrs. Vernon G. Owens and Miss Willamena Kirby.

Both days of the show three flat races and a 2½-mile steeplechase will be run, with a number of the horses coming from Charles Town race track, together with all the local race horses.

Col. Tim McCoy's famous mount, War Chief, will be shown in a feature act by his cowboy rider, Dave Nimmo, which is expected to attract large crowds from the nearby counties.

The grounds have been put in tiptop shape, all buildings having been recently painted and fences whitewashed. Fourth of July decorations of flags and bunting will adorn the grandstand and judging stands. The management is delighted with the number of horses entered, as there is the greatest number in the history of the show, both in the race and show departments.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

An Interested Listener.

We seldom know how much we tell,
So guard your tongue and guard it well.
—Peter Rabbit.

Have you noticed how when people have nothing else to do they like to use their tongues? They like to talk, yes sir; they like to talk. And always there are those who like to listen. A talker always wants a listener. The better the listener the more the talker talks. The result is that often a lot more is said than was intended.

Peter Rabbit has little to do. He is a happy-go-lucky little fellow with no responsibilities. So he follows that wobbly little nose of his into all sorts of places where he really has no business to be at all and, as a result, gets into trouble or gets some one else into trouble. There are many people like Peter. They mean no harm, but sometimes they do a lot of harm.

Peter had made the mistake of thumping, as only he can thump, on the roof of the home of Queen Bumble of the Bee folk. He hadn't known that it was the home of Queen Bumble. He had supposed it to be the home of Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse. It had been once. He had supposed that it still was.

Now the roof of a bumble bee home is no place to thump, as Peter speedily found out. He left there stepping high and fast, and he didn't breathe easily until he was certain that he had left the last of those angry bees far behind. When at last he sat down to rest he was resolved that never again would he be found in that neighborhood.

In the dusk of early evening Peter happened to meet Jimmy Skunk. Peter and Jimmy, if not exactly friends are friendly. Jimmy knows that there is no more harmless person than Peter Rabbit, so there is nothing to fear from him, and Jimmy is friendly to any one whom he does not distrust. Peter knows that Jimmy minds his own business and that there is nothing to fear from him.

Jimmy was poking about looking for grubs and fat beetles. He had slept all day and was hungry. Jimmy doesn't like sunlight, so he sleeps through the day. Peter, on the other hand, is often abroad by day, especially if he has reason to think that no enemies are about and he is hungry.

"Do you happen to know where Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse are living?" Peter asked.

"No," replied Peter, and added: "That is why I asked you. I know where they used to live, but they moved and I don't know where they went. Their old house is occupied."

"Bees," replied Peter. "Queen Bumble and her family."

Jimmy lifted his head quickly and there was a gleam of interest in his usually dull eyes. "Did you say bees?" he inquired.

"I did," replied Peter. "Danny's old home is full of bees. And what "Do you happen to know where Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse are living?" Peter asked.

tempers! Why, all I did was to stamp on the roof and out they poured so mad that they would have stung me to death if I hadn't taken to my heels. Take my advice, Jimmy Skunk, and keep away from the home of Bees."

"Where did you say this happened?" Jimmy asked in a casual tone.

"I don't," replied Jimmy. "Where is it? I don't want to disturb it accidentally. You know I can't run as you can."

Peter grinned. "You would need to if ever you should get those Bees after you," said he.

Jimmy nodded. "Tell me where that nest is so that I may keep away from it. You know I never hurry if I can help it," said he.

So Peter told him where the nest was and thought he was doing Jimmy a good turn, as, indeed, he was. But it wasn't the kind of a good deed that he thought it was. And to Queen Bumble and her family it wasn't a good deed at all. In fact, it was quite the reverse. And it

Opening of the new Rainbow Room tonight promises color, thrillage, excitement. Pre-view of the newly shined and illuminated Rainbow shows an astonishing feat of lighting decoration—all the colors of the iris meet your eye at every turn, but the effect is astonishingly soft, cloudlike. It has been achieved by using auroral lights on the ceiling and bandstand, their reflections appearing on mirrored pillars and walls. While the room is a mass of softly colored light, it holds to the subdued glow of an early sunrise (if you've ever seen one).

Dancing to Meyer Davis music begins this evening at 9:30 good evening, will continue until 2 good morning.

Vacation headquarters for students of George Washington University seems to be the Anchor Room. The lads and girls naturally drop in to see their pal, Victor Sampson, G. W. U. footballer, Anchor's assistant manager for the summer. There was a party of around 40 of them the other evening, with undergrad Francis Barnard contributing some excellent barytoning to the soiree.

It's been "Shirley Temple week" at the Mayflower, with Shirley requesting her favorite numbers from Sidney and the Mayflower Lounge also playing all the hit tunes from the tiny lady's pictures. Shirley loves all Hawaiian music, but calls it "Honolulu music." Yesterday she asked Sidney to play "Sweet Leilani" and "Ti-Pi-Tin."

Never be too puzzled by all those different solo pianists on the Powhatan Roof. Four of Steve Le Sieur's boys can spank the ivories. They're drummer Bill Chisholm, saxophonist Donald Shook, bass player "Tiny" Meeker and regular pianist Bob Callahan.

It's a caution the way the sweet young things are swaying around to Johnny Slaughter's warm but sugary rhythms in Wardman's Metronome Room. The spot was packed practically to capacity early in the week and it's our bet that over the holiday period the overflow Metronomers will have to dance in the adjoining cocktail lounge.

Salome's dance should pop into your mind when you see one of the Gaylene Sisters' numbers on the Shoreham Terrace. Not that affair of the seven veils, but the dance of Salome as described by Flaubert.

(Memo: One of the Gaylene Sisters has been married recently. Max Lowe, Shoreham's amusement manager, says that he could tell which one was the bride as soon as he saw them dance. See if you're so discerning.)

Larry Kendrick, Hay-Adams organist, is adding an attachment to his electric organ which, he vows, will give it pipe organ effect. This installation will be the fourth of its kind in the country, the others being in radio stations in Chicago, Hollywood and Buffalo.

Mayfair's charming fortune teller, Countess Bournet, tells of the persons who asked why picking the ponies through numerology didn't work out. "La! la!" says the Countess sadly, "I had to tell them that to pick the winning horse through numerology, you must know both the birthday of the horse and the birthday of the jockey." We'll bet that stopped them.

That rusty adage about the best goods coming in tiny packets is proven by the remarkable Three Rochelles at Lotus this week. The boy of the trio looks smaller than the girls, but he tosses the pair of them around, and at once, with the greatest of ease.

Johnny Shaw's two-day absence from Madrillon was caused by his attending the wedding of a relative in Pittsburgh. He's promised not to do it again. But you know—these marrying Shaws! Johnny says that life for him seems to be just one wedding present after another.

Here they come—there they go! That's the way it is at Glen Echo. Tonight and tomorrow give you your last chances to enjoy Larry Funk and his "band of 1,000 melodies" plus singer Helen O'Connell and nutsy bass player Buddy Hayes. But come the Glorious Fourth you'll find Howard Becker and his "Parade of Youth" (in swingtime) rousing the echos at Echo.

Over the holiday week-end is a great time to take the whole family out to dinner. They're making a specialty of children's as well as grown-ups' dinners out at Griffith Farms. Music by the Four Hawaiians. Shirley Temple says she "likes Honolulu music best" and maybe your little ones will, too.

Dick Reger's Hi-Hat yodeling.

"I Live the Life I Love," miked grandly by Ray Donahue out at the Show Boat.

"Ding, Dong, Daddy," the steamer-upper of Jack Torry's ork at Brinkley's.

Railroad Net 0.54 Per Cent For 5 Months

Operating Income Compares With 2.85 Per Cent in 1937 Period.

Class I railroads of the United States in the first five months of 1938 had a net railway operating income of $45,288,504, which was at the annual rate of return of 0.54 per cent on their property investment, according to reports just filed by the carriers with the bureau of railway economics of the Association of American Railroads and made public yesterday.

In the first five months of 1937 their net railway operating income was $240,111,987, or 2.85 per cent on their property investment, and in the first five months of 1930 their net railway operating income was $301,732,780, or 3.51 per cent on property investment.

Property investment is the value of road and equipment as shown by the books of the railways, including materials, supplies and cash. The net railway operating income is what is left after the payment of operating expenses, taxes and equipment rentals but before interest and other fixed charges are paid.

This compilation as to earnings for the first five months of 1937 is based on reports from 137 class I railroads representing a total of 234,830 miles.

Gross operating revenues for the first five months of 1938 totaled $1,354,268,701 compared with $1,735,221,961 for the same period in 1937, and $2,218,877,128 for the same period in 1930, a decrease of 22.0 per cent below 1937, and 39.0 per cent below 1930. Operating expenses for the first five months of 1938 amounted to $1,113,769,976 compared with $1,293,047,978 for the same period in 1937, and $1,717,945,937 for the same period in 1930. Operating expenses for the first five months of 1938 were 13.9 per cent less than in the same period of 1937 and 35.2 per cent below 1930.

Class I railroads in the first five months of 1938 paid $141,301,708 in taxes compared with $147,893,392 in the same period in 1937, and $146,785,356 in the same period in 1930. For the month of May alone the tax bill of the class I railroads amounted to $28,504,530, a decrease of $1,619,814, or 5.4 per cent below May, 1937.

Sixty-four class I railroads failed to earn expenses and taxes in the first five months of 1938, of which 23 were in the Eastern district, 10 in the Southern district and 31 in the Western district.

The Interstate Commerce Commission heard final arguments and took under advisement yesterday the application of Eastern railroads for permission to increase passenger coach fares. They want to raise the fares from 2 to 2.5 cents a mile.

Jacob Aronson, representing the Eastern carriers, and Douglas F. Smith, representing the railroad security owners, urged the commission to allow the railroads to make the increase. They argued that the question of a one-half cent increase should be treated as one within the "realm of managerial discretion."

Copper, Lead Again Advance

New York, June 30 (AP).—Phelps Dodge Corporation announced today an increase of ¼ of a cent a pound in the price of domestic copper, bringing it to 9¼ cents. The price had remained at the 9-cent level since May 19, at which time it was lowered from 10 cents.

Metal circles reported sharply increased sales after the close of the stock market yesterday, influenced to some extent by the belief the inventory situation, bothersome to domestic producers over a period of months, had greatly improved in recent weeks.

The ¼-cent rise brought the domestic price more in line with the foreign markets, which have been strong recently with heavy turnover reported from several centers. In London today electrolytic wire bar metal sold as high as 9.5 cents a pound c. i. f. European base ports. Scrap copper dealers boosted the price of intake again today ¼ cent a pound, following several boosts in this grade of metal within the past several weeks.

Leading producers boosted the price of lead ¼ cent a pound today to 4.75 cents, New York basis. This was the fourth consecutive advance for this metal in slightly more than a week, lifting quotations 18.7 per cent in this period. The year's high established January 11, was 4.9 cents a pound.

Idle Bank Funds Rise $120,000,000

By the Associated Press.

Idle money in the banks increased $120,000,000 to a total of $2,900,000,000 in the week ended June 29, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday.

This sum of excess reserves is the reservoir of credit which the board and other Federal and State banking agencies tried to tap by their agreement last week on liberalized credit and investment regulations. The past week's increase was due to Treasury spending, which placed more money in the hands of the public.

Wheat Drops 3 Cents After 1½ Cents Rise

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 30.—Wildly imitating unusual swings of securities, the Chicago wheat market late today plunged downward 3 cents a bushel from earlier gains of 1½ cents.

The late tumble of wheat value was in the face of an authoritative unofficial estimate that the United States total harvest this season would be 150,000,000 bushels less than the average of private forecasts a month ago. This estimate, together with unexpected firmness of Liverpool quotations and with transient upturns of securities, had only a temporary stimulating effect.

On bulge in wheat prices here, selling became much enlarged, previous buyers scrambling to realize profits. Accelerating the Chicago reaction was a sharp reversal at Winnipeg, where at one stage the market for the July delivery showed 4¾ cents jump.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were around the day's bottom figures, 1¼@1⅝ cents lower compared with yesterday's finish; July, 73⅝@75¾; September, 75@75⅛. Corn unchanged to ¼ down; July, 57@57⅛; September, 58½@58⅝. Oats unchanged to ⅛ off. Rye showing ⅜@⅝ drop. Provisions unchanged to an advance of 2 cents.

N. Y. Exchange Trading At 6-Month High

New York, June 30 (AP).—Transactions in the New York Stock Exchange during June totaled 24,364,130 shares, highest volume since December. The sharp increase over May sales of 14,004,244 was due largely to the spectacular activity in the market in the last ten days. June volume a year ago was 16,449,139 shares.

June bond sales of $144,464,300 face value, largest since March, compared with $121,156,000 last month and $178,898,000 in June, 1937.

New York, June 30.—Prices in the stock market chruned about furiously today, reaching another new high for the current move but then developing irregularity, closing off an average of 0.62 point. Featuring the day was the large volume during the first hour, when more than a million shares changed hands on the big board and the ticker was forced behind ten minutes, necessitating the flashing of prices of leading stocks on the ticker. After the big splurge of the first hour, however, trading quieted down and the day's volume of 2,581,350 shares was even less than the previous day. There were 992 isues dealt in, the largest number since October 21, 1937.

Representative brokers reported the selling coming from a wide variety of sources. Profit takers of course were cutting down their holdings, there was speculative selling by those who are convinced the list has moved ahead to rapidly and must have a technical reaction and there was considerable short selling. The suggestion was made by one leader in the Street that it might be advisable for the S. E. C. to relax its rules against short selling temporarily in order to keep the market from running away on the upside.

The probability, however, is that the commission would hesitate to take such action on the ground that it would place it in the position of expressing an opinion as to the correct level for the market. In addition, anyone who has wanted to go short in this market has had no difficulty effecting the sale; they had encountered more difficulty borrowing the necessary shares to make delivery.

Martin's Election.

News after the close of the selection of William McC. Martin for the new paid presidency of the stock exchange met with an enthusiastic reception in the financial district and in Washington. Although only 31 years old, Mr. Martin is known as a tireless worker and one who is well acquainted with the mechanism of exchange operation.

He has played a prominent role in the reorganization of the exchange and for this reason will be better qualified to carry on the tremendous job of perfecting the exchange's organization than an outsider. It is known that he intends to strengthen the institution's administrative personnel. The exchange is to be congratulated on not having gone into the field of politics and selected a president whose chief qualification would have been his Washington connections. It is a safe guess that a political president would have been no more satisfactory to the SEC than to Wall Street, as he would only have muddied the waters even more. There is no question that Mr. Martin and Mr. Douglas can and will co-operate to everyone's satisfaction.

In today's reaction all groups of stocks except the lower-grade rails were forced to close lower for the session. Individual issues were able to maintain plus signs, but virtually all were well below their best levels of the first hour. Among the leaders, Allied Chemical closed up 2 points and Chesapeake & Ohio a point, while there were fractional advances in Baltimore & Ohio, Canadian Pacific, D. & H., Illinois Central, Public Service of New Jersey and Republic Steel. Increased interest in the rails reflected the action of the Interstate Commerce Commission in taking under advisement the plea of Eastern roads for an increase in passenger fares. The carriers seek a rate of 2½ cents a mile against the present 2 cents, a plea which was refused last spring.

There was a flurry in the metals when copper and lead prices were increased, but members of this group were not able to retain their earlier gains, Anaconda, Nickel and Kennecott showing minor losses. Building shares, which were taken in hand by the bullish forces earlier in the week, reflected realizing sales, Johns Manville closing off 2½ points.

United States Steel, the day's most active stock, lost a half point and was off 2 from its best of the day. Bethlehem's loss was 1¼. Motors moved with the trend, with activity centered in Chrysler, General Motors and Yellow Truck.

Rail Bonds in Demand.

Listed bond trading resulted in some wide gains today, which gave the market a good appearance despite realizing sales here and there. Favored issues in the carrier group soared from 1 to 8 points, and convertibles of all kinds were in demand. Profit-taking occasioned relatively few declines and they were held to modest proportions. United States Treasury bonds and best-rated corporate issues held to former figures. Foreign dollar obligations were mostly improved. Turnover of $10,270,000 was about normal, but in view of the long period of dullness earlier this year the volume seems large.

Rail liens that nobody seemed to want up to ten days ago were the favorites, indicating that speculative operations are behind the rise. The great bulk of low-priced rails surged forward, and the character of the market was indicated additionally by the fact that liens of a comparable nature went up in some instances and down in others. Default rails were less in demand than interest-payers.

Convertibles forged ahead rapidly, apparently on the theory that any business rise would afford participation in the equities improvement, whereas interest still will be paid if the stock advance turns out to be a flash in the pan. Holding company bonds were in favor, and commodity issues of the more speculative variety also improved. Local tractions were better notwithstanding the tax sales affecting Manhattan Elevated.

United States Treasury and other money market obligations were steady on modest trading. Long-term Treasury issues varied within a few fractions of previous levels. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were similarly quiet. In the highest grade corporate list the changes were small and meaningless.

Latin-American default bonds were in quiet demand in the foreign section. German and other European default bonds held to former figures.

Annuity Rates 8 to 15 Per Cent Higher Today

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Numerous members of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association report increases in their companies' annuity rates effective today, according to word from headquarters of the association. Increases run generally from 8 to 15 per cent, depending on the type of annuity and the age at which purchased, and apply both to annuities purchased individually and group type. In recent years life insurance companies have made frequent upward revisions in annuity rates, particularly of the single premium type.

Where an annuity is purchased over a period of years, to mature at some future time, it is announced, the relatively small annual premium deposits do not complicate the company's investment problem to the extent that a large single premium does. The latter, paid today and often representing $25,000 or $50,000 or $100,000 in an individual case, has to be invested by the company under today's investment conditions to guarantee a certain yield to the purchaser tomorrow and for as long as he lives—which in some cases may mean for 30, 40, even 50 or 60 years into the future.

Guaranteed Income.

The purpose of a life annuity, it is explained, is to provide a guaranteed income which cannot be outlived. Certain types of annuities, to guard the purchaser's heirs against loss of principal through death before it has been paid back as income, guarantee the income for a number of "years certain and life thereafter;" others guarantee income to continue to the annuitant, or beneficiary, or estate, until the original purchase price has been refunded. Many policies, too, provide for settlement of insurance proceeds at leath, or of cash value upon surrender of the policy, in the form of an annuity-income.

Regardless of the type of life-income involved, according to headquarters of the local life underwriters association, annuity rates are not likely to show any decrease until there has been a substantial and significantly permanent increase in the companies' investment earnings. Or it might be expressed thus: For a given age and a given type of annuity, a single premium deposited in a new annuity before July 1 will produce a larger income for life than if purchased after July 1.

T. Hunton Leith, cashier of Security Savings & Commercial Bank, has been elected second vice president, in addition to the former position, according to an announcement made by Francis G. Addison, jr., president of the bank, following a meeting of its board of directors. The new vice president and cashier of the bank is one of the best known and most active of the younger bankers in Washington, and his advancement is considered well deserved by both senior and junior bankers.

Born in Loudoun County, Va., Mr. Leith became a resident of Washington in 1902. He attended the public schools and Emerson Institute and became associated with the Security Savings & Commercial Bank in 1914. During the World War he served overseas with the Sixtieth Artillery. He became assistant cashier of the bank in 1926, secretary in 1934, cashier in 1935 and was elected a member of the board of directors in 1937.

He is a graduate of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking and was chapter president in 1926-27, after serving on the board of directors and numerous committees. He was chairman of the convention committee when the local chapter was host to the American Institute of Banking in 1934 and has been a delegate to a number of the national conventions in other cities. He was a member of the executive commitee of the national organization in 1929-32 and has also served on a number of important committees of the District of Columbia Bankers' Association.

Controllers' Institute.

W. R. Little, of the Evening Star, was elected president of the District of Columbia Control, of the Controllers Institute of America, at its final meeting of the 1937-1938 season, held this week at the Carlton Hotel, preceding the monthly dinner of this group. Other officers elected for the coming year were Humphrey Lloyd, of Washington Properties, Inc., vice president, and J. C. Heberle, of Capital Transit Co., secretary-treasurer.

The board of directors appointed consists of the three new officers, also John Davies, of Woodward & Lothrop, retiring president of the group; Franklin H. Kenworthy, of Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., and Raymond G. Marx, of Riggs National Bank. Eldon P. King, Special Deputy Commissioner of Internal Revenue, addressed the group and participated in the round-table talk, subject of which was "Aspects of the 1938 Revenue Act."

At a meeting of the board of directors of National Bank of Washington, held this week the regular semiannual dividend of $3 a share was declared, payable on July 2, 1938, to shareholders of record June 29, 1938; transfer books to be closed from June 29 to July, 5, 1938.

Canadian Holidays.

Toronto, June 30 (AP).—Canadian security and commodity markets will be closed tomorrow, July 1, until Monday morning. Observing Dominion Day, which falls on Friday, the holiday will be extended through the week-end by eliminating the short Saturday session.

Two Big Utilities File Bond Issues

New York Steam Corporation filed with the Securities Commission yesterday a registration statement covering $32,000,000 of first-mortgage 3½ per cent bonds, due July 1, 1963. Consolidated Edison Co. of New York, Inc., also filed a statement as guarantor of the principal and interest of the bonds being registered by New York Steam Corporation. The latter concern is an affiliate of Consolidated Edison.

Public Service Electric & Gas Co., of Newark, N. J., filed a registration statement yesterday covering $10,000,000 first and refunding mortgage 3¼ per cent bonds, series due July 1, 1968. The net proceeds will be added to the company's cash funds which are to be used, among other things, for expenditures in the ordinary course of business for property additions and improvements.

This center hall, true Colonial home, containing 8 rooms and 3 baths, has just been reduced $2,000 in price because it must be sold immediately. It is situated on a lot covered with flowering shrubs and fruit trees. The house needs some repairs, but at the price offered is the best value we have seen in this section in years.

Chevy Chase View, Md.
Recent Army orders require sale of this desirable suburban home. Appealing to people of taste, it has all the requisites for delightful entertaining. It is built of brick and frame on a nicely landscaped lot, 75x220 feet. The floor plan gives an idea of its unusualness—a living room 23x12, large dining room and kitchen, a living porch 19x9, screened and shaded. Second floor has two spacious bedrooms, inclosed sunporch, additional smaller bedroom, paneled knotty pine recreation room, toilet in basement. Beautiful flower gardens. Junior high school in course of construction in rear of property. Without using superlatives, this property is outstanding.

"The Timid Soul" by Webster Appears in Sunday's Post.

Bob Burns Says—

In some ways, acting in pictures is a whole lot like any other line of work. The bigger you get, the easier they make it for you. The big actor has his part written to fit him, but the little actor has'ta make himself fit the part.

One time I got a part in a picture and I told the director to give me the script so I could study my lines. The director says, "That won't be necessary—you're playing the part of the woman's husband and you never do get a chance to say anything."

Playgrounds All Over D. C. To Open Today

All Swimming Pools Included in Inaugural Program.

Washington playground facilities will swing into full action today with 107 units opening their gates for the summer months.

At the same time it was announced free lunches would be furnished to poor children.

The program calls for the operation of 18 major recreation centers, all under supervision of the District of Columbia recreation committee, co-ordinating agency for the Playground Department, the Board of Education, National Capital Parks, the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission and the Welfare and Recreational Association.

Eight swimming pools, which will attract more than their share of interest, will be ready for the big plunge. Pools serving white children will be open at Georgetown and Rosedale Playgrounds, Takoma Park, Eckington Recreation Center, Anacostia and East Potomac Parks. Pools for colored children will be open at the Francis and Banneker Recreation Centers.

The Georgetown and Rosedale swimming pools will be free at all times, with special days reserved for boys and girls. The Welfare and Recreational Association and the Loeffler Operating Co., the organizations which operate the six park pools are co-operating with the Playground Department in the conduct of free swimming periods for children from 9 a. m. to noon daily, except Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

Hobby shops will be open at the following junior high schools: Elliott, Macfarland, Jefferson, Powell and Shaw and will come under the general supervision of the Community Center Department of the Board of Education.

Bobo Not Stirred As 13th Precinct Opens on Friday

The Thirteenth Precinct, with 13 beats, officially will open at 8 this morning—Friday. But Capt. James E. Bobo is unconcerned.

"Thirteen is the luckiest number in the world,' he said yesterday, shortly after posing for photographers with a black cat.

The new precinct will share its station house with the Second Precinct. Recent changes there include general repairs and the construction of a new captain's room.

Meanwhile the sixty-sixth police class, with 32 new officers enrolled, will open this morning when Maj. Ernest W. Brown administers the oath of office to the rookies.

Baltimore Vice Report To Be Revealed Today

Baltimore, June 30 (AP).—A new report on vice and law enforcement conditions in Baltimore was ready tonight for submission tomorrow to Police Commissioner William P. Lawson and State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells.

The investigation and report followed a statement on law-enforcement conditions issued yesterday by the criminal justice commission, calling for Lawson's resignation and asserting the commissioner "has no real comprehension of the duties and responsibilities" of his office.

Priest Dies in Fall

FATHER W. A. MARCHANT, 51, recently named pastor of the Catholic Church of St. Dominick at Detroit, who fell to his death yesterday from a fifth-floor hotel room at New York. His death was listed as accidental.

Police Find Girl, 7, Weeping on Street; Feeds on Ice Cream

Dorothy Taylor, 7, of Davidson, Pa., paid a two-hour visit to the Ninth Precinct yesterday afternoon, and consumed the usual quota of ice cream and candy before she was located by her cousin, James Carlton, 320 Eighteenth street northeast.

She told police her name, but said she could not remember the name or address of her cousin, whom she is visiting.

Arlington Span Repairs.

Contracts for repairs to Arlington Memorial Bridge will be let in the near future, the office of National Capital Parks said yesterday. The last deficiency bill included $50,000 to install permanent control wiring, clean and paint steelwork, point up stonework near the Arlington Cemetery entrance and repair the macadam surface on the bascule span roadway.

Orchestra to Join in Festival Program

The Washington Civic Orchestra, conducted by Dr. Kurt Hetzel, playing the preliminary musical program, and the Players Club of Central Community Center, will collaborate Tuesday at 8 p. m. in presentation of the third summer festival in the National Sylvan Theater. The offering is the outdoor play, "Moonshine and Honeysuckle," directed by Miss Fowler.

Final rehearsals will be held tonight by both groups, since July 4 ceremonies will prohibit a rehearsal at that time. Tickets are on sale at the Willard, the Hotel Washington and the A. A. A. ticket bureau.

Two Bus Barn Bandits Sentenced

A sentence of from six months to three years was imposed on James W. Glynn by Justice Daniel O'Donoghue in United States Circuit Court for an attempted holdup on April 28 of a Capital Transit Co. bus barn in the 4600 block of Fourteenth street northwest.

At the same time Justice O'Donoghue sentenced Gordon Schofield, his companion, to from three to eight years for this and two housebreakings. Both men pleaded guilty.

Justice O'Donoghue gave Schofield from one to three years for the attempted holdup and two to five years for the two housebreaking charges, to which he pleaded guilty.

Artist Baronet, 85, Hikes Barefoot
